Local 800 agrees on 2-year contract

Local 800, representing Newton's Public Works Department employees, Saturday voted overwhelmingly to accept a wage increase of 8.06 per cent the first year and 10 per cent the second year of a two-year contract.

Workers had returned to work the previous Wednesday after a two-day walkout under penalty of contempt of court proceeding or fines, when the city obtained a temporary restraining order.

Strikes by county, state and municipal employees are illegal.

After the settlement, Louis Rufo, president of local 800, said, "I feel the men are not completely satisfied — they wanted a one-year contract."

In addition to the wage increase, workers will receive another $50 per year in longevity pay. Hospital and medical insurance will be converted to "master medical," the cost of which the city will pay 75 per cent the first year and 80 per cent the second year.

The contract, which took effect July 1, was being prepared for signature last week, according to negotiator Leon Kowal.

Negotiations for all other city unions, exclusive of the teachers' union, are proceeding, he said.

Historically, the other unions in the city have accepted increase negotiated by Local 800, although their contracts are not necessarily dependent on Local 800's contract.

Mayor Theodore Mann estimated that the increase for Local 800 alone will add $3.50 to $4 to the tax rate, with the overall increase "within the $14 to $20 range." The current tax rate is $134.60 per thousand dollars assessed value.

Ward 8 looks at housing needs

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
Staff Correspondent

The stark fact that there are between 3,000 to 5,000 households in need of low-moderate income housing was brought out at a recent Ward 8 Democratic Committee meeting by Gail Kharidia, housing analyst for the Planning Department.

The meeting was devoted to the concerns for low-moderate income housing and what Newton is doing and can do to meet these needs.

The meeting, chaired by Fay Cohen, was moderated by Hal Levy and Eugene Hampton and included the following panelists: Mrs. Kharidia, Judy Beram, chairman of the Newton Committee for Fair Housing and Equal Rights; Eliot Cohen, president of the Board of Aldermen and Alan Barkin, Ward 8 alderman.

Mrs. Kharidia explained that the reason the numbers fluctuated for householders in need of low-moderate income housing was due to the methodology used.

The moderate numbers were arrived at by a method used to determine a community's housing deprivation devised by the Harvard-MIT Joint Center of Urban Studies for a nationwide study, she said.

The maximum number was gotten using methodology employed by the Department of Community Affairs in a state-wide "controversial" housing study. A range of figures such as those supplied by the Planning Department is used to offer options to a community.

The minimum figure is borne out by the fact that in Newton there are 2,500-3,000 renter households eligible for subsidized housing and the same number of renter households with annual incomes under $10,000 and paying more than 25 per cent of their income for rent.

A moderate figure is arrived at by including the number of renter households living in physically inadequate or substandard units. In Newton there are approximately 900 such households.

In view of such need, the question arises where to build? According to Mrs. Kharidia "the amount of land available in Newton is limited and expensive" however, she did feel there was some land which could be utilized for housing.

Alderman Cohen pointed out there was competition for the available land from recreation and conservation needs and said there would have to be a "balance."

Judy Beram added she was "not against ecology" but strenuously objected to ecology being used as a screen.

Alderman Barkin asked, "I'd like to know where the land is . . . it's not available unless the zoning is changed."

Mrs. Kharidia commented that "zoning changes must be considered since much of the land is presently zoned for single family residences.

One site mentioned by Cohen was the old Infirmary site on Winchester Street where he felt "low-moderate income housing could go easily." Cohen also referred to the "empty schools" in Ward 8 which could then be filled.

However, according to Helen Heyn of the Conservation Commission a 1968 Board of Aldermen order set aside that land for recreational and park purposes and to divert park land to build homes would need "a two-thirds vote of the Massachusetts Legislature."

Redevelopment, Cohen felt, was the way to achieve Newton's needs, "by placing the burden on the city and bringing in private developers." He said "we have been bogged down with Lower Falls, which was a deplorable situation and ignored areas such as Newton Corner."

"It is incumbent upon us to redevelop the area . . . to provide new shops, parking and try and build up a tax base . . . to develop apartments." He added, "many people such as singles would like to be near transportation and shopping."

He saw redevelopment as the only way not to overburden the already burdened taxpayer. Speaking as an "overburdened taxpayer," one resident from Oak Hill Park states at the meeting that "the middle income man is being forced out of his home and is becoming a lower income citizen."

There was other concern voiced at the meeting that Newton was becoming a city for only the elderly and the affluent.

On the other hand, there was also fear that there was not enough provisions for the elderly, the citizens who Hal Levy said "are in their sixties, experiencing a drop in their incomes who have paid their dues."

Mrs. Kharidia also suggested that

Letitia Angelone

Miss Angelone rep. candidate

Leticia Angelone has announced her candidacy for state representative from the 19th Middlesex District.

Miss Angelone was born in Newton and educated in Newton public schools. She is a graduate of Burdett Business College and a veteran of World War II, having served 33 months in the Waves after enlisting in May, 1943. She has worked in the business world her entire adult life and is presently employed as a secretary with a leading retail store in Boston.

Miss Angelone is running in the November elections as an Independent. Since 1969, she has been closely affiliated with the Wallace Movement in Massachusetts and in that year was made secretary of the organization leading that movement, the Massachusetts American Independent Party Association, which is now known as the Wallace Association of Massachusetts and of which she is still secretary.

The candidate severed her connection with the nationwide American Party, created by Wallace originally, immediately after the Louisville Convention in August, 1972.

The candidate has been active during the last year in opposing "the urbanization of the lovely Garden City of Newton" and trying to block the "impoverishment and expropriation" of its population of owners of single and two-family houses in what has been called "the big land rush of the seventies."

"A great many of these homeowners are elderly people whose fixed incomes are proving inadequate tokeep them from going under in the flood of tax burdens resulting from the erection of high-density housing of every description, high rise apartment towers, condominium complexes, subsidized tenements, city row houses called "town houses," and the tremendous municipal construction necessary to service all these urban developments," she said.

Board unanimous on Highlands area

The Newton Highlands "neighborhood service area" was approved after some grumbling by some aldermen, by a 23-0 vote of the Board of Aldermen Monday night.

The new sub-unit of city government, the first in the city, was created under the city charter to give citizens a greater participatory role in matters affecting their communities.

In other action, the Board laid to rest the controversy surrounding parliamentary proceedings leading up to a vote last month granting permissive use to McMullin's gas station on Boylston Street, Newton Highlands. The permissive use now stands.

In another ruling on procedure, Board President Eliot Cohen again ruled that the hiring of former Recreation Department head John Penney was not a matter for Board approval.

New Recreation Commissioner Russell Halloran, who took office July 1, and the Recreation Commission, Cohen said, may hire Penney on a contractual basis as long as the money exists in the budget. However, if the money is not available for salary and must be transferred from another account, the department will have to seek Board approval of a transfer of funds.

Halloran said on Tuesday that Penney's new position, assistant recreation commissioner, will be discussed at next Monday's commission meeting. "No decision has been reached to my knowledge. There are many avenues being considered," Halloran said.

In a long, drawn-out presentation of the Land Use Committee report, in which nearly all items had been put on "second call" (meaning that debate was expected), the Board denied a petition to allow a nursery school at 44 Davis Ave., West Newton; denied a petition to build 10 attached townhouses on Florence Street; approved the use of a house at 866 Beacon St. by the Newton-Wellesley-Weston Multi-Service Center for an adolescent counseling center and medical clinic; extended the permissive use of Freeport, Inc., an alternative home for teenagers at 371 Commonwealth Ave.; and granted the permission for Cramer Electronics to build a parking lot in the flood plain zone at Wells Avenue (Newton-at-128).

A proposed new ordinance designed to improve control of drinking in public places was chartered (action postponed) by Ald. Terry Morris after Ald. Alan Barkin questioned terminology of the proposal, including seizure of open containers. Barkin asked whether the intent of the ordinance is really to make him get "a $2 permit to stand in front of my house with an open can of beer," and wondered where and how the police would store all the open cans of beer they might seize.

Not entirely serious, Barkin made his point that there were some flaws in the ordinance as presented.

An increase in fees for the use of the Newton incinerator voted at the last meeting, was reconsidered by a motion from Ald. Richard McGrath and returned to the Public Works Committee.

Also held in committees were a revision of the Design Review Committee ordinance, a request for a $370,000 bond issue for work on Newton North High School, a proposal for recycling glass, and a recommendation for banning billboards on MBTA property.

Thomas Concannon

Ald. Concannon D.A. candidate

Newton attorney Thomas B. Concannon Jr. has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the office of Middlesex County district attorney.

Concannon, a Newton alderman, has long been concerned with the lack of confidence in government and he feels that the current district attorney "has done nothing to improve the public's confidence

To make a short story long . . .

By TOM GRAVES
Of The Graphic Staff

A couple of years ago, a man in the Midwest was turned down as a police applicant because he was too short.

We were told that in subsequent weeks, he went through weird stretching exercises to attempt to become taller.

Joseph Frechette

Joseph Frechette of 46 Gardner St., Newton, faced the same problem four years ago. He flunked his Civil Service physical because he was 5'5" rather than 5'7".

Frechette explained that "I wasn't sure of my height when I took the exam. I didn't think I was that short."

Frechette accepted the ruling and went off to Wisconsin to go to college.

When Frechette returned from Wisconsin, he found that the civil service height requirement had been ruled unconstitutional. The Civil Service B list, which he had applied for, had been held up in court "close to two or three years." The list was finally being used to fill police vacancies by the time of his return.

The court ruling on the height requirement gave Frechette new hope of becoming a policeman. He went to the Civil Service office in September, 1973, and was told "I'd have to meet the height requirement of 1970." A Civil Service spokesman added that "any definitive answer would have to come from the attorney general's office."

So Frechette marched off to the attorney general's office for a definitive answer. There, he was told that there should be no reason for him having to take the Civil Service exam again or for him being off the B list.

Back at Civil Service Frechette was told again that he could not get onto the B list. Frechette surmised recently that Civil Service may have said this because it felt that letting him get on the list would be unfair to people who would have applied for the B list originally but did not because they knew they were too short.

Frechette noted "you've got to realize that the bureaucratic mond moves in mysterious ways."

Frechette pointed out that he was caught in a peculiar situation. Prior to the B list, the law said that a police applicant must be 5'7". After the B list, there was no height requirement. Frechette's quest to become a policeman was deterred by a Civil Service opinion that he fell under the old requirement.

Despite conflicting "definitive answers" and opinions, Frechette did not quit. He got in touch with Rep. Paul Guzzi, and Guzzi helped him draw up a bill for the legislature. The bill would allow Newton to hire Frechette as a police officer, not

Gelavitz "alive and well" and teaching

By SYLVIA ROSENFELD
Staff Writer

DEDHAM — Sophia Gelavitz is alive and well and living a highly productive life in West Newton. . . which should be cheering news for her many hundreds of friends in Dedham who knew her during the 40 years she taught mathematics at the Oakdale and Junior High Schools.

Now entering her thirteenth year of retirement, the lively 79-year-old ex-teacher is still hard at work–only now her subject is crafts with natural materials rather than mathematics.

"For the past five years I've taught crafts at the Audubon Nature Camp in Norfolk," the Boston native says. "This summer I'll be back with them five days a week from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m."

Working full-time hardly phases the septugenarian whose immense energy has led her to teach crafts at the West Newton Public Library this spring while still finding time to whittle animals and birds in her basement workshop.

"I sell them by custom order," she says. I tried selling through shops once but it was just too much trouble. Each piece takes a good deal of time and I can't produce them on a mass scale."

Pointing to a sculptured squirrel, she notes that the piece was not for sale because while she was sanding it one of the front legs broke and had to be glued together.

"I finally figured out that if I completed the entire piece before carving out the front legs I could manage to get it done without having any problems," she laughs. "But it took me a while before I worked that out."

Always a lover of the outdoors, Sophia has been at the forefront of the movement towards outdoor education.

"One of the things I used to do with my students was to take them outside and have them learn their geometry by measuring the height of the flagpole by its shadow," she recalls. "I always liked being outside myself and they liked it, too."

Another tradition of hers was her annual outing with her students.

"We'd pack up food, put on our dungarees and go off into the country." she says. "My, what good times we had!"

Some of her students will also remember her as a Girl Scout leader whose enthusiasm for scouting led her to spend many summers as a counselor at various camps in this area and New York.

"I worked away at camp every summer until five years ago when I decided to remain at home and work at the Audubon camp," she goes on. "My sister, with whom I live, doesn't have a car and it would be hard for her to have me away all summer now that we are both getting older."

Sophia Gelavitz — Hard at work in West Newton.

Sophia's expertise in crafts is reflected throughout her house where her handmade tables, intricately-carved wooden boxes, tooled leather bookends and stained glass figurines abound.

More recently, she has taken courses in silversmithing at the DeCordova Museum in Lincoln and her bracelet and ring attest to her competence in making jewelry.

Her reputation as an expert in crafts has led to her teaching professionals how to create objects from natural materials. Most recently she led a workshop in her specialty at the national convention of the American Camping Association when it was held in Boston in April.

Never at a loss for things to do, she sees life as endlessly full of possibilities and opportunities.

"You know," she says, "I can't take credit for the fact that I have been lucky enough to enjoy good health for so many years. But I can take credit for having done a great many things that I think have been interesting and important. Especially teaching."

"I must admit that mathematics was always my worst subject when I was a student," she smiles. "I think being poor at it gave me an insight into children's minds when they were struggling with it. And I got better and better at teaching it because of that!"

Congressman Drinan opened his Auburndale headquarters Sunday.

Candidates

(Editor's note: Beginning this week, the Newton Graphic will be presenting information on candidates for election in the fall in this format. The candidates column will be open to all those seeking office, local or statewide.)

Irving Fishman

The state legislature's Committee on Urban Affairs has given a favorable report to State Senator Irving Fishman's bill on condominium conversions.

Fishman described his bill as "a home rule petition from Newton through which the state would grant the Board of Aldermen the power to control condominium conversions."

No person would be allowed to convert to a condominium an apartment, garden apartment or other multi-family dwelling of three or more units which had previously been granted a special permit to build without obtaining an additional permit to convert.

Jack Backman

State Senator Jack H. Backman has been appointed to serve as a senate member of the Special Commission on Supplemental Security income, created as part of his guaranteed income bill for senior citizens that was passed in 1973.

Under the new state law for the aged, blind and disabled received an increase in benefits through the federal Supplemental Security Income (SSI). This commission, Backman said, will "watch the federal implementation carefully."

"I view this commission as a monitoring tool," he said.

Lois Pines

State Rep. Lois Pines this week decried the "audacity of Boston Edison to submit rates for municipal street lighting which encourages the wasting of energy."

Mrs. Pines has asked the DUP to deny the rate hike request.

Under the present rate structure, cities and towns can convert incandescent street lights to the more efficient mercury lights after 15 years without charge. Under Boston Edison's proposal, the replacements could not be made for 25 years.

Rep. Pines pointed out that Newton, in the process of converting its candescent lamps to mercury, would be hard hit with a change of the rate structure.

Thomas Concannon

Thomas Concannon, candidate for Middlesex County district attorney, this week accused his opponent, John Droney, of "engaging in old style machine politics in an attempt to deprive me of my right to run for public office."

Concannon's nomination papers were challenged by a Lowell woman who charges that the signatures are not those of registered voters and that the nomination papers do not contain 1,000 valid and genuine signatures of registered voters.

Concannon termed the charges "ridiculous."

"Ninety per cent of the signatures were collected by people I know will and I know they are valid," he said. "More than 1,300 have been certified by the election commissioners."

Jon Rotenberg

State Rep. Jon Rotenberg has announced that he will run as an independent in the race to unseat Congressman Robert F. Drinan.

Rotenberg made the announcement Monday after filing nomination papers containing about 5,000 certified signatures, 2,000 more than he needs.

Recreation notes

Playground programs underway

PLAYGROUNDS OPEN

The 27 playgrounds under the jurisdiction of the Newton Recreation Department opened an eight-week summer program Monday, and will have supervised activities through August 23.

The playgrounds will be open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. until noon and from 1 - 4 p.m., with the following exceptions: Newton Centre, Auburndale and Burr Park, whose hours will be 9 a.m. to dusk seven days a week; Franklin School, the regular daytime hours plus 6-9 p.m. Monday through Thursday; and the Hawthorn Playground, which will be open from 9 a.m. to noon, 1 - 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. to dusk Monday through Saturday.

SWIMMING AREAS

Crystal Lake is open from 9 a.m. to dusk Monday through Saturday and 1 p.m. to dusk on Sunday during the summer.

Gath pool will have swim classes and swim team practice from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and general swimming from 1 to 5 p.m. There will be family swimming from 7 - 7 p.m., and adult swimming from 7 p.m. until dusk.

The North High Pool has classes from 2:15 - 4:15 p.m.; swim team practice from 4:15 - 6 p.m.; adult classes from 7 - 8 p.m.; and general swimming from 8 - 10 p.m., Monday through Thursday. Friday, scuba classes are conducted from 6 - 10 p.m.

BOATING CLASSES

Boating classes are being conducted at Crystal Lake. The sailing classes are filled, but there are a few vacancies in the canoeing classes.

An additional sailing class will be held from Aug. 12 to Aug. 30. There will be three sessions, 9 - 11 a.m.; 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.; and 2 - 4 p.m. Each class is limited to 14, so there are 42 openings. To register, people should see Patty Madfis at Crystal Lake on July 8.

BOAT RENTALS

Boat rentals are available at Crystal Lake. The seasonal fee is $1 for adults and 50 cents for children. The program, conducted on weekends, is open to those nine years of age and up. Those participating in the program must take tests for canoeing and boating. These include a 150-yard swim, 15 yards underwater, and treading water for five minutes with clothes on.

Tests for sailing are the same. In addition, the participants must demonstrate sailing skills to the satisfaction of the dockmaster.

SWIM CLASS OPENINGS

There are still some openings in the third swim class section at the North High Pool, to be held from 2 to 4:15 p.m. These are in beginner 2, intermediate and advanced beginner classes, and adult classes held Tuesday ND Wednesday nights.

Food stamps available

The federal food-stamp program was expanded this week to include Newton and all other communities in the state.

The program is available to welfare recipients and low-income, nonwelfare households.

Nonwelfare recipients must submit a lengthy affidavit to the State Department of Public Welfare for certification. Applications are available at the Brookline office (serving Newton), 320 Washington St., Brookline.

A representative of the Welfare Department is available with applications at the Newton Department of Human Resources, City Hall, every Tuesday and Thursday between 9 a.m. and noon.

After certification, participants in the food-stamp program will receive an authorization-to-purchase card detailing the amount of stamps they may buy and how many beyond cash value they will receive.

According to the Welfare Department, "all the big (food) stores" in Newton will participate in the stamp program, but welfare officials did not have a list of large stores, nor bdid they know which, if any, small independent stores will participate.

The department has listed the following as potential recipients: low-wage earners, unemployed persons, part-time workers, Social Security recipients, families with high deductible expenses, and welfare recipients on Aid to Families with Dependent Children and on general relief.

A family of four whose adjusted net income (gross income less taxes and deductible expenses) is between $330 and $360, for example, would be entitled to buy $142 worth of stamps for $95. Stamps may be used only to buy food.

So far, the only location at which stamps may be bought in Newton is the Newton Corner branch of the Newton-Waltham Bank, 300 Washington St., Newton residents may also purchase stamps in Needham, Waltham, and other communities.

The Welfare Department is in the process of negotiating with other banks to provide more outlets for stamp purchase.

Taxi Association wants fare hike

The Newton Taxi Association at a July 11 public hearing will try to convince the Consumer Affiars & Licenses Committee of the Board of Aldermen and any members of the public who are interested that the taxi business needs another fare increase.

Requested rates are $1 for the first mile, 20 cents for each additional one-fifth of a mile, and 15 cents per minute of waiting time.

Present rates are $1 for the first mile, 10 cents for each additional one-seventh of a mile, and 10 cents per minute waiting time.

The requested rate change for distance would be a 43 per cent increase, and would represent a charge of $1 per mile.

Waltham's rate is 50 cents for the first one-seventh of a mile and 10 cents per additional one-seventh. Brookline cabs charge 50 cents for the first one-sixth of a mile and 10 cents for each additional sixth of a mile.

Waltham's rate is thus $1.10 per mile (a recently established increase) and Brookline's is $1 per mile, the difference from Newton being that a short ride in Newton (anything up to one mile) will cost a minimum of $1.

At a recent committee meeting, in response to concern expressed by some aldermen about the effect of a fare increase on Newton's elderly and poor, Dick Johnson of Yellow Cab said, "The poor don't ride cabs frequently—not more than twice a week to and from the store."

Most taxi musiness, he said, is the "expense-accounters from the hotels, the elderly that are well off, and businesses that use cabs to deliver packages."

Dewey Mollomo, an officer of the taxi association and president of Veterans Cab, justified the request for an increase on the basis of a nearly 50 per cent hike in gasoline since last September, with concomitant increases in other operating costs.

Mollomo also pointed to the $300 increase in the cost of vehicles, and expects insurance rates to start climbing again soon.

Drivers, who receive 40 per cent of the fares collected, have received only "a 4 per cent increase in pay in the last three years," Mollomo said.

"There won't be much left of the taxi industry in Newton in a year if we don't get the increase," Mollomo predicted. "We can't operate on deficit spending."

The taxi association is also requesting that the city limit the number of medallions (licenses) issued to one per 1,000 inhabitants.

Alice Wilson, president of the association, explained that since transfer of the medallions is not permitted here, they do not increase in value except to the holder of the medallion as a measure of security. Limiting the number issued to the 90 or 92 in existence now, she said, will at least guarantee that a cab company's business will not be decreased by the licensing of more cabls.

At the public hearing at City Hall next week, the cab owners are expected to present detailed profit-and-loss statements and other statistics. A full report on an incident involving a physical assault by a cabdriver is also expected.

SCUBA CLASSES

The last date for registering for the Scuba Classes is at 5 p.m. on July 15. Registration is being held at the North High Pool where the classes are being held Friday nights from 6 to 10 p.m. for a six week session.

TOT PROGRAM

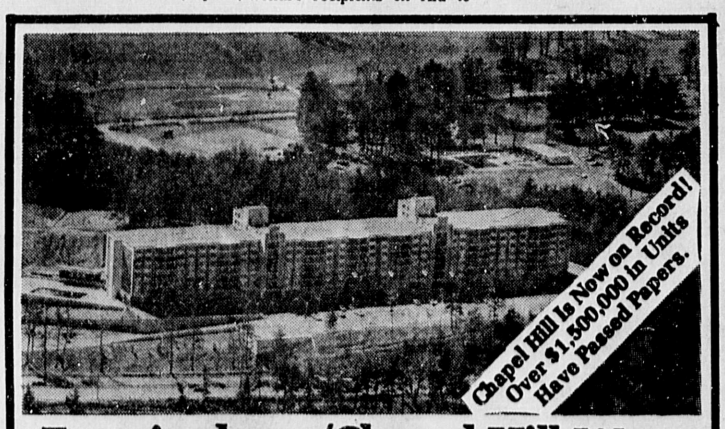

There are still some openings in the Tot Program. Interested parents may register their children at the North High Pool from 2 to 5 p.m. and 6 to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday.

SPECIAL DAY CAMPS

The two special day camps conducted by the Newton Recreation Department have opened their seven-week program. The camps, conducted at the Bowen School and the Mason-Rice School, run from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

WOMEN'S CITY BASKETBALL

The Women's City Basketball League continues play at Cabot Park Tuesdays and Thursdays. The standings as of June 25 are: Fox Drug and Murphies tied for first place with 2 wins and no losses. The Astor is 2-1; Magoos, 1-0; Regans, 0-2 and Fats, 0-3.

Framingham/Chapel Hill West
A Magnificent Condominium

These huge 1, 2 and 3-bedroom condominium homes are priced from $33,500 to $63,500 and range in size from 973 to 1767 square feet (our 2's and 3's are as large as many homes). Not only can we arrange financing but we are making a two-year repurchase guarantee. The units come carpeted and have the best in modern appliances; the ranges and heating system are gas-operated. The tax rate is most advantageous and the common charges are reasonable. Chapel Hill West features a swimming pool, tennis courts, function and game rooms . . . all of this within minutes of the Mass. Pike and the fabulous shopping centers in Framingham and Natick. Express bus service to Boston from our door.

To get to Chapel Hill, take the Mass. Pike to Exit 12 and go east on Rte. 9 for a half mile. Our office is open seven days from 10 to 6. Evenings by appointment. Call 879-8242.

City Planning grills recreation commissioners

The Recreation Commission is one of the few agencies in city government without an aldermanic committee to act as liaison between it and the Board of Aldermen.

Last week, the City Planning Committee, which occasionally assumes the liaison role with the Recreation Department and Commission, found out more from two commissioners than it has learned about recreation in a long time.

For example, members of the committee heard Nelson Baker, a 1974 appointee to the commission, say, "We are bombarded by the public about tennis.

Lynne Arthur, another new appointee, complained that Newton needs more tennis courts, and more lighting for those that exist so that they could be more fully utilized.

A strong indictment of Recreation Department policy in allocating field time to Little League baseball teams was made by several aldermen, and by Nancy Bartley of the Newton Women's Twilight League.

Ms. Bartley said that Little League has been given a blanket permit, entitling Little League teams to preempt a field that may be occupied by other children playing ball.

And for years, Ms. Bartley said, when women's teams or after-school groups have applied for permits, they have been given "what's left after Little League gets first choice."

The Chairman of the City Planning Committee, Ald. David Jackson, said, "I think Little League is the worst thing that has happened to boys and to baseball."

The committee turned from baseball with a resolution in the works to ask the Recreation Commission to "re-examine the use of fields" and check into the legality of existing commercial signs on Recreation Department property.

Other topics discussed were the use of minibikes, general Recreation Department maintenance, and the distribution of picnic tables.

Ald. Susan Schur was all for abolishing the Saturday minibike program at Winchester Street, because "the existence of tracks encourages their purchase, and the other six days they're used where they shouldn't be." Jackson suggested that the Recreation Department should "formulate a policy."

The fact that nobody seems to know where there are picnic tables channeled the meeting into a brief discussion of plans for the "development" of Cold Spring Playground in Newton Highlands.

From an ambitious plan to include a golf course, skating rink and other features, the plan has been modified down to an unknown quantity — at least unknown to the two Recreation Commissioners present at the meeting.

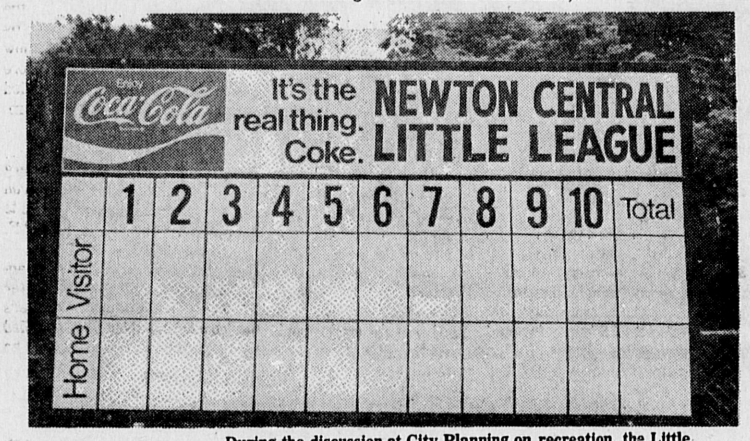

Jackson commented that if anything is to be done with Cold Spring, the Recreation Commission "should be working on it now." The capital improvement program has scheduled a total of $600,000 to be spent on Cold Spring during 1977 and 1978, after a $30,000 study to be done in 1976.

The Recreation Commission had been asked to attend the meeting to discuss a year-old request of the committee that the commission hold meetings in different wards throughout the city to become better informed about what citizens want in recreation facilities and programs.

Other plans kept six other members from attending.

Recreation Commissioner Lynne Arthur, a 1974 appointee to the commission, was enthusiastic about the idea, and said she had not understood that the commission should hold meetings all over the city.

Nelson Baker, another new commissioner, said the commission had discussed changing the Recreation Commission's regular meeting place to City Hall, but had decided against a move until the commission moves permanently into City Hall (July of 1975 at the earliest, when the revaluation firm vacates an office there).

Legal? During the discussion at City Planning on recreation, the Little League scoreboard at Cabot Park, advertising Coke, was mentioned. Now the question facing the Law Department is whether or not a "commercial sign" can be placed on city owned land. (Lupo photo)

NHA signs Beaconwood housing deal

With no trumpets heralding the occasion, the Newton Housing Authority and the Department of Community Affairs signed the contract at 10:30 a.m. on July 2 which will result in the first low income family units ever built in Newton.

The 20 duplexes will be built on Beaconwood Road on property formerly owned by the Ciccone Brothers and taken by the NHA by eminent domain.

The total cost of the project is estimated at $1,275,000 or $64,750 per unit. The DCA had initially balked at allowing the NHA to build because of the high per unit cost. However, Mayor Theodore D. Mann, NHA chairman James Miller and former NHA chairman Anthony Medaglia prevailed upon Governor Sargent to intervene.

This intervention resulted in the DCA agreeing to pay the land acquisition costs which were estimated at $87,000 and the city of Newton paying up to $150,000 for site development.

The units will include 15 three bedroom duplexes and five four bedroom units. Each dwelling will have one and a half bathrooms and be built on 10,000 square feet per structure. There will be two handicapped units.

Following the signing of the contract with the Concrete Construction Company of Everett, groundbreaking will be scheduled within two weeks. The time lapse is so the DCA can return the executed contracts to the NHA and to give the former landowners an eight day period in which to remove everything, except structures, from the land.

Helen Doona to sue city

Helen M. Doona, fired from her job as an assistant city solicitor in Newton's Law Department because she is a candidate for state representative, plans a half-million dollar suit against the city.

Mrs. Doona and her lawyer, Francis Glynn, announced at a press conference that she will file the suit "against the mayor and the City of Newton for depriving my children and me of my right to earn a livelihood, simply because I am a woman, a mother, a widow, and a candidate for public office."

Mrs. Doona had been employed by the city for about three years before her dismissal.

City Solicitor Howard Levine has said that pursuring a candidacy for elected office while employed by the Law Department would constitute a conflict of interest under state law, besides being contrary to Law Department policy of keeping politics out of the office.

Police report

Police hunt rape suspect

A 31-year-old escapee from Bridgewater State Prison was reportedly being sought by police on Tuesday in connection with an alleged rape of a Waban woman Monday.

According to Newton Police, William Langton of Jamaica Plain is a suspect in the rape case. Langton was reportedly serving a 20-year sentence when he escaped from Bridgewater last Friday.

Police received a 911 call at 2:35 p.m. Monday reporting an alleged rape and armed robbery in a wooded area behind the old Filene's parking lot in Chestnut Hill.

A 20-year-old Waban woman was reportedly walking on MDC land with two companions when they were accosted by a man. The man reportedly pulled a knife and the woman's two companions were bound. The man then allegedly took the woman a short distance away where the rape was reportedly committed.

The man reportedly took money from the woman and her companions. He also allegedly demanded the keys to the woman's car and then left.

MDC Police are nvestigating the incident with the assistance of Newton Police.

Warrants have reportedly been issued in Brighton District Court for Langton's arrest on charges of rape, kidnap, and other violations.

A burglary at Fandango, 97 Union St., Newton Centre last weekend reportedly ntted $40,000 worth of jewelry.

Christopher Leonard called Newton Police at 3:59 p.m. on Sunday to report the theft. Entrance to the store was reportedly gained by removing a lock from a basement level front door. The break reportedly occurred between 6 p.m. Saturday and the time of the call.

According to police, Leonard said that 90 to 95 per cent of the store's stock was taken. This included sterling and gold jewelery, and assorted silver and jade rings.

Newton Police arrested two men early Monday morning and chrged them with attempted breaking and entering in the nighttime, and possession of burglarious tools.

Arrested at 1:30 a.m. were Mark Gruchy, 1326 Walnut St., Newton Highlands, age 18, and Doree Ann Finkbeiner, 234 Kendrick St., Needham, age 17 According to police, they were apprehended on Needham Street.

An unarmed robbery reportedly took place at the Newton Highlands MBTA station Sunday night.

The victim told police that as he was ascending stairs at the station, he was grabbed from behind around the neck. The assailant allegedly tore a medic alert warning device from around the victim's neck and took the victim's house key.

A breaking and entering at 30 Gray Birch Terrace was reported to police on Monday. Entrance was reportedly gained either through an unlocked side door or an open window.

Dental equipment, books, a color television, stereo components, clothing, and an air conditioner were reportedly taken.

A breaking and entering at 139 Hancock St., Auburndale, was also reported on Monday. According to police, there were no signs of forced entry. Reported missing were a television, a camera, lenses, and an undetermined amount of cash and coins.

A break reportedly occurred at 65 River St., West Newton early Monday morning, but police said tha a dog in the house apparently chased the intruder out. A neighbor saw a man running from the house. A screen window was pushed in at the house and the living room was ransacked.

Soll selected for internship program

David Soll of Newton, a second-year student at Mass. College of Optometry (NCO), is one of five student clinicians selected to serve in an internship program in Israel this summer.

Soll and the other students will serve in Israeli eye-care clinics under the supervision and guidance of qualified optometrists and ophthalmologists. They will provide extra assistance at Hadassah Medical Center or Shaare Zedek Hospital during the summer months.

A grant from Maurice H. Saval, a member of the MCO board of trustees and a well-known philanthropist who is a leading member of the Boston business community, provided funding for the project, to be known as the Saval Institute for Optometric Study and Service in Israel. Objectives of the Saval Institute are twofold: to sefve as an intensified clinical experience together with educational enrichment and to offer increased service in vision care.

The college has clinical affiliations throughout the Boston area, in Maine through a rural outreach program, and in Georgia, in addition to its own general and specialty clinics. The Saval grant permits the first extension of clinical internship abroad. Students will receive air travel expenses and a grant toward living expenses. Further benefits occur after successful completion of the program through tuition grants at the college.

Students were chosen by a committee of MCO faculty chaired by Dr. Charles Mullen, director of clinics. Dr. William R. Baldwin, MCO president, said the students are "very able representatives of our student body."

Soll assisted in the development of plans for the Institute, working with Drl Jack Daubs, a member of the MCO faculty.

Public not interested in capital improvements

By ELIZABETH McKINNON
Of the Graphic Staff

A public hearing was held last week on the 1975-80 capital improvement program. Twenty-two people, not one a member of the "public" that did not represent the press or an organized group, attended.

The public hearing was perfunctorily but properly advertised in at least two newspapers in the city.

Why was this opportunity to express an opinion on the expenditure of $16 million virtually ignored?

Partially because there are probably not many more than 50 people in the city that understand the capital improvement program, its process and purpose.

The city has done little either through education of the public so that people will understand how to achieve input at the proper time or through publicizing the import of the public hearing.

The capital improvemnt program is billed as a creation of the mayor and is required by the city charter. The charter also establishes date of publication, date of public hearing and a deadline by which the CIP must be adopted — as is or amended — by the Board of Aldermen.

This year everything on the timetable is late, so instead of adoption by the Board of Aldermen by June 20, the date will more likely be some time in the fall.

In theory, the City Planning Committee will hear the pleas for expenditures from various groups, take them under consideration, and report its recommendations to the Board of Aldermen for adoption.

By its adoption of the CIP, the Board would be indicating its wishes both to the mayor, who soon afterward would be reviewing budget requests with his department heads, and to the department heads who are making up their segments of the budget.

Even though there is nothing binding upon the city in the CIP, the hope and intent of the charter revision that made adoption by the Board of Aldermen compulsory were to give the mayor a clear message that 24 aldermen, representing the whole city, are in favor or opposed to certain items planned over the next five years.

During the summer, then, appears to be the only time in which the public can have any input into the CIP for the next fiscal year starting almost a year from now, except for some large items that are to be bonded and therefore have not already been disposed of in the 1974-75 budget approved last March.

Planned topics for discussion at scheduled City Planning Committee meetings are frequently shuffled around, and the committee itself suffers from poor attendance by its own members, not to mention the public. Rarely does an alderman who is not a member attend.

So if the public hearing each year will be too late to affect the immediately upcoming fiscal-year CIP, and if the public must depend on the City Planning Committee meetings on the CIP as vehicle for getting into a CIP, the CIP will continue to reflect only the thoughts of the mayor, the Planning Department and a few well-organized groups.

Arts show to be at Marriott

The Americana Arts Show, an ongoing summer festival of arts and crafts exhibits, has been st for the Marriot Motor Inn, Route 30, Auburndale, July 4-7; 20-21; Aug. 3-4; 17-18, 31; and Sept. 1-2, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Political polls

A very small percentage of the people in Massachusetts don't know who Francis W. Sargent is.

An even lesser number can tell you who Carroll Sheehan is.

Almost everyone in the Commonwealth has learned during the past six years that Francis Sargent is the Governor although, incredible as it may seem, a few people have never heard of Francis W. Sargent.

It is a shattering experience for a man holding a high public office such as that of Mayor of Boston to go to a city such as New Bedford or Pittsfield or Lowell and learn that some people there don't know who he is, what office he holds, or anything about him.

So it came as no shock to our pollster, on conducting a survey, that most people in Massachusetts don't know who Carroll Sheehan is and are unaware that he is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor.

Only the politically-minded knew that Sheehan served as State Commissioner of Commerce in the state government and is now challenging Governor Sargent in the Republican primary.

Approximately half of those questioned thought Carroll Sheehan is a woman. "She's a well known singer," one young woman replied when asked if she knew who Carroll Sheehan is.

So it isn't surprising that Carroll Sheehan has been challenging Governor Sargent to a debate and that Sarge is not interested in doing anything to make Sheehan better known by providing a forum in which he could get desperately needed exposure.

Sarge's big problem, of course, is the November election when he will be challenged either by former State Representative Michael Dukakis or Attorney General Robert H. Quinn. A recent survey by a highly respected professional polling organization showed Quinn leading Dukakis by a six per cent margin in their head-to within the Democratic party.

Everything indicates that Governor Sargent will roll to an easy win over Mr. Sheehan in the Republican primary on Sept. 10 but that his troubles will come eight weeks later.

Incidentally, it comes as a startling surprise recently to learn that it was Richard Nixon's idea to debate John F. Kennedy in the 1960 Presidential campaign and that he overruled his advisers when he accepted Kennedy's challenge to a debate.

Nixon was supremely confident of his ability to overwhelm John Kennedy in a debate. His over-confidence cost him the election.

Then a vice president and better known than JFK, Nixon was clearly in the lead before the first debate. He lost that lead in one debate.

Nixon was so confident he went to the debate at the end of a busy day. During that first historic debate he appeared as if he were tired, and he looked as if he needed a shave.

John Kennedy, on the other hand, planned nothing else for that day. He knew his election or defeat might hinge on that debate. He prepared for some of the questions which might arise, rested and got a slight tan from a sun lamp. He shaved carefully just before the debate.

JFK came across better than did Nixon. He created the impression that he was capable of serving as President. Nixon lost his advantage in one debate from which he should have remained aloof. We had been told that he was boxed in and could not avoid the debate. That apparently was not the case. What evidently led him down the road to political defeat was his own over-confidence.

'Garden City' — where the weeds are taller than the bushes

By CYNTHIA BLACK

Last summer, when I spent a day with each of Newton's candidates for mayor, one of the things both of them independently pointed out on our respective travels through the city was the problem of maintenance of city owned green areas and parking lots.

Certainly, this has to be one of the haphazardly done tasks in Newton, the fabled "Garden City." The fault does not lie with the people who do the actual work, rather it is a long standing area of very poor planning.

Last Thursday, I spoke to Newton Centre merchant George Levy of Chandler-Levy Hardware.

"Come down here and look at Newton Centre Square," he said. "The weeds are higher than the bushes."

And indeed they were.

Levy said he had spoken to the mayor about this, and granted, city workers arrived promptly Friday and cleaned up the entire area, removing a dense growth of weeds and collection of trash from in and around the bushes, cutting the grass and whisking away the weeds that were taller than the bushes.

However, constant and continuous demands for routine maintenance to the city's chief executive should not be necessary.

It is time right now for the city to take a serious look at what Mayor Mann acknowledged a year ago was a problem.

Newton Centre Square is not the only place where maintenance leaves a lot to be desired. This is a city-wide problem and I'm sure all of you can call to mind those little spots all over the "Garden City" where the grass is four feet high.

Newton Centre Square merchants have been pressing for improvements for a long time.

Mr. Levy explained to me that last year, in desperation, they hired their own gardener and he maintained the square area for them. This year, when making his complaint, he was asked why the merchants did not do the same thing again.

This, of course, is a completely frivolous response. Every business in this city is a taxpayer, and at a healthy rate at that, and they should not be expected to maintain city land because the city can't come up with a timetable for regular gardening.

Levy explained that the merchants' concern has been increased because they would like to collectively hire a landscaper to plant some flowering bushes and trees and in general upgrade the area. Merchants now, he said, are worried that even if they foot the bill for beautification, they'll still lose out because of the maintenance problem.

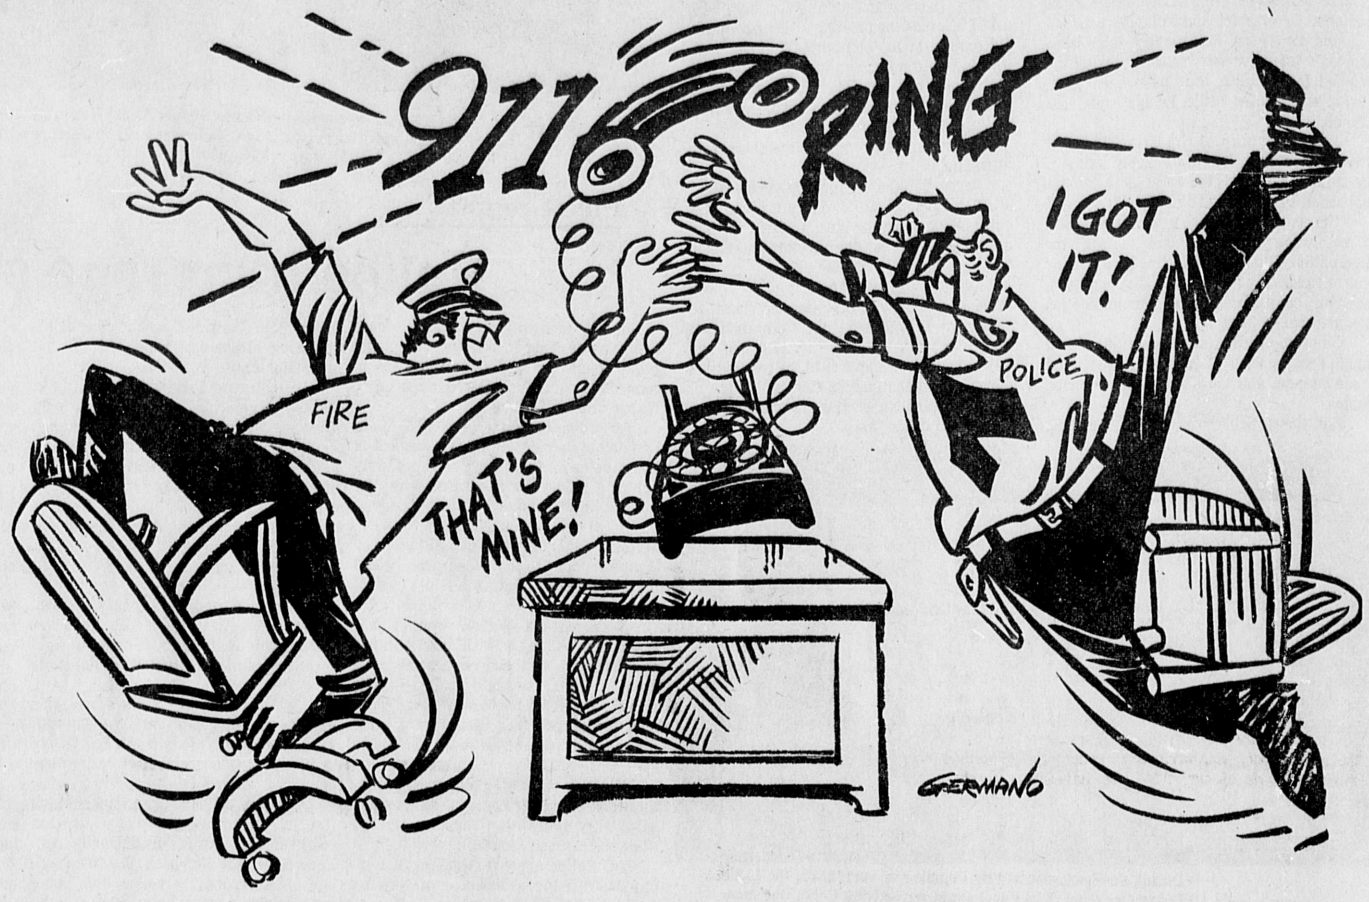

Levy also said that former Newton Director of Public Works Richard Dudman had been at work on this timetable problem before he left.

It is one thing to spring into action when there is a complaint. However, if there was a plan, a routine, maybe there would not be any need to complain.

Perhaps what is needed at this time as a motivating force are a few pictures of some of the other city green spaces where the weeds are taller than the bushes.

Or should we just wait a month and then go back and take another picture of Newton Centre Square?

Young Law-Maker Maps Fight Against Drinan

Handsome, hard-working, youthful State Representative Jon Rotenberg of Brookline is giving up his seat in the Massachusetts House of Representatives on a gamble that he can defeat Congressman Robert F. Drinan of Newton in the Democratic primary next Sept. 10.

Toppling a sitting Congressman in his own party primary is one of the most difficult of political undertakings although Father Drinan did exactly that in unseating the late Congressman Philip J. Philbin and paving the way for his own election.

Rotenberg sat back and told in an interview why he believes he can do the same thing to Congressman Drinan that Drinan did to the late Congressman Philbin.

He referred to Father Drinan as "A one-issue Congressman," that issue being the impeachment of President Nixon.

The Brookline legislator, known on Beacon Hill as a hard worker, who goes to work when he sees a problem and usually gets something done about it, expressed the conviction that Father Drinan has not been an effective Congressman and in almost four years has done little or nothing for his district and its people.

"I try to work to solve the problems of my district through legislation and not just talk," Rotenberg declared. "I think this is what a Congressman should do in Washington.

"The Fourth Congressional District needs a Congressman who will work to introduce and promote legislation of benefit to the citizens of his district," he continued.

"A Congressman in either political party can sponsor bills to aid his district," Rotenberg asserted. "So far as I know, Congressman Drinan has neither written nor initiated even one piece of legislation which has been enacted into law.

"A Congressman should help his district by assisting the people with their problems of a federal nature, by working to curb inflation, by stopping discriminatory practises such as were reflected in the allocation of gasoline to Massachusetts, by bringing new industries into the state and protecting those we already have," Representative Rotenberg stated. "Congressman Drinan has not done that."

The district, in which Congressman Drinan and Representative Rotenberg will wage what looms as an interesting fight for Democratic votes, stretches from Brookline and Newton out to Fitchburg, Gardner and Leominster. It takes in 20 cities and towns, among them Waltham and Framingham on the eastern end.

Congressman Drinan, whom Representative Rotenberg is trying to unseat, is a Jesuit priest and a controversial political figure. He was one of the leaders in the Presidential Primary campaign waged in Massachusetts two years ago for Senator George McGovern and went to the Democratic national convention in Miami as a McGovern delegate.

Father Drinan is a member of the House Judiciary Committee which is considering the impeachment of President Nixon. There have been rumors that he may be called upon to disqualify himself from voting on the impeachment question because of the attacks he has levelled at Nixon.

Political analysts generally believe that Rotenberg faces an uphill fight against Father Drinan but that he might be able to bring down the Priest-Congressman if he can hold Drinan even in Brookline, Newton and Waltham and pick up anti-Drinan votes in the western end of the district where there is still resentment over the defeat of Philbin.

Rotenberg has a solid record of service and accomplishment for his district in the Legislature. He graduated with high honors (summa cum laude) from Ohio University where he majored in the fields of political science and inter-personal communications.

He worked in Washington as a legislative aide for Congressman Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr.., now the Congressional Majority Leader, following his graduation from college, so that he already is familiar with Capitol Hill.

Rotenberg seems to be an intensely serious young man, and this is reflected when he talks about his candidacy, his campaign against Congressman Drinan and his record in the House of Representatives.

"I believe I can defeat Drinan," he declares, and his listener is disposed to feel that Congressman Drinan faces a tough fight.

"The people only have one Congressman," Rotenberg asserts. "When they elect him, they have a right to expect him to represent them and their district, to fight their fights, to help their district by bringing industry into it and by seeing that it is not being discriminated against.

"Congressman Drinan has not done those things. He has been a one-issue Congressman. That is why I believe he can and will be defeated," said young Representative Rotenberg whose review of his own work on Beacon Hill was a long one.

Representative Rotenberg and Congressman Drinan have one thing in common. They both were first elected to public office in 1970.

Cong. Harrington's Position on Abortion

Congressman Michael J. Harrington of Beverly declares that on the "complex and delicate" question of abortion he believes he must separate his personal views from his responsibilities as a federal law-maker

While stressing that he does not condone abortions, Harrington said at the same time he opposes the adoption of an amendment to the U.S. Constitution which would make an abortion a criminal act.

"Several bills have been introduced in the national House of Representatives which would have the effect of over-turning the Supreme Court decision and would prohibit the practice of abortion," Congressman Harrington began his answer to a request for his views of abortion.

"Most of these bills, if not all, are in the form of proposed amendments to the U.S. Constitution, and all of the bills, to my knowledge, are pending before the House Judiciary Committee which, as you know is occupied with the impeachment inquiry," Harrington continued.

"Let me make it clear that I do not condone abortion, but I do not support proposed constitutional amendments to criminalize this practise," he explained.

"This is a complex and delicate question," Harrington said. "I believe I must separate my personal views from my responsibilities as a federal legislator.

"I do not believe that my religious or personal views in any way give me the right to use my Federal office for the purpose of legislating a code of moral values or to make criminal a practice which, in the last analysis, is a matter of individual conscience," the North Shore Congressman continued.

"The Supreme Court's controversial decision in no way compels anyone to have an abortion," Harrington pointed out. "It in no way restricts an individual's freedom of choice or freedom of conscience.

"A Constitutional Amendment to prohibit abortion, on the other hand, would gravely restrict the ability of an individual to act on the basis of conscience and choice. It would make the exercise of these freedoms—freedoms the highest court in the nation has determined to be inviolate—an offense punishable by a jail term,' he asserted.

"Regardless of one's ethical convictions pro or con, there is reason for all of us to be concerned at further incursions of 'big government' into the exercise of our private rights and freedoms," he said.

"When questions involving personal freedom and the basic structure of the Constitution are involved, quite frankly, I am inclined to side with those who argue that the Constitution should not be used as a means to impose a particular framework of moral values on the entire nation.

"Therefore, however much I may personally oppose the practice of abortion, It seems to me that a Constitutional Amendment should not be taken lightly or in haste.

"It should be used only when a clear demonstration of historical certainty, together with the manifest support of a clear and substantial majority of the population, combine to legitimize a need to alter the document which forms the framework of our government.

Thus, all things considered, I do not see the propriety of a Constitutional Amendment to prohibit abortion and do not support such proposed amendments," Congressman Harrington concluded.

Voice your opinion on recreation

To the Editor:

John Penney was removed as recreation commissioner of Newton and replaced by Russell Halloran whom I understand is highly qualified for the position.

Subsequently, Mayor Mann appointed John Penney as assistant recreation commissioner at $17,000 subject to approval of the Board of Aldermen.

On June 13, the Aldermanic Finance Committee defeated a motion for the $17,000 position. When it came before the full Board of Aldermen on June 18, it was voted 11-10 in favor of the position at $15,000 followed by a discussion.

Richard Bullwinkle (Ward 3) chartered the measure because: (1) It was unclear as to the legality of the measure and what the alderman actually were required to do and (2) It gave the electorate two weeks to voice their opinion.

I am questioning the propriety of an unneeded job.

Mr. Halloran assumes his position July 1. Let him assess the department and determine whether an Assistant Recreation Commissioner is needed. But the department has four recreation supervisors (Jim Murphy, senior recreation supervisor), two full time general recreation leaders, a senior citizen's recreation leader and a recreation leader (position presently unfilled).

Let's effectively utilize the capable staff we already have!

On July 2, the position of an assistant recreation commissioner will again be voted upon by the Board of Aldermen.

Voice your opposition to your Alderman now!

Remember, our taxes are going to increase between $14 and $20. The assistant commissioner's job is 10 percent of my property taxes. What about your property taxes?

Don't close any schools

To the Editor:

We are writing this letter to register our strongest objections to a rumored proposal to close a number of elementary schools in Newton with a view to having fewer and larger elementary schools.

Any gains in terms of economy of scale that may be achieved in concentrating more children of elementary school age in fewer and larger schools, are more than offset by the loss of important values to children and parents in eliminating the smaller neighborhood schools for these children.

The proximity of a neighborhood elementary school, in our case, the Angier School in Waban, was a major factor in our choosing to buy the house which has been our home for the past 15 years. To close the Angier School and other neighborhood schools is to frustrate one of the major expectations of those who have chosen to live in Newton.

What makes Newton a desirable city for families is the fact that it is made up of neighborhoods with local churches, schools and shops serving each of these neighborhoods as villages within the City.

In taking away the elementary schools from these neighborhoods, Newton would be moving in the direction of becoming merely another city with oversized elementary schools too impersonal for young children. The result will be to encourage parents to find another place to live which offers the values of neighborhood elementary schools.

Officer was 'terrific'

(Editor's note: Mrs. Jacobs sent a copy of the following letter to the Graphic and requested it be published. It is addressed to Newton Police Officer Arnold Storlazzi.)

Dear Officer Storlazzi:

We wish to thank you for your proficient and rapid service last night. When our daughter put her foot through the glass door, you arrived within minutes of our older daughter's call. Cheryl told us how you were so helpful to Lauryl, calming her, taking care of her wound and getting her to the Newton-Wellesley Hospital as quickly and as safely as possible.

This is not the first time that the Newton Police have been so wonderful and helpful to our family in an emergency situation.

We are indeed very fortunate to live in a city where the police are so conscientious and capable. We are also very pleased that our older daughter, who was in charge of the situation, knew that the Newton Police were only as far as a telephone call away and immediately contacted the Department.

Your help exemplified what we have been teaching our children since they were very little and that is that the police are hard-working dedicated professionals who do the best they can to serve the (often critical and non-receptive) public.

Again many, many thanks for your terrific help.

Firefighters 'efficient'

(Editor's note: This letter was sent to Fire Chief Frederick Perkins and a copy forwarded to the Graphic.)

Dear Chief Perkins:

Many many thanks for the outstanding response of you and your men to the fire at the Hamilton School.

The rapidity with which the men contained the fire and the manner in which they restored the building for immediate use are commendable.

As in the past, we are extremely pleased with the quality of service provided by the Newton Fire Department in time of emergency.

Stretching your milk dollar

By Norfolk County Extension Service

Although milk prices — like the price of everything else — have risen, milk is still a good buy. Nevertheless, there are ways to economize and still get the food values associated with milk.

One method is too buy fresh milk in as large a container as is practical for your situation. The larger the container, the less you pay per quart, as a rule. But of course, you can't save money if the milk spoils before you use it. So only you can determine whether or not the half-gallon, or gallon is practical for your home. Another alternative is buying milk in dried or evaporated forms instead of fresh. Milk in these forms cost less then fresh milk.

Evaporated milk is prepared by heating homogenized whole milk under a vacuum too remove half of its water, then sealing it in cans, and sterilizing it. When mixed with an equal amount of water, its nutritive value is about the same as whole milk. Unopened evaporated milk will keep for a few months without refrigeration. Be sure to refrigerate it after opening.

A mixture of water and evaporated milk makes a relatively inexpensive infant formula. Evaporated milk, with an equal amount of water added, may be used in place of fresh milk in recipes. It is also good in coffee or on hot ceral or poured over pudding or gelatin desserts, or whipped into a topping.

Instant nonfat dry milk is made by removing nearly all of the fat and water from pasteurized skim milk. It has about half the calories of whole milk and the same nutritive value as fresh skim milk. Normally, isntant nonfat dry milk comes with vitamins A and D added. Instant nonfat dry milk — when mixed with water — is a good substitute for fresh whole or skim milk as a beverage. And you'll save money even if you mix the reconstituted nonfat milk with an equal amount of whole milk.

Instant nonfat dry milk is also good for cooking. The powder may be sifted with dry ingredients for cakes and breads, stirred into flour for gravy or sauce, or mixed with cornstarch and sugar for pudding. Add water to make up the required amount of liquid. Another asset of nonfat dry milk is thut it needs no refrigeration and can be stored for several months in a cool dry place. After it is reconstituted, however, it should be refrigerated and handle like fresh milk.

When buying instant nonfat dry milk, look for the U.S. Extra Grade shield on the label. This shield means that the milk was manufactured under the continuous inspection of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, meets high quality requirements, and was produced under strict sanitary conditions. To receive the "U.S. Extra Grade" designation, instant non-fat dry milk must have a sweet and pleasing flavor and a natural color. It must also dissolve immediately when mixed with water.

The following recipe uses whipped evaporated milk to create an elegant spring salad:

CUCUMBER MOUSSE

¾ cup evaporated milk
1 cucumber, peeled and shredded
¼ cup Blue cheese, crumbled
1 package lime-flavored gelatin
½ cup water, boiling
1 teaspoon onion, grated
¼ teaspoon salt

Chill milk in freezer compartment of refrigerator until fine ice crystals form around edges. Also chill bowl and beaters in refrigeratoor. Beat cucumber to a pulp, add Blue cheese, and then set aside. Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add onion, salt and cucumber mixture. Chill until slightly jelled. Whip milk untill stiff peaks form; then fold in gelatin mixture. Pour into 1 quart salad mold which has been rinsed in cold water. Chill until set.

withstanding the height requirement, and would put him on the Civil Service list.

With Guzzi's help, Frechette's bill passed the House, but died on the calendar in the Seante in January, 1974. The bill was resubmitted through Senators Irving Fishman of Newton and Francis X. McCann of Cambridge. This time, with the backing of Fishman, the bill went through both legislative branches and was signed by Gov. Francis Sargent. It was officially passed last June 13.

Frechette noted that he was not "trying to get away with anything" when he filed the bill. "It did not conflict with any present law."

Frechette appeared at severl legislative committee meetings to talk about his bill. He explained that what kept him off the B list had been removed as a requirement.

Frechette said that he did not take a new Civil Service test after the height requirement was eliminated because it would be quicker to get onto the B list.

Frechette said that his bill would not have gone through without help from people at the State House. He expressed special appreciation for the assistance of Fishman.

Frechette also had to have a resolution passed by the Board of Aldermen to make him eligible for the Newton Police Department. This, too, died on the calendar the first time around, but was finally passed on April 1, 1974. Frechette said that Ald. Andrew Magni was "very helpful."

Frechette's last hurdle to get onto the B list will be a physical exam on July 16. No problems are anticipated.

Even if he gets on the B list, Frechette will not be home free. He said that he thinks the B list is due to expire in August.

Police hiring thses days is quite complicated. There are all sorts of special preferences; for minorities, residents, and veterans. The resident's preference, which could aid Frechette in getting a job in Newton, is reportedly under appeal.

Frechette wants to be a police officer in Newton because he knows the area and the people. He commented that "Newton has a good police department; one of the best in the state."

Frechette noted that police work has "become more of a profession," that the training has become better.

Frechette, 25, has been working as a security officer at Lasell Junior College during the past year. He said that "the campus has its own problems, you learn them as you go." He called the experience "very valuable."

Frechette reported that he has never tried to make himself taller ("That's supposed to be unhealthy."

Instead, he has learned about law making. "It has been a long fight," Frechette remarked. "There were times when I didn't think I was going to make it."

He said that "I won't really relax until I get sworn in."

in government by not acting decisively in cases involving public corruption."

Concannon said he feels the present district attorney "has dragged his feet whenever the question of public corruption arose."

In almost five years as a member of the Newton Board of Aldermen, Ald. Concannon has never missed a meeting of that body and he pledged if elected Middlesex County District Attorney, he and all assistant district attorneys would serve full time instead of part time as is the current practice.

Concannon was also highly critical of the manner in which the office of the district attorney of Middlesex County is administered. He said the incumbent district attorney, who has held the office for over 15 years, has failed to exercise efficient leadership in that position.

"The long delay in obtaining trials and the backlog of trials is in large part attributable to the lack of leadership from the office of the district attorney," he said.

Concannon is a practicing attorney with offices at 93 Union St., Newton. He is a member of both the Massachusetts and federal bars.

Concannon, 34, is married to the former Jeanne Twohig and is the father of two daughters, Kate and Maureen. H is the son of Anne G. Concannon and the late Sergeant Thomas B. Concannon of the Newton Police Department.

In addition to his doctor of jurisprudence degree from Suffolk University, Concannon has earned a masters degree in education from the State College at Boston and completed his undergraduate studies at Boston College.

Concannon has taught in both the Newton and Maynard school systems and while attending law school, was a police officer in the Town of Falmouth.

Concannon has been recognized for his many civic and governmental accomplishments. He was named "The Outstanding Young MAN OF Newton" in 1969. Since that time he has been cited four times as one of "the Outstanding Young Civi Leaders in the United States" by the United States Jaycees.

Service notes

Airman Albert B. Lazarus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin D. Lazarus of 18 Fox Hill Road, Newton Center, has graduated at Chanute AFB, Ill., from the U.S. Air Force aircraft mechanic course conducted by the Air Training Command.

The airman, who learned to maintain and service multi-engine jet aircraft, is being assigned to March AFB, Calif., for duty with a unit of the Strategic Air COMMAND.

Ward 8 housing

thought be given to elderly high-rise construction "which would be desirable because of the extra facilities they might include."

While these problems were aired, there was also praise for Mayor Theodore D. Mann's ability to "hammer out a compromise" with the Department of Community Affairs on behalf of the Newton Housing Authority. Barkin asserted the DCA had to be "battled with to convince them to relax the minimum standards so we could build 20 units so Newton could see that low income housing is not the worst thing in the world. The high cost of the units evoked the comment from the audience that the city should consider purchase of available homes in Oak Hill Park which might be cheaper.

On an optimistic note, Gail Kharidia said Newton had benefited by its experiences with the NHA and NCDF. It had learned the "importance of selecting an appropriate site and how to deal with federal and state agencies.

"Through its experience with NCDF, a non-profit organization which was defeated in its efforts to build low-moderate income housing on 10 scattered sites, the community better understood "the factors causing apprehension."

An experiment in housing in Springfield was mentioned by Mrs. Beram who explained that residents were given money and with minimum counseling were allowed to go on the free market to choose a dwelling. Mrs. Kharidia remarked that in that experiment those who "were given rent supplement tried to stay within their own community."

Angelone

Miss Angelone said she believes that urban housing and swelling taxation are the "two great threats to our city and state," and pledges to devote her main effort, if elected, to "striking down these threats, not by innocuous amendments saving piddling sums in a Gargantuan $3 billion budget, but by closing our treasuries to these tremendous raids on our tax money and by protecting (by subsidies, if necessary) first of all those citizens who by their constant work have well and lyally served their communities and their state."

"Let's stop babbling about "Republican" and "Democrat" and "Conservative" and "Liberal" and these "great altruistic reforms" that always turn out, somehow, to be massive steals," she said.

"Let's give some consideration, for a change, to the regular American."

After school care program at Emerson

The Emerson After School Care Program will open in September for the academic year 1974-75.

On Thursday, June 14, interested parents met to incorporate the non-profit organization and elect a board of directors. The Newtoon School Committee has given permission for the program to use the facilities of the Ralph Waldo Emerson School, due to the work of Fern Marx, of the Women's Cooperative, who researched the successful after school prgrams in Brookline and then wrote up a proposal forr a pilot program in Newton.

The Emerson After School program is open to all children of Newton Upper Falls who are enrolled in nursery, kindergarten, and grades 1-6 as of September, 1974.

The program is now looking for a professional director-teacher who has formal training in early childhood education and experience in working with children. Staff ratios will be held to 7-1 with the help of teacher aids, work-study people, and volunteers. The parents will be active in planning the program with the professional staff, so that the program can be specified to the needs of the children participating and so tht the costs can be kept low.

For further information about the program, call: Claire Pelletier (965-5435) or Jane Sweet (969-0424).

MIT appoints Peter Jenney

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) has announced the appointment of Dr. Peter Jenney as associate psychiatrist-in-chief.

Dr. Jenney's appointment was effective Monday, July 1.

A graduate of Haverford College, Jenney received his M.D. degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1956. From 1957 to 1960, he trained in psychiatry at the Massachusetts Mental Health Center in Boston. He served in the Air Force Hospital in England and as consultant to the surgeon general of the Third Air Force.

Jenney has held an appointment at McLean Hospital since 1962 and is now an associate attending psychiatrist there.

He joined the psychiatric service at MIT in 1968. He also holds an active teaching appointment at Harvard Medical School McLean Hospital Division and has served as a consultant to the Westown Boarding School in Westown, Pa., and Milton Academy in Milton.

Jenney is a graduate of the Boston Psychonalytic Institute, a member of the corporation of Haverford College and of its visiting committee on counseling services.

He lives at 286 Highland Ave., West Newton.

Dr. Peter Jenney

JULIE CLARK, a sophomore at Newton Catholic High School, was the third prize winner in Massport's 1974 Airport Essay Contest. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clark.

RICHARD J. DURKIN of Auburndale has been appointed to the position of director, governmental services of the Massachusetts Teachers Association (MTA). Durkin taught French and Latin at Meadowbrook Junior High School in Newton for many years and served a one-year term as MTA president before becoming a full time MTA staff member in 1971.

MRS. GERALDINE GARDNER of 79 Wyman St., Waban, recently received a Greater Boston Heart Association certificate of appreciation for her volunteer service over the past 15 years.

New bus may lure people from cars

Public transportation can be uncrowded, clean, and efficient. It can even be luxurious.

According to the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association, a local Christmas Seal agency, this spring the federal government unwrapped a model of the "bus of the future." The sleek, soft-riding vehicle sported huge panoramic windows, which were three-feet high and ran the entire length of the bus. Doors were plenty wide enough to enter comfortably. And the floor was only 17 inches above the crub, half as high as in standard buses, making it faster and easier to board as well as less of a hassle for elderly and disabled people.

According to riders, the trip was quiet and soft, a bit bumpier than even-railed commuter trains but smooth enough to read newspapers and enjoy it. In addition to comfortable, upholstered seats, there was wall-to-wall carpeting. Not a bad way to go.

Major companies submitted designs for the model, the first new bus design in this country in more than 15 years. It took three years and $26 million to finance the project.

For one year, the bus will be driven hard in the Arizona jesert. And it willface the hazards of the big city, too. Identical models will be sent to New York, Miami, Seattle, and Kansas City this summer. The buses, which won't cost much more than current models, probably won't be ready for the boarding public until 1977. Hopes are that they will lure motorists away from their cars and cut down air pollution.

Car exhaust is a major contributor to polluted air. And improved public transportation can help lick the pollution problem. Decreasing the number of cars on the road - by organizing car pools or substituting bicycles whenever possible - is another way to attack the problem.

To find out more about ways to reduce the pollutants in the air, people may contact your Lung Association. It's a matter of life and breath.

School retirees honored

The Newton Teachers' Association hosted a party honoring all retiring personnel recently at the Auburndale Congregational Church.

Many people came to extend good wishes to retirees. Invited guests attending included Mayor Theodore D. Mann, School Committee members Mrs. Eleanor Rosenblum and Mrs. Dorothy Reichard, Superintendent of Schools Aaron Fink and Assistant Superintendents James Laurits and Henry Atkins.

David Geikie, president of the Newton Teachers' Association, presented retirees an engraved Paul Revere bowl from the NTA and a certificate from the Mass. Teachers' Association.

Jewish tradition comes to life in Israel, student observes

Gail Sostek

"Jewish tradition is made real in Israel", Gail Sostek, 19, of Newton said she discovered during her year of study at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

As a political science student at Wooster College in Ohio, Gail wanted to larn more about her Jewish heritage, and, through the Great Lakes College Association Program, arravnged to study as one of 3,000 overseas students at the Hebrew University.

The Hebrew University has a tradition of providing such opportunities for overseas students. Founded in 1925, the university has expanded rapidly and now consists of seven Faculties and seven Schools operating on four campuses: three in Jerusalem and one, the Faculty of Agriculture, in Rehovot.

Almost one fifth of the students are from abroad, and their studies are directed by the School for Overseas Students, established on Mount Scopus in 1971. Some, like Miss Sostek, come for a year and follow a special program which includes courses in Bible, archeology and Jewish studies; others enroll in a regular degree program.

The Yom Kippur War affected her profoundly. "When I was in the United States, Israel didn't mean that much to me. But now that I've been here and seen it, it made me understand the people, how they live through this all the time. Israel,s such a center, such a good place for a Jew to be. I would feel lost if Israel had been defeated."

Many overseas students volunteered along with university staff members to work in agriculture settlements in the Jordan Valley, as paid volunteers in industry, to work with families of mobilized soldiers or in various other social welfare programs. The university has made an all-out effort to organize and aid these programs, while providing lecturers and classroom notes for mobilized students.

For newly demobilized students a special academic year, parallel to the regular one, opened in March and will extend through the summer. Exam dates have been relaxed, and special tutorial groups set up. All consideration is being given to the 4,000-5,000 students who have not been in regular attendance to help them reintegrate smoothly into academic life.

Partly as a result of her war experiences, Miss Sostek said she is now thinking of pursuing studies in nursing, with an eye to possible settlement in Israel. She feels at home — "Here I don't have to prove myself," is how she puts it — and has gotten a warm welcome from the Sabras (Israeli-born) she has met.

When asked about her future plans, she says confidently, "I'll come back."

Terry elected head of student association

Richard L. Terry, class of 1975, has been elected president of the Student abar Association at New England School of Law in Boston, Massachusetts.

In 1973, he was legal intern in the General Counsel's Office of the International Union of Electrical Workers in Washington, D.C. and participated in the six-day hearings involving a federally administered program at the General Electric Plant in Schenectady, New York.

He interned at the Massachusetts Law Reform Institute at 2 Park Square, Boston during the Academic Years 1972 and 1973-1974.

Currently, he is clerk in the Boston Housing Court.

In 1970, he was employed by the Legal Services of Cape Cod and the Islands, Inc. and worked with the Wareham Housing Authority and the Board of Health in an effort to upgrade housing for persons of low income.

In 1971 he worked on a housing study undertaken by the Regional Planning Commission at Research Triangle Park, North Carolina, a study covering the tri-county area of Durham, Orange, and Wade County.

Terry is of Cambridge and Falmouth, Mass. and is the son of the Walter Terrys of Newton and Falmouth, Massachusetts. Both brothers are attorneys. Donald F. Terry is aide to Jerome Waldie of California and Robert E. Terry is senior partner in Terry, Barnes, and Dunning of Mashpee, Massachusetts.

He was a student at St. Sebastian Country Day School, Newton, The Choate School in Wallingford, Connecticut, and Duke University in Durham, North Carolina, class of 1971.

Following graduation from Duke, he joined the staff of Housing Enterprises, Hyannis, Massachusetts, a non-profit housing development corporation funded by the Office of Economic Opportunity for the purpose of alleviating a housing shortage on Cape Cod.

Nursery school to be housed at Oak Hill School

The Newton School Committee recently approved the formation of a nursery school which will open in September at the Oak Hill School, 130 Wheeler Rd., Newton Centre.

The parents who have helped found the nursery school and teacher Mrs. Lee Lasson hope to create an atmosphere which says "yes" to children's initiative, involvement, exploration, and discovery.

The nursery school will accommodate 18 preschoolers, and will meet Monday through Friday for three hours each morning. Tuition for the year is $450.

Applications are now being reviewed for September enrollment. People interested in more information may call either Mrs. Fran Korten at 969-8593, or Mrs. Sally von Rumohr at 969-7935 after July 8.

Bloodmobiles planned

Bloodmobiles will be visiting different parts of Newton this summer.

On Wednesday, July 10, a bloodmobile will be at the Educational Development Center, 55 Chapel St., Newton, from 10 a.m. to 3:45 p.m.

On Wednesday, August 7, a bloodmobile will be at the Red Cross Chapter House, 21 Foster St., Newtonville, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

On Wednesday, Aug. 14, a bloodmobile will be at City Hall from 11 a.m. to 4:45 p.m.

People who are interested in working at any of the above bloodmobiles are asked to call one of the Red Cross chairmen: chairman of the blood program, Connie Lipton, 244-4729; chairman of typists, Adelle James, 332-0039; chairman of volunteer nurses, Jocelyn Carey, 244-5087. For motor corps, people may call Ginny Bartlett at the Chapter House, 527-6000.

People who can donate blood at any of the above bloodmobiles are asked to call Ms. Bartlett. According to the Newton Chapter of the American National Red Cross the need for blood is great.

Mostly for Women
Frances Shuping, Editor

Fall dressing suits contemporary Ms.

By FRANCES SHUPING

Today's woman, always on the go, requires easy-to-coordinate clothes she can use multi-purposely. Her fashions may go from on the job to evenings out, or from sports activities to luncheon and shopping. Frequent traveling necessitates a wardrobe that will pack compactly without wrinkling.

Fashions for Fall, 1974 offer some promising new items for the modern Ms.

One of the newest offerings from some of the lingerie houses is nightwear that doubles as an evening or hostess gown.

From Sea Fashions of California comes the "what-is-it" dress, a number designed for use as a beach cover-up, patio dress, party dress, and even a nightgown. A shorter version doubles as a top for pants. This multi-purpose dress takes up little room in a suitcase, doesn't wrinkle, can be washed and dripped dry. Further good news is the price . . . around $18.

Separates, until now, have been usually considered daytime wear. New for fall are separates that combine day clothes with evening wear, such as pajamas or long skirts.

Leslie J has introduced a "wear-with-all" collection for both day and night dressing. It includes matching dresses, overshirts, halters, shells, skirts and pants, done in printed polyester jersey and imported acrylic jersey.

Dresses in the Leslie J collection usually are sleeveless and worn with shirts for work. Or, a skirt, shell or halter and jacket can make up a daytime ensemble while the skirt with shell or halter can become a theatre or dinner dress. Wide legged pants also can be combined with matching jackets, shells or halters. There are evening pajamas topped with Russian tunic overblouses or low necklined blouses and jumpsuits with coordinated coatlets.

Malcolm Starr has introduced flannel suits and pantsuits with contrasting overblouses that repeat the jacket lining theme. He has paired velvet skirts and pants with chiffon shirts.

"Put-togethers" are David Crystal's new coordinates for fall. Sweaters match A-line skirts, pants, long dresses, blazers and shirt jackets in easy care fabrics of camel, grey and creme patterns and solid colors.

Further good news is the continued popularity of pants as well as the cardigan sweater. Sweaters for fall are designed in a slimmer version. The layered look will continue. Bill Gibbs has coordinated evening knits in slim layers, a bonus with the energy crisis still around.

Hats will be increasingly popular, especially the all-purpose cloche or the cloche-turban for evening. Little knit berets and caps will top big, loose coats.

Capes will be in for not-too-cold weather. Coats will include jackets, thigh length wraps, over-knee lengths, in wrap styles, single and double breasted A-lines, shawl collared wraps and capelets. Ilie Wacs has introduced a knee-length button front poncho.

Skirts will be A-lines, bias flares or wrapped, and lengths vary. The fact is, you can put to good use most of last years clothes while the new ones will give your wardrobe added flexibility.

Versatile weekender

What-is-it nylon jersey dresses from Sea Fashions of California take no room in weekender bags, can be beach dresses, sleepwear, patio and dance dresses, a topper for pants, as at right. In white and choice of sunny colors.

Pajama party

Theo Hyngstrom has created this glamor get-up of full legged pajama pants topped by a cap sleeved tee, the whole undercover of a shirty jacket. In a mattee-hand polyester jersey asplash with a vivid Oriental print, they are available in black or dark green.

Your beauty questions

By SOLANGE BERTRAND

Q: I've been wearing my hair long for several years, so I really don't know what to do with it if I have it cut short. I have a narrow face and low forehead. Could you make some suggestions?

A: First of all, talk the new style over with the hair stylist. If you come with a fixed idea, you may be wrong about what really looks best on you, and the resulting conflict won't be good for obtaining a pretty style. However, ask the stylist whether a side part or no part would soften and widen your face, and whether a little hiehgt over the crown would lift that low forehead.

Q: Facial hair always bothers me in summer because at exposed places like the beach, I'm sure strong light makes it more visible. I have a few fine but dark hairs at the sides of the mouth and little tufts above the main line of the brows. I've tried both tweezing and bleaching, but the hairs come back quickly, showing immediately. What about waxing?

A: Wax removal is usually better for large areas, such as the legs, since it's hard to control on tiny places like a few brow hairs. I would consider the long-range solution of electrolysis, a good investment, since final results usually are permanent. Your physician or dermatologist can help you find a reliable electrologist.

Q: Because the skin around my eyes is dark-toned, I find it hard to use eye makeup. I'd like to lighten the tone, but colors tend to look muddy.

A: Start by blending a base of white of bisque-tone cream over the whole area. Then use silvery or pastel colors. Avoid colors such as taupe, violet or brown, as these make a bad mix with your skin tone, even over a base.

Q: I hae freckles on the upper arms and back which show with swimsuits and evening dresses. Can these be bleached in any way(If not, can they be covered? I've tried foundation cream, which doesn't work.

A: Bleaching creams may help a little if used faithfully, but they're limited, because any stronger formula would injure the skin. If the freciles are flt, they can be concealed with Covermark, a long-known product for concealing birthmarks, available in drug stores.

Q: I've always worn only lip glosses, and I'm not sure if the darker colors now around look well on me, although they seem like fun for summer. How do you mudge lipstick colors:

A: If you tan, the darker colors could look well, but may be too stark against pale skin. On thin lips, they're a no-no, but can make the full mouth look smaller. Your age is also a factor, as they can make some faces look harder and older, whilte others look sophisticated.

the slim gourmet

By BARBARA GIBBONS

Good news for weight-wary ice cream lovers! Now it's easy to make your own, without all those extra fat and sugar calories.

This season has seen a spate of "ice cream machines" from appliance makers. The new-fangled gadgets do their work INSIDE your freezer...a vast improvement over the old-fashioed kind that needed rocksalt and elbow grease.

Compact enough to fit in most freezers, the new ice cream makers have a moisture-proof kord that's so flat you can close the freezer door over it. You simply mix up your recipe, load it into the machine, pop it in the freezer and plug the flat cord into a wall outlet. In an hour or so...ice cream!

Here's a pair of home-frozen treats for only half the calories of the commercial kind. If you don't have an ice cream maker, simply freeze the mixture in a metal mixing bowl. When slushy, beat smooth. When almost frozen solid, break up and beat smooth again. The double beating prevents coarse ice crystals from forming.

As with all frozen desserts that lack commercial stabilizers, it's a good idea to let your low-cal "ice cream" soften briefly at room temperature before serving.

VANILLA "ICE CREAM"

2 egg whites
4 tablespoons sugar
sugar substitute to equal ¼ cup
1½ teaspoons plain gelatin
3 tablesppons cold water
13 ounce can evaporated skim milk pinch of salt or butter-flavored salt
1½ teaspoons vanilla

Beat egg whites till frothy; aid sugar gradually and beat stiff. Combine gelatin and cold water in saucepan. Wait one minute, then heat over low flame until gelatin is melted. Remove from heat and stir in canned milk, sugar substitute, salt and vanilla. Carefully fold into egg whites. Freeze in ice cream maker according to manufacturer's directions. Or, freeze in mixing bowl, and beat twice during freezing time. Serves eight, 65 calories each.

TANGY YOGURT "ICE CREAM"

3 cups vanilla yogurt
3 tablespoons lemon juice
optional: 2 tablespoons sugar or equivalent sugar substitute
1-2 teaspoon bottled lemon rind (or rind of one le on, grated)

Conbine ingredients and freede in ice cream maker according to manufacturer's directions. Or freeze in a mixer bowl, and beat twice during freezing process. Makes one quarter. Serves eight, 75 calories each (87, with sugar).

"LO-CAL HOT FUDGE SUNDAE" — Prepare one 4-serving envleope of diet chocolate pudding mix according to package with 2½ cups skim milk, a pinch of salt. Serve hot over lo-cal ice cream, or 97 per cent fat-free ice milk. Eight calories per tablespoon.

HOT PIINEAPPLE SUNDAE — Simmer 8-ounce can unsweetened crushed pineapple with ½ cup water and 1 teaspoon arrowroot or cornstarch, until mixture thickens. Seven calories per tablespoon.

HOT APPLE SUNDAE — Delicious! Combine one 6-ounce can deforsted apple juice conncentrate with ½ cup water and 2 teaspoons arrowroot or cornstarch. Serve HOt over low cal ice cream. 14 calories per tablespoon.

BLUEBERRIES JUBILEE — Combine 1 cup blueberries with 1 cup unsweetened grape juice and 1 teaspoon arrowroot or cornstarch, until thickened and clear. Pour 2 tablespoons brandy or other hard liquor on surface of simmering sauce and ignite the vapors with a long match. Spoon flaming sauce on low-cal ice cream. 11 calories per tablespoon.

Chocolate ice cream, Lemon Ice, Strawberry Sherbet and more! No special equipment needed. Send a stamped self-addressed envelope and 25 cents to SLIM GOURMET ICE CREAM RECEIPES, in care of this newspaper, 50 West Shore Trail, Sparta, N.J. 07871.

Racquetball Gail Cone of Newtonville was women's champion of a racquetball tournament held this year at the Newton YMCA. (Lupo photo)

Benefits of racquetball cited by local YMCA enthusiasts

If you want to lose weight, relieve tension, and have something to look forward to, the Newton YMCA has something for yo to do.

I met a couple of racquetball fanatics last week and this is what they told me.

Gail Cone, women's recquetball champion at the YMCA, said that she feels "like converting everybody." She reported that after you hit a "perfect shot," you "can't wait to come back and play again."

Racquetball is played with what looks like a sawed-off tennis racker. It is played on a handball court and has rules simila to those of squash. Each shot, to be good, must hit the front wall before hitting the floor of the court.

Players hit a rubber ball filled with air. Although it does not feel particularly dangerous, Ms. Cone said that "you have to learn to get out of the way at the beginning." She noted that when she first began to play, she "had black and blue marks all over my body." A "good hit" in reacquetball can reportedly travel "at least one hundred miles an hour."

Gary Mosca, fanatic number two, said that racquetball is "very easy to learn." He commented that "to be competitive, you don't need that much ability."

According to Mosca, men are switching from handball to racquetball. Use of the handball courts at the YMCA now require reserving a court three days in advance. "If you get here after 9 a.m. three days before, you're in trouble," Mosca reported.

Mosca said that handball is played exclusively by men, while racquetball is co-ed. "I think someday women will be competing with men in a level of competitive play," he added. Mosca noted that racquetball is "relatively new for women here now."

Mosca, who is in the building business, said that he has been "talking about putting courts in my backyard." By doing that, he could "eliminate waiting in line for three days."

Mosca pointed out that racquetball gives him more "enthusiasm and satisfaction" han other sports he has played. "It gives me physical conditioning; its moe than just competing," he remarked. Mosca credits racquetball with helping him to lose 36 pounds and quit smoking.

Mosca said that "your mental ability improves because your physical ability does."

Ms. Cone commented that she was first recruited to play racquetball while waiting to play squash. She said that the "most important thing in the game is stamina." Other ingredients necessary to becoming a top player include concentration, finesse, and athletic ability.

Ms. Cone pointed out that "you don't need that much power." She said that racquetball is "basically a wrist game" and that finesse is important.

Bth Mosca and Ms. Cone noted that a player can become competitive quickly.

Mosca remarked that "for a workout, yo don't need that much athletic ability.

Mosca and Ms. Cone play regularly twice a week at the YMCA. Their playing companions come from various Boston suburbs. Mosca called the YMCA "a meeting point after work."

The Newton YMCA held a racquetball tournament for the first time this year. John Greeley of Newton was the men's champion.

Racquetball is played primarily by adults. Mosca said that "kids get discouraged because they can't get a court." There are only two courts available at the YMCA.

People who want to play racquetball will not have to sacrifice their tennis rackets to a power saw. Racquetball equipment is reportedly available at sporting good stores.

Brilliant shoots 73 to win Insurance Youth Classic

Seventeen-year-old David Brilliant of West Newton won the 1974 Insurance Youth Classic held recently at the Charles River Country Club.

The competition was sponsored by the Insurance Agents of Newton.

Brilliant, who finished second in the 1973 tournament, was one-under par on the front nine, and two-over par on the back nine as he finished with an excellent one-over par 73 for 18 holes.

A member of Belmont Country Club. Brilliant will lead the other finalists of the Newton Classic to the state competition at the Folly Hill Country Club in Beverly, July 11 and 12. The state winner will then enter the National Insurance Youth Classic at the Alpine Country Club in Providence, R.I., Aug. 10-14.

Representing the Newton Insurance Agents were President David Krongard, Past President George Peters, Treasurer Vincent Delmastro, Mitchell Phillips, Jack Kilcoyne, and Jeff Cornell.

Newton North High School Coach James Ronayne gave the association a valuable assist in getting the tournament underway.

Participating in the Classic were 31 area youngsters, ranging from 10 to 17 years of age. Because of the rating system used in the Classic, the number of state finalists from Newton could not be established immediately. Last year, five Newton representatives participated in the event.

Final scores were as follows: David Brilliant, 73; Joe Henley, 74; Mark Hetnick, 75; Andy Rosen, 77; Mark Tuler, 78; Charles Heintz, 80; Jim Landers, 80.

Also, Rich Haskell, 81; Bill Lynch, 82; Frank Nelson, Milt Yanofsky and Peter Jepson, 83; Don King, 85; Rich Cavanaugh and Brian McDonald, 86; Gregg Phillips and Mark Harrington, 87; William Dever, 88; Joseph Gardner, 89; Robert Stone, 90; Phil Jones, Paul Leone, and Mike Kelley, 91; Steven Tarr, Howie Zeprun, and Jay Faber, 97; Kevin McCarthy, 98; Bernie Travers, 107; Robert Johnson and Mark Finstein, 111; and Charles Fox, 125.

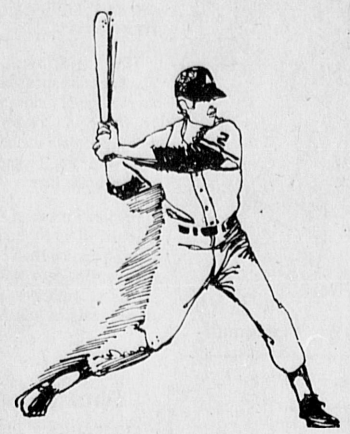

Top finishers The top three finishers in the 1974 Insurance Youth Classic were, left to right, Mark Hetnick, David Brilliant, and Joe Henley. Brilliant placed first with a 73.

Scoring drought

The Newton Football Club is still looking for its first goal.

Newton suffered its third straight shutout loss Monday night, 2-0, to Lincoln - Sudbury in an Eastern Mass. Twilight Soccer League game. Newton was league champion last year.

Mitchell victorious in Wightman Tournament

Former Newton High standout Joe Mitchell III won the boys' 18-and-under championship in the annual Wightman Junior Invitational Tournament last week at Weston's Wightman Tennis Center.

Mitchell, a member of Newton's 1973 state champion tennis team, defeated Harlan Stone of New Canaan, Conn. in the 18-and-under final, 6-4, 6-3.

Mitchell is a son of Superior Court Judge Joseph S. Mitchell Jr.

In the girls' 14-and-under singles division, number two seed Betsy Richmond of Newton lost in the semi-final round to Alison Hibbert of Hingham, 7-6, 6-4. Miss Richmond was victorious in the girls' 14-and-under doubles with partner Leslie Clark of Arlington.

Baird Haney of Newtonville lost in the semi-final round of the boys' 16-and-under doubles.

Are you Newton's best athlete

The Newton Jaycees are joining the Massachusetts Jaycees and WBZ Radio-Television in sponsorship of the "Good Sports" competition, which is designed to find the best man and woman athletes in Massachusetts.

The competition is open to any man or woman 18 years or older with the exception of any professional athlete (any sport), or any current member of a college varsity team, or anyone entering college next fall on any type of athletic scholarship.

Local competitions will be held on July 13, followed by six regional competitions on July 27. The finals will be held at Boston College on Aug. 3, and will be televised by Channel 4, WBZ-TV.

Over 125 Jaycee chapters and 4,000 Jaycees in Massachusetts will be hosting local events throughout the state on July 13, starting at 8:30 a.m. The local competition to be held at Newton North High School, will include the following events: basketball foul shooting, 880-yard run, street hockey goal shooting, obstacle course, shot put, 100-yard dash, football punt for distance, women's soccer kick, long jump, baseball throw for accuracy.

People interested in entering the "Good Sports" competition should send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Newton Jaycees, Box 202, West Newton, Mass. 02165, or check local supermarkets for registration forms, or call Bob Alkon at 969-6032 (days) or Jim Bishop at 237-1783 (nights) for applications.

Applications must be received by July 10. There will be a $3 entry fee to benefit Jaycee projects.

Best player may not Win Wimbledon singles

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Defending champion Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia dropped a heavy hint that the man who wins the Wimbledon singles title this year will not necessarily be the best player, but the one who has had the easiest route to today's quarterfinals.

Kodes, a chunky and apparently tireless character, admitted Tuesday that three, hard five-setters in three days were not exactly the preparation he would have wished for his quarterfinal battle with thirdseeded Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Illinois, today.

The sixth-seeded Czech described his schedule as "gruelling," having played 18 singles sets so far. Little more than an hour after the end of his three hour and 40 minute victory over 11th seeded Tom Gorman of Seattle, Wash, he went back on court for a doubles match.

He said he was not the only player to feel that way—the dressing rooms he said were seething with comment that the championships should be extended one day to next Sunday and thus give some of the competitors more rest than they have been getting.

One reason tournament officials are against an extension to Sunday is the fact World Team Tennis players are due in the U.S. Monday, including Connors, top-seeded John Newcombe of Australia and most of the women quarterfinalists.

According to Kodes' theory, Newcombe is even a heavier betting favorite than ever. He has not lost a set in his four singles matches and beat Erik van Dillen of San Mateo, Calif., easily Tuesday.

George Frazier was on the side of sport's underdogs

Sports Spice

Commentary by Eddie Andelman

There is definitely something I personally find distasteful about New York City, and I'm not sure whether its the Knicks, the Daily News, the Mets, sauerkraut, the Nets, taxi fares, the Giants, Pat Summerall, the Yankees, the Bronx Zoo, the Islanders, Times Square or the Rangers. Whatever it is though, those green and white off track betting parlors which soon will allow legalized sports gambling might make me change my mind.

Now that money is tight, its a lot easier for the Red Sox to justify not having an electronic scoreboard or Schaefer Realty Trust not paving the entire parking lot, but the Bruins not buying a new organ for John Kiley is ridiculous, since someone in the front office must have a Master Charge or Bank-Americard, which would allow tiny payments to be spread out evenly over thirty six months.

The loss of George Frazier simply means that there is now one less capable journalist around to complain about the numerous hacks who exist under the guise of sportswriter. It was Frazier who often times went against the Establishment tide when it came time to defend Mohammed Ali, Duane Thomas, Dave Meggasey, the blackballed umpires who tried to unionize, and hordes of other underdogs who had a side to their story, but no forum to expound upon. When George wrote about sports, he utilized style, wit, satire and humor, for he enjoyed sports immensely, and his writings, I am sure, had a profound effect on many of his younger Boston Globe colleagues like Bud Collins, Ray Fitzgerald, Leigh Montville and Peter Gammons. As for you George Frazier, bless you, and thanks for setting a norm to be used by all for creativity, originality and most important, integrity.

Candlepins for Cash has a 44 percent share of the Boston television market from 5:30 to 6 p.m. weekdays, which proves that its time to sell shares in the new World Figure Eight Demolition Derby League.

Show me a man who watches auto racing on television, and I'll show you someone who pays full sticker price when buying a new car.

"Me and the Spitter" by Gaylord Perry and "Inside Baseball" by Harold H. Wolf are worth taking to the beach to read, but I left "Pitching with Tom Seaver" at home preferring to look for pearls through masses of Revere Beach seaweed. Book publishers generally would be able to purchase a much higher class of manuscript pertaining to sports, if they would only smarten up and stop advancing the big name athletes so much money in front, based on a meager one page outline of proposed chapters.

Why are the critics expecting so much production perfection from "The Sox Line" show which appears after many Red Sox games on Channel 4? It's not supposed to be the Carol Burnett Show, but merely an opportunity for baseball fans to discuss the game itself while still fresh in everyone's mind. My only suggestion would be more frequent appearance of Sox manager, Darryl Johnson, so he could be questioned by Steve Fredericks, Bob Wilson and the fans on some of his strategic moves, which is really why baseball is the thinking man's game, and still the best sport for my money.

Twenty two of our fifty states still lack at least one major league franchise in football, baseball and hockey, but with sports heading in their current direction, perhaps by the fall all will have at least one.

Congratulations to the World Football League for dropping the automatic point after, and while in a good mood, a small round of applause is due the Patriots for tearing up Mack Herron's contract and rewarding him with more money. Herron almost makes traffic jams worthwhile.

What happened to all those stories making fun of Philadelphia as a sports city? W. C. Fields would really be annoyed now, what with the success of the Flyers, Billy Jean King, the Atoms and watch out for the Eagles this year. Quietly, head coach Mike McCormack, has assembled one of the finest coaching staffs in football, and the Eagles are almost ready to overthrow the dissension riddled Cowboys and the aging Redskins.

French fries, hamburgers and pizza taste worse at a ballpark than they really are, while hot dogs, ice cream and peanuts taste better than they should.

I wonder whatever became of Faye Thronberry, Tom Umphlett, Ebba St. Claire or Ben Swain?

It's hard to believe that the National Hockey League is going to expand again in two years to Denver and Seattle, but on the other hand, its almost as incredible that they are expanding to Kansas City and Washington this season.

Sometime in the next year or two, I'll be sad to hear of Jerry West's retirement, for in my opinion, he was the greatest all around guard who ever dribbled a basketball, and that includes Cousy, the Big O, Walt Frazier and Sam Jones.

I wish that professional athletes would stop whinning about their sorrowful life. Naturally their careers are limited, but so are those of sports broadcasters, neuro surgeons, career soldiers and child actors. Most athletes have numerous doors of opportunity opened for them, none of us will ever have, and instead of capitalizing, they fail to cash in and build for the future. Both Ken Dryden and Phil Esposito are perfect examples of athletes who have taken care of the future by laying the ground work for careers after their playing days are over. It seems to me the pros should be more appreciative, for I'd like a deal working half a year for big money, while playing a sport which is fun.

Well, it's back to the 1944 St. Louis Brown Yearbook for me, and try to remember to brush after meals, even if there are teeth missing from your hockey days.

Walsh wins tennis title

Richard Walsh, a member of St. Ignatius, Chestnut Hill CYO won the Cadet Division championship in the 21st annual CYO tennis tournament held recently at the St. John's Seminary, Brighton courts.

Walsh defeated Kevin McGoldrick, St. James, Wellesley, in the final, 6-4, 6-3.

Walsh was defending the Cadet title he won a year ago as an 11-year old, when he became one of the youngest CYO titleholders ever.

James Elcock, a sophomore at St. Sebastian's School, won the Junior Division championship, downing John Lyons, Reading, 7-6, 6-7, 6-2 in the final. Elcock is the son of the president of the U.S. Lawn Tennis Association.

Two other St. Ignatius, Newton representatives became divisional finalists. Ellen Ann Walsh lost Janet Leonard, St. Theresa, West Roxbury, in the Junior girls' final, 6-1, 6-1. Elizabeth O'Brien lost a Cadet final to Brenda Leonard, West Roxbury, 2-6, 6-4, 6-1.

ATLANTA (UPI) — Don Wilson says they've got the image all wrong.

"Everybody thinks I'm a strikeout pitcher," says the big Houston Astros righthander. "A few big games and I'm stuck with a reputation I never intended to live up to."

Don Wilson is one of those pitchers who makes a big splash from time to time, and then has his outstanding performances come back to haunt him.

There was that no-hitter he pitched against Atlanta back in 1967, the 18-strikeout game he pitched against Cincinnati in 1968, and his second no-hitter, against Cincinnati, in 1969.

"Those were big thrills, at the time, but I wonder sometimes if things like that put you on the spot.

"Take those strikeouts. When my fast ball is really hopping as it does once in awhile, I'll get 15, 16 strikeouts in a game.

"But that's not really my style. I'm basically a control pitcher, working the corners and trying to get the batters to cut under or over the ball.

"The real strikeout pitcher is the one who usually has more strikeouts than innings pitched, who tops the 200 mark season after season."

Krentzman awarded varsity baseball letter

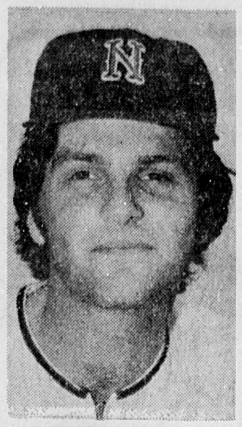

Mark Krentzman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Krentzman of 39 Old Colony Rd., Newton, was recently awarded his second varsity letter in baseball from Nrtheastern University.

Krentzman was one of the ace relief men on the Huskies staff. He worked in eight games and pitched 12 and one third innings. The sophomore hurler ad three wins and three losses. All three of his wins came in Greater Boston League action.

The Husky nine finished with a 13-10 record this season, and just missed qualifying for the District I playoffs. N.U. was 4-4 in G.B.L. play. A highlight of the year came at Fenway Park, when Northeastern defeated Holy Cross 8-3.

Krentzman is a 1972 graduate of Brown and Nichols School where he starred in baseball, basketball, and football. In his senior year he captained the baseball and basketball squads and was All-League in baseball for three years, and was All-League in basketball in his final year.

Krentzman is majoring in business management at N.U. and plans a career in business following graduation.

Mark Krentzman

Ballboy

Mark Ferlisi of Newton is one of 13 youths participating as a ballboy at the Boston Lobsters' tennis matches. The youth were selected through recommendations on a regional basis.

The position requires quickness, responsibility and a knowledge of tennis. As well as on the court responsibilities, rotating duties include work in the press box, locker room or on the team bench.

Ferlisi is a son of Carol and Edward Rousch and attends Warren Junior High School. He will continue to work at the Lobsters' matches until the season ends in late August.

Boating groups recognized

The New England Safe Boating Council and Community Boating, Inc. of Boston have been cited for their safe boating achievements by the New England Marine Trade Association.

The Council received the Safe Boating Award for two new programs: the introduction of personalized recognition plaques to encourage completion of public education courses, and the establishment of a source of information on the availability of the various courses offered throughout the state of Maine.

Community Boating, Inc. was cited for its continuing urban sailign program providing low-cost membership and offering theoretical and practical instructionto develop safe boating skills.

The awards were presented at ceremonies marking National Safe Boating Week (June 29 through July 7) by Gerald S. Terhune of Barrington, R. I., president of the New England Marine Trade Association.

The organization comprises more than 400 executives of marine dealerships, service facilities, and engine, boat, and accessory manufacturers and distributors throughout New England.

The winners were selected by a 25-man judging committee headed by the association's safe boating committee chairman, A. Newell Garden of Raytheon Company, Lexington, Mass. Garden lives at 20 Hunter St., West Newton.

Since its founding in 1936, the non-profit sailing program offered by Community Boating, Inc. has served some 125,000 boatmen in the Greater Boston area.

Joseph A. Wolfson of 25 Andrew St., Newton Highlands, president of Community Boating, explained that while complete sailing instruction is offered to boatmen of all ages, the organization's youth program is most noteworthy. Children between the ages of 11 and 17 pay only $1 for the summer vacation and, as a prerequisite to recreational sailing, receive instruction in seamanship, sailing skills and rules of the road with a resulting accumulation of theoretical and practical information contributing to confidence and safety.

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (UPI) — Former American League rookie pitcher of the year, Bill Parsons of the Milwaukee Brewers, cleared major league waivers Tuesday and has been assigned to the Oakland A's triple-A farm team at Tucson, Ariz..

According to a Brewers' spokesman, the assignment of Parsons to Oakland is part of the payment for veteran Deron Johnson, who joined the Milwaukee last week as a designated hitter.

Wilbur wins 13th

American League roundup

Wilbur Wood was the eighth wonder of the baseball world a year ago when he appeared to be heading for a 30-victory season.

Today he's taken for granted although he's pitching at essentially the same clip for the Chicago White Sox as he did in 1973.

The portly knuckleballer, who had 14-11 record on July 2 last season, raised his current mark to 13-9 Tuesday night when he pitched a six-hitter to give the White Sox a 4-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals. Wood's victory total is second only to the Cleveland Indians' Gaylord Perry, who is 14-1.

"It was about a normal game for me," said Wood, who struck out five and walked none. "I was around the plate all night and didn't walk anybody. I kept the ball low and they kept hitting it on the ground. That's what I wanted them to do. It's the way to win ball games."

Homers by Dick Allen and Bill Melton were the big blows of the game for the White Sox although Wood praised Jorge Orta for his hustle which led to the Sox' third run in the sixth inning. Orta went all the way to third when leftfielder Jim Wohlford misplayed his fly for an error and scored on a single by Carlos May.

"It was a great run for me to get," said Wood. "It was the key run because it made a 2-1 game into a 3-1 game and we got it strictly on Orta's hustle."

Lindy McDaniel, in his fourth starting assignment of the season for the Royals, suffered his third defeat against one win.

The Oakland A's made it two in a row over former Manager Dick Williams and the California Angels, 7-5, the Boston Red Sox defeated the Baltimore Orioles, 9-6, the Cleveland Indians beat the Milwaukee Brewers, 5-3, the Detroit Tigers downed the New York Yankees, 4-2, and the Minnesota Twins shaded the Texas Rangers, 5-4, in other AL games.

National League scores were: Pittsburgh 4 Montreal 2, Houston 5 Atlanta 1, New York 4 Philadelphia 2, Los Angeles 3 Cincinnati 2, Chicago 4 St. Louis 3 and San Diego 5 San Francisco 1.

A's 7 Angels 5

Designated hitter Angel Mangual drove in four runs with a homer and a double leading the A's to their ninth win in 13 games, handing the Angels their 22nd defeat in 30 games. Ken Holtzman went the first 7 2-3 innings to even his record at 9-9 while Frank Tanana's record dipped to 4-12.

Red Sox 9 Orioles 6

Dwight Evans' two-run single and Doug Griffin's run-scoring single sparked a four-run ninthinning uprising which enabled the Red Sox to beat the Orioles. Diego Segui earned his fifth win with 1 1-3 innings of relief. Danny Cater homered for the Red Sox and Paul Blair connected for Baltimore.

Indians 5 Brewers 3

The Indians ran their winning streak to four games with the help of a two-run single by Frank Duffy during a four-run second inning and George Hendrick's fourth homer in four games and 14th of the season. Jim Perry went 5 1-3 innings to win his seventh game while Kevin Kobel lost his eighth decision. Don Money homered for the Brewers.

Tigers 4 Yankees 2

Gary Sutherland doubled in two runs and scored a third in a four-run fifth inning which paved the way for Luke Walker to win his fourth game with relief help from Jim Ray. Pat Dobson was the loser for the Yankees, who have dropped six consecutive games.

Twins 5 Rangers 4

Pinch-hitter Glenn Borgmann doubled into the left field corner to score Eric Soderholm from first base with two out in the ninth and give the Twins' Billy Campbell his third victory. Roy Carew had three hits, raising his average to .393 for the Twins.

Mike Marshall called super

National League roundup

Mike Marshall has been called a "physical freak" by some, but his managers can only call him one thing—"super."

Marshall appeared in his 52nd game of the season for Los Angeles Tuesday night and his 12th straight game, extending his major league record for consecutive appearances in the process, as the Dodgers set down the Cincinnati Reds, 3-2.

Marshall relieved in the sixth inning and scattered four hits the rest of the way to earn his 10th win of the season against three losses. Marshall stands a good chance of becoming the first reliever to win 20 games. The present mark for most wins by a reliever is held by ElRoy Face of the 1959 Pittsburgh Pirates—18.

Marshall, when asked how he felt about being called a "physical freak" by the press because of the tremendous amount of pitching he's done, turned the question away flatly.

Marshall, who has a Master's degree in Education probably could explain it, but his manager has no need for explanations.

Walt Alston said, "I've never seen anyone like Mike Marshall." And Alston has managed relievers like Ron Perranoski, Larry Sherry and Clem Labine.

But Marshall wasn't overly impressed.

When told of Alston's appraisal, Marshall grinned and said, "That's what Gene Mauch (manager of his former team, the Montreal Expos) said too."

The victory for the Dodgers was their sixth straight this season over the Reds and pushed Los Angeles into an 8½ game bulge in the National League Western Division over second-place Cincinnati.

Ron Cey's triple drove in Willie Crawford from first in the eighth inning to win it for the Dodgers.

In other National League games, Chicago edged St. Louis 4-3, Pittsburgh turned back Montreal 4-2, Houston stopped Atlanta 5-1, New York beat Philadelphia 4-2 and San Diego defeated San Francisco 5-1.

In the American League, Cleveland downed Milwaukee 5-3, Boston rapped Baltimore 9-6, Detroit toppled New York 4-2, Minnesota nipped Texas 5-4, Chicago tripped up Kansas City 4-1 and Oakland held off California 7-5.

Cubs 4, Cards 3

Rick Monday clubbed a solo homer and Bill Madlock and Vic Harris contributed run-scoring doubles to lead Chicago to victory over the Cards.

Information from VA

Q—Do Veterans Administration hospitals and clinics treat reservists injured while reporting to, or returning from military training?

A—Yes, provided injuries and illnesses occur during travel time as specified in the reservists' military orders. Both active duty training and inactive duty training are considered active duty for this purpose.

Q—My GI Bill entitlement expired last year, and I am paying for a course at a local college. I need tutorial assistance, and wonder if the Veterans Administration will pay for it?

A—Sorry, no. The agency is not authorized to provide tutorial assistance after expiration of GI Bill benefits.

Q—I'm a veteran who sold a home purchased with a GI home loan from the Veterans Administration. Can VA restore my loan entitlement?

A—Only if the property was disposed of for compelling reasons such as job transfer, destruction by fire, condemnation proceedings, etc. Before VA can restore entitlement, however, the loan must have been repaid in full, and the agency released from liability for the loan.

Buster Keaton's silent films at Art Museum

Buster Keaton, one of the greates clowns of the silent film era, is appearing on the screen at the Museum of Fine Arts thru August 27. This free summer series, Silents in the Court!, will be presented Tuesday evenings at sundown in the Sculpture Courtyard.

The recent revival of Keaton's masterpieces reflects a soaring popularity which may outshine that of his only major rival, Charlie Chaplin. This series is highlighted by ten of the twelve feature films produced, directed, and acted by Keaton between 1923 and 1930.

Reknowned for his straighfaced composure, Keatoon faces an unpredictable world of mushrooming catastrophes in his films. He transforms his childhood vaudeville routines into ingenious slapstick comedy. With an ever-puzzled deadpan, the versatile Keaton performs graceful leaps over waterfalls and manages hair-raising escapes from avalanches, tornadoes, cannibals, stranded ocean liners, and driverless motorcycles — all to win his girl in the end.

Keaton was a brilliant comic actor, a great modern film director, and a superhuman stunt man who rarely used a double. His hilarious antics take us up and down the ladder of laughter, from smile to belly-laugh and back again.

This film series is supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

The schedule for the Keaton Silents in the Court! series is as follows:

July 9 — The Pale Face (1921) and Sherlock, Jr. (1924) with Kathryn McGurie, Joe Keaton, Ward Crane.

July 16 — The Navigator (1924) with Kathryn McGurie, Frederick Vroom, Noble Johnson.

July 23 — Seven Chances (1925) with Ray Barnes, Snitz Edwards, Ruth Dwyer.

July 30 — Go West (1925) with Kathleen Myers, Howard Truesdale, Brown Eyes.

August 6 — Battling Butler (1926) with Sally O'Neil, Snitz Edwards, Walter James.

August 13 — The General (1926) with Marian Mack, Glen Cavender, Jim Farley.

August 20 — College (1927 with Ann Cornwall, Harold Goodwin, Snitz Edwards.

August 27 — Stamboat Bill, Jr. (1928) with Ernest Torrence, Tom McGuire, Marion Byron.

In case of rain, the films will be shown in the Lecture Hall at 7:30.

Almy's to open new store in Walpole Mall

Almys Department Stores will open soon at the Walpole Mall, Route 1, at Coney street, Walpole. Almys, a household word on the north and south shores of Boston for 116 years, will open about August 1st according to plans recently announced by Joseph Burgatti, senior vice-president of Gorin Stores Inc., the parent company of Almys.

Covering over 70,000 square feet of space with over 75 departments, Almys will be one of the largest stores in Walpole Mall. Designed by Sumner Schein, one of America's foremost architects, Almys incorporates all the latest improvements in department store planning. It will be a completely modern and beautiful department store with most family and household needs. Brand-name merchandise will be featured, including many off-price special purchases.

A&P names director loss prevention

MONTVALE, N.J.—David B. Kelly, former superintendent of New Jersey State Police, assumed new responsibilities today as national director of the loss-prevention division of The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company, Inc.

Kelly's assumption of the newly-created post coincided with the return of A&P's corporate headquarters to New Jersey after 47 years in New York City.

Long recognized as a foremost law enforcement official, Mr. Kelly retired last week at 56 after serving since 1965 as New Jersey State Police head under three governors.

With A&P, he will have overall responsibility for loss prevention throughout the company's 31 divisions operating 3600 stores and distribution centers in 33 states, the District of Columbia and Canada as well as food processing plants in several states.

5,200 on strike

Some 5,200 painters, ironworkers and meat cutters were on strike for the second day today in eastern Massachusetts.

Efforts failed in Washington to settle the 16-week strike of shipbuilders at General Dynamics shipyard in Quincy, Mass.

The painters walkout stalled work on about 300 construction projects including the Blue Cross-Blue Shield building in Bostn.

The ironworkers strike affected several major construction projects including the Federal Reserve Bank and Shawmut Bank sites in Boston.

CPAs' tips to retirees

(Second in a series of three articles on how to stretch retirement dollars)

Income taxes do not end when you come home from the retirement dinner with that gold watch. But some income received by those in retirement is tax exempt. In addition there are some property tax concessions and other credits or special exemptions.

A s a means of helping senior citizens who must cope with increased living costs despite fixed income, the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants detailed a panel of CPAs to outline broadly what special benefits are available to the elderly. Here's what they report: Tax exempt income includes Social Security benefits, Railroad Retirement Act pensions, a portion of receipts from annuities or insurance converted to annuities, life insurance proceeds, and many veterans' benefits.

If you and your employer contributed to a pension or annuity plan, the benefits you receive may be tax-free up to the point where you have got back what you yourself paid into the plan. If you have difficulty determining how much you paid in, ask the distributor of the benefits — the bank, insurance company or whoever adminsters the program. They will have the information.

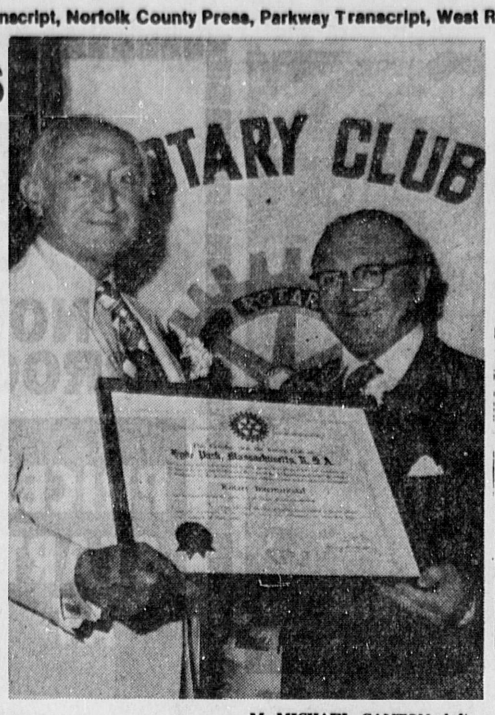

When talking with them, you might also arrange for any taxes owed on payments to you to be deducted from the benefits before you receive them, thus relieving you of the trouble of having to pay estimated taxes every three months. Pension administrators are required by law to do this if you ask them.

In the case of so-called "Keogh-type" pension plans for the self-employed, contributions into the plan are not taxed so taxes must be paid when the benefits are received. However, the low-income allowance and the standard deduction permit a couple filing a joint return to earn up to $4,299 tax free, so a taxable pension would have to pay more than that before any taxes would actuallly be incurred, assuming no other taxable income.

Unfortunately, because of their employment history some elderly persons are not eligible for any Social Security benefits at all, while others barely qualify for the minimum. To help them, Congress has granted the retirement income credit, which is a tax credit of 15 percent of their "retirement income," i.e., income from dividends, interest, pensions, annuities and some rents. The maximum that can be taken is 15 percent of $1,524 (or of $2,286 for married couples age 65 orr over filing joint returns), and the $1,524-2286 base is reduced by Social Security benefits and in some cases earned income such as wages. At age 72 and over the earned income does not have to be deducted.

In computing income taxes, persons 65 or over get an extra $750 exemption, and if they are blind they can take a third exemption. Blindness as used here does not necessarily mean total loss of vision. A person who may not consider himself blind could qualify for the exemption if his eyesight with eyeglasses is below specified levels.

A taxpayer whose spouse dies can file a joint income tax return for the year in which death occurs providing the survivor does not remarry before the end of that year.

A Double Winner

Zenith distributor Robert E. Bumpus (center), merchandising manager for Northeastern Distributors, Inc., Cambridge, is shown accepting two awards at a recent Zenith Distributor Sales Convention. At left is Gordon G. Hunt, director of advertising Zenith Radio Corporation, Chicago, presenting Bumpus an Outstanding Achievement Award for excellence in advertising and sales promotion activities. At right, William A. Nail, director of public relations for Zenith, presents a First Place Award for excellence in public relations and major contributions to the national Zenith distributor public relations network. Northeastern Distributors will soon be celebrating its 50th anniversary as a Zenith distributor - the oldest in the world under the same continuous ownership.

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, in Lenox, Massachusetts, the country's oldest major festival of music, is experiencing its greatest advance tickt sale this spring — nearly double that of any previous year.

The reasons are two, according to John H. Curtis, public relations director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra: 1.) the current high cost and relative scarcity of gasoline; more people within a 130-mile radius of Tanglewood are planning to go there this year; and 2.) the 1974 programming is more interesting than ever before.

Tanglewood is a 210-acre estate which has become world famous as the summer home of the Boston Symphony, its Berkshire Festival, and its unique Berkshire Music Center.

The Berkshire Music Center is the Boston Symphony's summer school for advanced study of music. Gifted young musicians from this country and abroad gather for a concentrated eight-week session during which students give frequent public performances.

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood will open this season on Friday, July 5, and will close on Sunday, August 25.

A major 1974 highlight is a special celebration (on July 26) of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Serge Koussevitzky — the great conductor whose dream became Tanglewood.

As of mid-June, accoridng to Curtis, Tanglewood was approaching a sold-out position for the Koussevitzky Centennial on July 26. All the top price tickets had been sold. Only te two back sections in the music shed were available. However, up to 10,000 people can be accommodated on the lawn beyond the shed. Tickets for the lawn are not sold until the day of the concert. Lawn ticket prices for that day are $5.00.

The BSO is referring to the Koussevitzky Centennial as an "Extraordinary Evening of Music". Preceded by musical events on that day from 2:30 p.m. to 5 p.m. the "once in a life-time" evening will begin at 6:00 p.m., when Gunther Schuller, Artistic Director of the Music Center, conducts the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra together with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus, John Oliver, Conductor.

At 7 p.m., Leonard Bernstein, Tanglewood artistic advisor, will lead the World Youth Orchestra in three selections, followed at 9:30 p.m. with Aaron Copeland conducting his own "Quiet City".

Seiji Ozawa, artistic director of the Berkshire Festival as well as music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conclude the evening by conducting Beethoven's Symphony no. 9.

This year there will also be a separate popular music series at Tanglewood. The five concerts inthis series, all beginning at 7:30 p.m., include: July 8, Seals and Crofts — England Dan and John Ford Coley; July 16, Helen Reddy, Livingston Taylor; July 30, James Taylor, Linda Ronstadt; August 12, Arlo Guthrie, Pete Seeger; and August 27, Joni Mitchell, Tom Scott and the L.A. Express.

Information about Tanglewood may be obtained by contacting: Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. 02140. Phone: (413) 637-1600.

Mrs. Ireland named new RSVP director

Anthony J. Bibbo, Executive Director of the Newton Community Service Centers Inc., announced recently, the appointment of Mrs. Barbara K. Ireland as the Newton, Wellesley, Weston RSVP project director.

The selection of Mrs. Ireland, who had previously served as an assistant to the director, was made following a recommendation of a personnel search committee which included representatives from Wellesley, Weston, and Newton.

In commenting on the appointment, Bibbo stated that Mrs. Ireland brings to her new position an academic and work experience background which should result in the continuation of a high quality program established by her predecessor.

She attended public schools in the city of Medford and was the recipient of a BA degree from Bates College where she majored in psychology. She later achieved a master's degree from Boston University in the area of adult education.

Professionally, Mrs. Ireland has been employed at Bates College, where she was an instructor in speech and drama. Following this experience she served as a substitute teacher in the communities of Acton, Bedford, Carlisle, and Bradford, Vermont.

She has also had experience as a research assistant for the New England School Development Council; in service representative for Northwest Labs in Portland, Or., and has been an instructor at Boston University in group dynamics and inter-personal relations. For the past year she has been the assistant RSVP project coordinator.

Mrs. Ireland is located at 429 Cherry Street in West Newton where she may be reached at 969-5908.

One-week education workshop planned

The Greater Boston Regional Education Center, in conjunction with the New England Program in Teacher Education, is offering a one-week summer workshop to teachers, administrators, students, paraprofessionals, and parents who are interested in open classroom ideas and techniques.

An organizational meeting is scheduled for 9 a.m. July 8. Workshop hours will be 9 a.m. - noon and 1 - 3 p.m. with two optional evening sessions, held at the EDC Building, 55a Chapel Street, Newton, Massachusetts 02160. Such topics as movement, art, science and senses, humanistic education, math metrically speaking, and Chapter 766 will be explored. Enrollment is limited and reservations are due by July 3.

College credit may be earned for participation in this workshop by prearranging it with the staff at GBREC. For further information, people may contact Ms. Jan Eisenhour, Greater Boston Regional Education Center, 965-2405.

Nursing graduate a Riddle Scholar

Bernice Haas Grodman, Newton Centre, was named a Mary M. Riddle Scholar at recent commencement exercises of the Newton-Wellesley Hospital School of Nursing.

The award recognizes students selected by the faculty for outstanding scholastic achiement, nursing competence, social contributions and citizenship.

Mrs. Grodman was one of nine Mary M. Riddle Scholars in a graduation class of 62, the largest class ever to graduate in the 86-year history of the school.

This year's class had seven men and 55 women, and 15 members of the class were married. There was one grandmother among the graduates. Of the 62 students who received their R.N. (Registered Nurse) degree, 11 already held degrees. Eight had bachelor's degrees, and one had an associate degree. There also were three licensed practical nurses (LPN's) in the class.

The other recipients of the Mary M. Riddle Scholar awards were: Margaret McDermott, Mattapan; Janice Jason, Reading; Diane Trow, Weston; Joan Mello, Lexington; Kathleen McDade, Watertown; Jane Grenier, Weymouth; Carolyn Kallgren, Woodstock, Conn.; and Robin Ackroyd, Cambridge.

Bernice Grodman

Miss McDade also received the Newton-Wellesley Hospital Aid Association Award. The award recognizes students selected by the faculty for outstanding scholastic achievement, nursing competence, social contributions and citizenship.

Banking system to reduce check writing

Newton residents will be among the first to benefit from a new automatic banking system for deposition funds and paying routine bills.

Local offices of Community National Bank and the Newton-Waltham Bank and Trust Company now have this capability, through their participation in the recently developed New England Automated Clearning House.

The system, which will be operated by the Federal Reserve Bank, transfers funds electronically between banks, and from one bank to another, without the need for writing checks. According to bank personnel it has many important time-saving and security advantages.

It enables a company employee to have his pay automatically deposited into his individual checking or savings account every payday. The money will then be instantly available for use, without waiting two or three days or longer for a check to clear. The risk of loss, theft or forgery of an employee's paycheck is eliminated.

Bank customers will also be able to authorize the automatic payment of routine bills such as loan payments and insurance premiums. Another innovation called "Bill Check", provides a checkless method of paying variable-amount bills, such as xhose from public utility companies, with the customer retaining, as he dows now, complete control over the timing and amount of the payment.

Clearing House officials expect that uautomation will reduce check writing and processing, which has been doubling in volume every ten years.

Baker receives Service Citation

Sumner A. Baker of Newton was recently presented the Tufts University Alumni Association's Service Citation.

Baker was presented the award because his "classmates deeply appreciate his many years of dedicated and imaginative service as reunion chairman of the class of 1934."

Edward J. Shea, president of the alumni association, made the presentation as the class' recent reunion.

Kiwanis officers elected

The Kiwanis Club of Newton has elected officers for the coming year.

Officers elected include: president, Charles F. Blackington; first vice president, Edward L. McCallum; second vice president, Leonard Garfield; treasurer, John Balkus; director, Ralph Brisson, Paul K. Daley, Richard F. Foley, Jon Margolis, William M. Noble, Ernst O. Seyfarth. Francis T. Mariner.

Kiwanis Foundation officers elected included: president, I. Alan Lobel; vice president, Robert L. Tennant; treasurer, Robert P. Lurvey; clerk, James F. O'Brien; directors, Charles F. Blackington, John Balkus, Philip Cacciatore, Francis C. Chase, Eugene F. Faucher, Leonard Garfield, Ralph Brisson, Jon Margolis.

Warner Cable names O'Friel

Warner Cable Corp. has named Paul G. O'Friel as vice president and general manager of Warner Cable of Massachusetts, with responsibilities including total management of the corporation's major complex of cable television systems in the Boston area.

O'Friel is currently director of the Lincoln Filene Center for Citizenship and Public Affairs at Tufts University. From 1968 to 1973, he was director of corporate public affairs for the Gillette Co., responsible for public and government relations. In that post he also administered the Gillette Charitable and Educational Foundation, the Corporate Contributions Program and the Gillette Environmental Quality Council.

He formerly held executive management positions in the broadcasting field for over 21 years. From 1956 to 1968, O'Friel served with Westinghouse Broadcasting Co. in various capacities, including: general manager of KDKA-TV, Pittsburgh, Pa.; general manager of WBZ Radio, Boston; general executive, Westinghouse Broadcasting Co. in New York, responsible for special corporate planning and survey projects; and general manager of KDKA Radio, Pittsburgh.

O'Friel entered the broadcasting field in 1953 with the DuMont Television Network, where he was director of personnel and labor relations.

From 1942 to 1953, O'Friel served with the Federal Bureau of Investigation, where he was a special agent in the Detroit, Washington and New York field divisions. He was also assigned to the Pittsburgh and Honolulu FBI offices.

An attorney, he is admitted to practice law in the states of Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, as well as before the Federal Communications Commission and the U.S. Supreme Court.

He is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, where he received his B.A. degree in 1946 and his J.D. in 1949. In addition, he completed the program for senior executives at the Sloan School of Management of Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1963.

A resident of Newton Centre, O'Friel is an active participant in community affairs throughout the Boston area. He currently serves on the boards of directors for the Boston Catholic Television Center; Better Business Bureau of Eastern Mass.; Civic Education Foundation; Massachusetts Association for the Blind; Boys Club of Boston; Big Brothers of Boston; NAACP Positive Program for Boston; Massachusetts Council on Crime and Correction; and Youville Hospital.

Cramer Video holds three-day seminar

Cramer Video, national distributor of video equipment and a division of Cramer Electronics, Inc. hosted a three - day seminar, June 4-6, on video applications and techniques.

The seminar, developed to assist regional businesses, was held at the studios of Channel 27 in Worcester and was televised regionally.

The purpose of the event, according to Daniel Mulhern, general manager of Cramer Video, was two-fold.

"We wanted to illuminate some of the exciting new applications for video in the business and educational markets, and to introduce some exciting new equipment that has recently become available," Mulhern said.

The three day seminar covered areas such as "building a Video Library," "More effective Employee Communications," and the role of cable T.V. in education. Over 500 people attended the seminar, while an estimated 10,000 others viewed the seminar at home.

Copies of the subject material discussed may be obtained by contacting Daniel Mulhern, 20 Hampton Avenue, Needham Heights, Massachusetts 02194.

Med-Assist signs marketing agreement

Alcon Laboratories (NYSE), a leading manufacturer of ethical drugs and allied products, and Med-Assist, Inc. (OTC), a Newton-based research and development firm in the environmental health care field, have signed a licensing and marketing agreement for the United States and Canada.

According to Harold S. Cutter, treasurer, Med-Assist, Inc., the agreement calls for Alcon Laboratories to market several thousand Isol-Aire outpatient units over a two year period which will be manufactured by Med-Assist, Inc. Alcon will market the Isol-Aire under Med-Assist, Inc. trademarks.

Med-Assist Isol-Aire outpatient products purify the air by removing airborne contaminates in the bacteria and virus size range and are designed to ease breathing of persons suffering from allergies, asthma, bronchitis and other respiratory diseases.

Since May of 1972, Med-Assist has conducted extensive research and development while test marketing it's products in cities throughout the United States. According to Cutter, a resident of Newton, the allieance with Alcon marks Med-Assist's first formal marketing agreement with a major medical company in the United States. Med-Assist's products are marketed in Japan through Sumitomo Shoji Kaisha, Ltd.

Citrano honored

Edmidio Citrano of 21 Auburn Street, West Newton, was honored recentiy by the Department of the Army on the occasion of his 25th service anniversary.

Citrano, who is employed in the facilities engineering branch at the Army Materials and Mechanics Research Center in Watertown.

LEONARD F. O'CONNOR of 19 Driftwood Dr., has been named manager of the consumer finance department of the Firsta National Bank of Boston. He joined the bank in 1967 and was made a branch officer in 1969 and a loan officer in 1973. He is a graduate of Colby College and has attended the American Institute of Banking.

Oliver promoted to assistant vice president

Richard F. Oliver has been promoted to the office of assistant vice president at the Guaranty-First Trust Company.

The decision of the board of directors was announced by the Bank's president, Peter A. Lombardi.

In his new capacity, Oliver is responsible for the operational functions concerning commercial loans, mortgages and collections.

Oliver joined the staff of Guaranty-First as teller training supervisor in 1967. He was transferred to the Bank's commercial loan department as systems and personnel coordinator, and in June of 1969, was promoted to the position of assistant treasurer.

During his more than 12 years in the banking field, Oliver's duties and responsibilities have spanned the areas of operations, personnel training and supervision, commercial and installment lending and collections. He has been associated with the United California Bank and Farmers and Merchants Bank in Fairborn, Ohio.

Oliver served four years with the U.S. Air Force as staff sargent-teletype specialist. He has completed courses in banking and related fields of study at U.C.L.A. and the American Institute of Banking.

He, his wife, Darleen, and three children - Dean, Donna and Dennis - make their home in North Reading.

ROBERT W. SMITH, JR., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Smith of 100 Erie Ave., Newton Highlands, has been named associate director of administrative operations for the Mitre Corp. in McLean, Va. A graduate of Northeastern University, Smith joined Mitre Corp. in 1966.

Sturman in company club

Sumner Sturman of 67 Truman Rd., Newton Centre has achieved membership in the winners club of the Combined Insurance Company of America for his sales achievements.

Daniel Pishnock, manager of Combined's region covering Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, said that the requirement of writing 100 or more "Little Giant" introductory travel-accident policies in a week to become a member of the club had been met by Sturman, who joined the company in 1961.

Guest lecturer at MIT

Leonard Abramson, president of First Star Realty Corporation of Newton, was a guest lecturer recently at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His subject was real estate investment financing.

Prints by nature photographer on display at Museum of Science

A temporary display of 70 dye-transfer prints by outstanding nature photographer Eliot Porter offers summer visitors to Boston's Museum of Science a look through the eyes of a keen and patient observer of the natural world.

Taken in Greece, Italy, Iceland, and many parts of the United States, the photographs reveal the abundant rewards of slowing one's pace and looking down. There, between the hurried steps of the casual passerby, is a world in miniature, stunning in its complexity, color, and bauty. Rose petals tossed by the wind on a beach strewn with mussel shells, sunny wildflowers in a tapestry of weeds, moss-cloaked rocks, and the razor-sharp outline of a leaf are brought into the focus of Porter's camera.

The ruins of Greece and Sicily, visited by hordes of tourists and photographed by all of them, are seen with a newness that somehow reinforces their timelessness when Porter, rising at daybreak to avoid the crowds, records them on his film.

Dedicated to conservation, Porter deliberately photographs what remains of the natural landscape, hoping his pictures will alert others to the dire necessity of its being preserved. His work has appeared in many Sierra Club publications, and a variety of others. Among his most recent books is The African Experience, published in conjunction with The Tree Where Man Was Born by Peter Matthiessen.

A recognized photographic master, he is represented in the collections of the Museum of Modern Art, the Smithsonian Institute, and the George Eastman House. He graduated from Harvard fifty years ago and taught there for nine years before resigning to devote all his energies to photography. He received the Conservation Award from the U.S. Department of the Interior in 1967 and was made a Fellow of the Academy of Fine Arts and Science in 1970.

To remain in the Museum's Washburn Gallery through August, the exhibition represents work spanning almost 20 years, from the early 1950's to 1974. A truly instructive display for the would-be nature observer, it also complements the current exhibition, "Color Around Us.," in the Museum's Design Gallery.

There is no admission fee above Museum admission, which is $2 for adults and $1 for ages 5 through 16 and over 65 (half price after 5 p.m. on Fridays). The Museum is a short walk from the MBTA Green Line Science Park stop.

All aspects of nature may be seen at Drumlin Farms

Many people enjoy watching nature's seasonal changes take place. Massachusetts Audubon's Drumlin Farm in Lincoln brings visitors into direct contact with 240 acres of forest and fields and offers the chance to come face-to-face with a vigorous New England farm.

Programs held at the farm carry out the idea of offering educational programs about the natural world to people of all age groups, ranging from very young children to elderly people living in retirement homes. I a special class, four and five-year-olds and the mothers or fathers who bring them learn about the same aspect of nature on separate field trips during each session. "Nature for Senior Citizens" emphasizes aspects of nature that can either be brought indoors or seen from a window. Drumlin Farm staff present the programs at nursing and retirement homes.

In July, the Drumlin Farm Day Camp begins the first of its sessions geard to the abilities and interests of children entering grades three through seven. Mornings are spent on field trips, afternoons are devoted to nature crafts that relate to each camper's interest.

In the first session, "Discover Our Farm and Nature," third and fourth graders are given a broad introduction to the plants and animals, both wild and domesticated, that live on the farm. They observe and help with the care and feeding of the farm's animals and the weeding and harvesting of a special garden planted with a large variety of fruits and vegetables.

A second session offers its fourth and fifth grade participants a list of topics from which they choose two areas they would like to focus on during each of their two weeks of camp. The topics range from edible wild plants to the life in a pond.

In late July a program for fifth and sixth graders uses the perspective of the American Indian as a means of introducing campers to the outdoors and teaching them simple colonial handicrafts such as candle dipping, weaving and making natural dyes.

Special week-long programs for fourth through seventh graders in August titled "Living with the Woods" familiarize the young people enrolled with the wilderness an living safely in it. Campers are given a chance to practise building a shelter, cooking outdoors, first aid and compass reading during overnight treks.

THE FLAG CODE

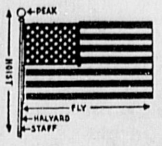

As Adopted by the National Flag Conference, Washington, D.C., June 14-15, 1923, and Revised and Endorsed by the Second National Flag Conference, Washington, May 15, 1924. Revised, March 1943, to Comply with P. L. 623, 77th Congress, Second Session, and as Amended by H. J. Res. 359, Dec. 1942, and by P. L. 396, 83rd Congress, June 14, 1954.

NATIONAL AMERICANISM COMMISSION THE AMERICAN LEGION INDIANAPOLIS, IND., U. S. A.

How to Display the Flag of the United States of America

DESCRIPTION OF THE FLAG

The Flag of the United States of America has 13 horizontal stripes—7 red and 6 white—the red and white stripes alternating, and a union which consists of white stars of five points on a blue field placed in the upper quarter next to the staff and extending to the lower edge of the fourth red stripe from the top. The number of stars is the same as the number of States in the Union.

Effective July 4, 1960*, the canton or union contains 50 stars arranged as indicated in the above reproduction. On the admission of a State into the Union a star will be added to the union of the Flag, and such addition will take effect on the 4th day of July next succeeding such admission. The proportions of the Flag as prescribed by Executive Order of President Taft, October 29, 1912*, are as follows:

Hoist (width) of Flag..	1.
Fly (length) of Flag...	1.9
Hoist (width) of union.	7/13
Fly (length) of union..	0.76
Width of each stripe...	1/13
Diameter of each star.	.0616

PROPER MANNER OF DISPLAYING THE FLAG

There are certain fundamental rules of heraldry, which if understood generally, would indicate the proper method of displaying the Flag of the United States of America. The matter becomes a very simple one if it is kept in mind that the Flag represents the living country and is itself considered as a living thing. The union of the Flag is the honor point; the right arm is the sword arm and therefore the point of danger and hence the place of honor.

1. The Flag should be displayed only from sunrise to sunset, or between such hours as may be designated by proper authority. However, the Flag may be displayed at night upon special occasions when it is desired to produce a patriotic effect. It should be hoisted briskly, but should be lowered slowly and ceremoniously. The Flag should be displayed on all National and State holidays and on historic and special occasions. (However, being the emblem of our country, it ought to fly from every flagpole every day throughout the year, weather permitting.) Special care should be taken to see that the Flag is displayed on the following days: New Year's Day, January 1; Inauguration Day, January 20; Lincoln's Birthday, February 12; Washington's Birthday, February 22; Easter Sunday (variable); Mother's Day, second Sunday in May; Armed Forces Day, third Saturday in May; Memorial Day (half staff until noon), May 30; Flag Day, June 14; Independence Day, July 4; Labor Day, first Monday in September; Citizenship Day, September 17; Columbus Day, October 12; Veterans Day, November 11; Thanksgiving Day, fourth Thursday of November; Christmas Day, December 25; such other days as may be proclaimed by the President of the United States; the birthdays of States (dates of admission); and on State holidays. The Flag should be displayed daily, weather permitting, on or near the main administration building of every public institution. The Flag should be displayed in or near every polling place on election days and, during school days, in or near every schoolhouse.

2. When carried in a procession with another flag or flags, the Flag of the United States of America should be either on the marching right, i.e., the Flag's own right, or when there is a line of other flags, the Flag of the United States of America may be in front of the center of that line.

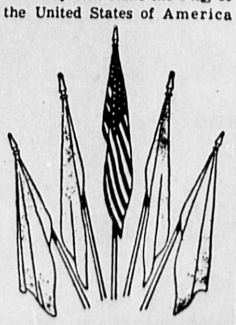

3. When displayed with another flag against a wall from crossed staffs, the Flag of the United States of America should be on the right, the Flag's own right, and its staff should be in front of the staff of the other flag.

4. When a number of flags of States or cities or pennants of societies are grouped and displayed from staffs with the Flag of the United States of America, the latter should be at the center or at the highest point of the group.

5. When flags of States or cities or pennants of societies are flown on the same halyard with the Flag of the United States of America, the latter should always be at the peak. When flown from adjacent staffs the Flag of the United States of America should be hoisted first and lowered last. No such flag or pennant flown in the former position should be placed above, or in the latter position to the right of the Flag of the United States of America, i.e., to the observer's left, except during church services conducted by naval chaplains at sea, when the church pennant may be flown above the Flag during church services for the personnel of the Navy.

6. When flags of two or more nations are displayed they should be flown from separate staffs of the same height and the flags should be of approximately equal size. International usage forbids

PROPER USE OF BUNTING

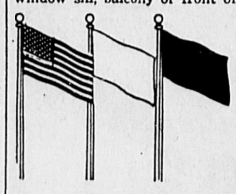

Bunting of the National colors should be used for covering a speaker's desk, draping over the front of a platform and for decoration in general. Bunting should be arranged with the blue above, the white in the middle, and the red below.

the display of the flag of one nation above that of another nation in time of peace.

7. When the Flag is displayed from a staff projecting horizontally or at an angle from the window sill, balcony or front of building, the union of the Flag should go clear to the peak of the staff unless the Flag is at half-staff. (When the Flag is suspended over a sidewalk from a rope, extending from a house to a pole at the edge of the sidewalk, the Flag should be hoisted out from the building towards the pole, union first.)

8. When the Flag is displayed otherwise than by being flown from a staff, it should be displayed flat, whether indoors or out, or so suspended that its folds fall as free as though the Flag were staffed. When displayed either horizontally or vertically against a wall, the union should be uppermost and to the Flag's own right; that is, to the observer's left. When displayed in a window, the Flag should be displayed in the same way; that is, with the union, or blue field, to the left of the observer in the street.

9. When displayed over the middle of the street, the Flag should be suspended vertically with the union to the north in an east and west street or to the east in a north and south street.

10. When used on a speaker's platform, the Flag, if displayed flat, should be displayed above and behind the speaker.

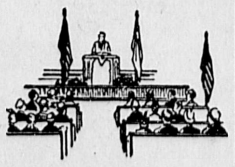

When displayed from a staff in a church or public auditorium, if it is displayed in the chancel of a church, or on the speaker's platform in a public auditorium, the flag should occupy the position of honor and be placed at the clergyman's or speaker's right as he faces the congregation or audience. Any other flag so displayed in the chancel or on the platform should be placed at the clergyman's or speaker's left as he faces the congregation or audience. But when the flag is displayed from a staff in a church or public auditorium elsewhere than in the chancel or on the platform it should be placed in the position of honor at the right of the congregation or audience as they face the chancel or platform. Any other flag so displayed should be placed on the left of the congregation or audience as they face the chancel or platform.

11. When used in connection with the unveiling of a statue or monument, the Flag should form a distinctive feature during the ceremony, but the Flag itself should never be used as the covering for the statue.

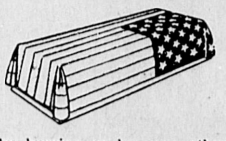

12. When flown at half-staff, the Flag should be hoisted to the peak for an instant and then lowered to the half-staff position; but before lowering the Flag for the day it should be raised again to the peak. By half-staff is meant lowering down the Flag to one-half the distance between the top and the bottom of the staff. On Memorial Day, May 30th, the Flag is displayed at half-staff from sunrise until noon and at full staff from noon until sunset; for the Nation lives and the Flag is the symbol of the living Nation. Crepe is used on the flagstaff only by order of the President.

13. When used to cover a casket, the Flag should be placed so that the union is at the head and over the left shoulder. The Flag should not be lowered into the grave nor allowed to touch the ground. The casket should be carried foot first.

14. When the Flag is in such a condition that it is no longer a fitting emblem for display, it should not be cast aside or used in any way that might be viewed as disrespectful to the National colors, but should be destroyed as a whole privately, preferably by burning or by some other method in harmony with the reverence and respect we owe to the emblem representing our Country.

15. Any rule or custom pertaining to the display of the Flag of the United States of America, set forth herein, may be altered, modified, or repealed, or additional rules with respect thereto may be prescribed by the Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States whenever he deems it to be appropriate or desirable; and any such alteration or additional rule shall be set forth in a proclamation.

CAUTIONS

1. Do not permit disrespect to be shown to the Flag of the United States of America.

2. Do not dip the Flag of the United States of America to any person or any thing. The regimental color, State flag, organization or institutional flag will render this honor.

3. Do not display the Flag with the union down except as a signal of distress.

4. Do not place any other flag or pennant above or, if on the same level, to the right of the Flag of the United States of America.

5. Do not let the Flag touch the ground or the floor, or trail in the water.

6. Do not place any object or emblem of any kind on or above the Flag of the United States of America.

7. The Flag should never be used as drapery of any sort whatsoever, never festooned, drawn back, nor up, in folds, but always allowed to fall free. Bunting of blue, white and red, always arranged with the blue above, the white in the middle, and the red below, should be used for covering a speaker's desk, draping the front of a platform, and for decoration in general.

8. Do not fasten the Flag in such manner as will permit it to be easily torn.

9. Do not drape the Flag over the hood, top, sides or back of a vehicle, or of a railway train or boat. When the Flag is displayed on a motor car, the staff should be affixed firmly to the chassis, or clamped to the radiator cap.

10. Do not display the Flag on a float in a parade except from a staff.

11. Do not use the Flag as a covering for a ceiling.

12. Do not carry the Flag flat or horizontally, but always aloft and free.

13. Do not use the Flag as a portion of a costume or of an athletic uniform. Do not embroider it upon cushions or handkerchiefs nor print it on paper napkins or boxes.

14. Do not put lettering of any kind upon the Flag.

15. Do not use the Flag in any form of advertising nor fasten an advertising sign to a pole from which the Flag is flown.

16. Do not display, use or store the Flag in such a manner as will permit it to be easily soiled or damaged.

17. The Flag should never be used as a receptacle for receiving, holding, carrying, or delivering anything.

SALUTE TO THE FLAG

During the ceremony of hoisting or lowering the Flag, or when the Flag is passing in a parade or in a review, all persons present should face the Flag, stand at attention, and salute. Those present in uniform should render the military salute. When not in uniform, men should remove the headdress with the right hand, holding it at the left shoulder, the hand being over the heart. Men without hats should salute in the same manner. Aliens should stand at attention. Women should salute by placing the right hand over the heart. The salute to the Flag in the moving column should be rendered at the moment the Flag passes.

THE SHIELD

The shield of the United States of America has 13 vertical stripes, 7 white and 6 red, with a blue chief without stars.

The Green Thumb

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

HOME GROWN CORN: A common mistake home gardeners make is to make just one planting of corn, and have the corn come on all at one time. To stretch your harvest period, make successive sowings, using an early, midseason and late variety. In most areas you can plant corn as late as the 4th of July and still get a good crop.

Don't forget to plant sweet corn in blocks of at least three rows side by side, rather than in a single long row, to insure pollination and development of a full set of kernels.

Quite often corn borers and corn ear worms are discouraging to the home gardener. Borers attack only the earlier crops, entering the ear from the stalk or side. They can be controlled by four applications of Sevin at five-day intervals. Start when the corn is about 18" high and drive the dust or spray down into the crown and axils of the leaves.

The corn earworm principally affects the midseason crop, and is larger then the borer. It enters the ear only through the silks. Make applications of Sevin dust or spray at 2 to 3 day intervals to check this pest, starting as soon as the silks begin to come well out. Keep the silks lightly but thoroughly covered.

Varieties: Naming the best varieties for the home gardener is tricky business, simply because there are so many good ones on the market. If you buy "collections" of corn, as some seed houses offer, you should have plenty of corn right through the fall months.

TULIPS AND AFFFODILS: When should you dig up tulip and daffodil bulbs? After flowering, the leaves should be allowed to remain as green as possible as they are making food for good flowering next year. Never cut the foliage off when flowering is completed, unless it is half yellow.

Early removal stops growth of the bulbs that have normally used up much of the food reserves during early season growth and flowering. Good vigorous foliage for as long as possible means better bulbs and flowers. If bulbs must be lifted, dig a good trench, lift the clumps carefully with a spade or lifting folk and transfer the clumbs (with soil) to the trench, then water.

HERB ANDERSON Presents the 84 mpg Volkswagen.

Since all the car manufacturers are conducting their own mileage tests these days, we at Volkswagen thought we'd conduct one too.

So we modified our body—and our engine. And, of course, we got someone who didn't weigh much to drive.

Lo and behold, we got 84 miles per gallon!

Ridiculous? Nobody normally drives like this? Of course. That's precisely our point.

Nobody normally drives like most of those tests you're seeing.

Volkswagen: An honest 25* miles per gallon.

Pet Care Corner

PETS RESENT MOVING DAY TOO!

By Richard W. Bryant, Director of Education

Most people spend a good deal of time preparing children for a move to a new house, but they may forget to prepare the family pet - the one member of the household most likely to react indignantly to the change.

Dogs and cats are creatures of habit, with possessive attitudes toward their own street, house, dishes and daily routine. An abrupt change can create injured feelings and resentful behavior, but with a little effort you can speed up your pet's adjustment to the move.

First of all, put familiar things in the new place. Your dog's old bed or blanket, for instance, should be placed in a quiet spot where he can retreat from the bustle of unpacking. If your pet has a favorite toy, be sure to unpack that first and let him discover it himself in the new place.

Try to position food and water dishes in a spot similar to their location in the former house. Keeping to your pet's regular feeding schedule is also important to readjustment.

If your yard is not fenced, be sure your dog is ssecurely tied when outdoors. Cats will usually try to return to the old house if allowed out. Despite stories about their unique homing instincts, most cats will get lost after traveling even a few strange blocks, so keep your cat indoors until it has adopted the new house as its own.

If you want your family and your pets to be welcome additions to the new neighborhood, be sure to investigate and comply with your community's pet regulations, including leash laws, license requirements, health and innoculation rules.

And, on the subject of health, ask your neighbors to recommend a veterinarian and find out where the local animal hospital is. Knowing these things in advance will save precious time in case of a medical emergency.

Having a problem with your pet? Write to Pet Care Corner, Animal Rescue League of Boston, P.O. Box 265, Boston, Mass. 02117. Space permitting, we will try to answer your inquiries in this column.

Wednesday plant clinics

A series of nine free weekly Wednesday Plant Clinics will be conducted during July and August by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society in Horticultural Hall, 300 Massachusetts Avenue, in Boston.

The clinics, open to the general public and members of the society, will be held on Wednesdays from 4 to 7 p.m. beginning this week.

Persons attending the clinics can bring in any type of plant with problems for assistance from the society's experts. Potting, pruning, transplanting, cuttings, and other garden topics will be discussed in the weekly sessions. Lawn and tree problems will also be covered at the clinics.

A plant swap will be held at the clinic for individuals to exchange potted cuttings with other persons.

In addition to the discussions, there will be a limited supply of house plants, soil and other planting materials available for purchase.

William Thompson, acting executive director of the society, and Edwin Steffek, editor of the society's publication, Horticulture Magazine, will direct the clinics with other experts from the society.

Separating smokers

Taking teens as a whole, the number who smoke - and that means one or more cigarettes per week or one or more per day - is still only 15 percent of the teenage population. By age 18, however, almost one-third of boys smoke; one-quarter of girls do.

These rates stay steady through the college years and don't change too much for adults. Results of a recent national Campus Opinion poll show that 25 percent of college students smoke five or more cigarettes a day. But of those who said they do not smoke, about one in three reported that they had, at one time, smoked. This is a significant increase from earlier surveys and indicates that a large number of students may be starting to smoke and then quitting.

The smoking rates are too high, of course. But the facts are that most teenagers, college students, and adults are nonsmokers. And nonsmokers of all ages are speaking up for their rights these days. It's fascinating to find, for example, that the majority of high schoolers think smoking in public places should be banned by law except where there are special sections to separate smokers.

Scholastic Magazine in its annual survey of the attitudes of junior and senior high school students polled 60,000 youngsters in 2,000 schools across the country. Sixty-nine percent, an overwhelming majority, favored the smoking ban. Only 11 percent felt it would infringe on the rights of smokers, while 20 percent were undecided on the whole issue.

There is a growing consciousness that smokers violate the rights of nonsmokers, who choose not to smoke and instead are forced to breathe second-hand smoke. The American Lung Association of Boston is working hard to protect nonsmokers in public places and insure their rights to breathe clean air. It's a matter of life and breath.

Spare tire obsolete

By EDWARD S. LECHTZIN
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — New developments from the tire industry could make the spare tire about necessary as the hand crank.

Whether the tire and a to manufacturers will be able to convince motorists they don't need a spare is another story altogether. Thousands of tubes are sold each year although tubeless tires have been on the market since the 1950's.

The B. F. Goodrich Co. has developed a tire that will seal most punctures while the Firestone Tire & RXUBBER Co. has followed a different route with a tire that can be driven 50 miles after going flat. Both could eliminate the need for a fifth tire.

The energy rrisis has pushed Americans toward smaller and more economical cars and, at the same time, has left automakers looking for ways to cut down the weight of their cars. Automotive engineers would love to be able to eliminate the space and weight taken up by a spare tire, its wheel and jack.

Test Drive Made

"It's a kind of emotional subject trying to get motorists to rely on just the four tires on their car," observed one Firestone official during a display of the company's Steel Radial 5 0 ACT (Advanced Concept Tire).

Firestone engineers said tests have shown that a flat ACT tire can be driven about 50 miles at about 40 miles per hour, depending on what caused the tire damage and added there was an even greater margin built into the tire. A conventional tire would be ruined if driven only a fraction of a mile at that speed.

To prove the capability of the tire to run while it's flat, a crew drove 245 miles in a Ford Pinto on which the front tire was punctured and the air valve stem removed to make sure the tire was flat.

The demonstration for newsmen covered the distance between Firestone headquarters in Akron, Ohio, to a ski lodge at Clarkston, north of Detroit, over turnpikes, freeways and city streets. They maintained a legal speed limit of 55 miles per hour on the turnpikes and freeways.

Bump Designed

The tire runs so smoothly while flat that engineers have decided to design in a "bump" that will cause a slight vibration while it's running flat. The "bump" would warn the driver that the tire needs attention, but would not affect the steering or handling of the car.

While company officials say no price has been set for the tire when it is finally introduced during the 1976 model year, it probably will be more expensive than conventional steel radial tires. One objective, however, is to make four cheaper than five of the present tires.

The ACT steel radial tire is constructed in such a way that should a flat occur the tire would settle down onto the wheel rim. The tire would not flop on the rim, as does a conventional tire when air pressure is lost. It is the flopping that results in steering control difficulty and damage to both the tire and the wheel.

Richard A. Riley, Firestone president, said that flat tires are becoming less common with the increased use of belted tires.

"But our surveys show that one-third of car-owning households had a flat tire during the past year," Riley said.

Punctures Sealed

He added that 72 per cent of these occurred within two miles of a service station, while 5 per cent were more than 10 miles from a service facility. The surcey also showed that 38 per cent of the tires which went flat were well worn at the time.

While Firestone looks for a way to let a driver keep going even though he has a flat tire, Goodrich would rather design a tire that probably won't go flat in most cases.

Goodrich put its self-sealing Golden Lifesaver steel radial tire on the replacement market in January. It has a cellular liner system that has successfully sealed punctures up to one-quarter inch in diameter.

The idea of mending tire punctures through the use of a built-in puncture sealant isn't new.

Technical Problems

In 1891, a patent application filed with the U.S. Patent Office described an air-cushioned tire with a "lining or partial lining of viscous or plastic rubber, which will provide for the closing up of holes made in the air-cell of the tire...will close up the pierced opening when the piercing object is withdrawn."

Goodrich marketed a self-sealing tubeless tire in the early 1950s, but by the end of the decade only a few brands of tubeless tires with a sealant feature remained on the market, mainly because of technical problems with the sealant. The superior quality of tubeless tires themselves made the extra-cost feature uneconomical.

In the new Goodrich tire, the sealing liquid has been replaced by an elastometric cellular liner which is an integral part of the tire.

When the tire is punctured, the individual cells that contain the same pressure as the tire itself expand to seal around the puncturing object. This is a mechanical reaction, entirely different from the behavior of soft, sticky sealants that depend on fluidity for their sealing properties.

When the puncturing object —such as a large nail —is pulled out, a coating on the interior of the tire casing helps in the hole-plugging operation and the tire can continue to provide normal service with no repairs.

Music news

By WILBUR G. LANDREY

NEW YORK (UPI) — If the string quartet is the purest form of music, then Beethoven was the composer who stretched it to its limit and some would say, beyond.

Two recent albums show how he developed the form after those six early quartets he wrote in the lines already traced by Mozart and Haydn. The Vegh quartet has recorded the five "middle" quartets, Nos. 7 to 12 in a 3-record import from Telefunken (SPA 25096-T 1-3). The Juilliard Quartet has recorded the five "late' quartets, Nos. 12 to 16 (Columbia M4 31730—four records).

In the middle quartets, beginning in 1806, Beethoven had already carried the form far beyond the classical quartet of his precursors. The Vegh group is the successor of the Hungarian quartet, also led by Sandor Vegh and its performances, recorded in France, are sound.

In the late quartets, beginning in 1822, Beethoven was for years regarded as a deaf and half mad genius for having written these works almost too difficult to play. We can listen to them with more understanding now, but difficult they are.

The Juilliard Quartet has a magnificent sound and brings a surprising clarity to what it plays. It has also recently recorded Elliott Carter's quartets 2 and 3 (a first recording M 32738), Ginestera's quartet No. 2 (also a first and shorter Stravinsky piecees M 32809) and Schubert's Quintet in C (M 32808).

Put cars out to pasture

According to the local Christmas Seal Agency, the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association, that sacred cow - the family car - was put out to pasture during the energy crunch. Small cars, car pools, and public transit took their place in the sun.

Days will be a lot sunnier and less polluted if the family car stays off the streets. Detriot got the message fast and dramatically increased its production of small cars, which run on less gas and spew fewer pollutants into everybody's lungs. As in Massachusetts, car pools caught on in many areas and may become permanent fixtures - spurred on by free or preferential parking provided by employers, by reduced insurance rates, and by decreased bridge rolls (in Delaware). Other allurements such as cash bonuses, green stamps, free gas, and dinners-on-the-house have also been offered by employers.

SOUTHEASTERLY: by said lot 184 and by land now or formerly of F. A. Reichert, two hundred thirty-one and 95-100 feet.

Said parcel is shown as lot 191A on said plan.

All of said boundaries are determined by the Court to be located as shown on a subdivision plan, as approved by the Court, filed in the Land Registration Office, a copy of which is filed in the Registry of Deeds for the South Registry District of Middlesex County in Registration Book 522, Page 51, with Certificate 78401.

There is appurtenant to the above described land the right to use in common with others entitled thereto all abutting private ways shown on plan filed in Registration Book 220, Page 169, namely Upland Avenue, Andrew Street, Columbia Avenue and Old Winchester Street.

The above described land is subject to an Order by the City of Newton that common sewer be laid and maintained through Winchester Street and Estimated Assessments, Documents 203448, and to a taking for relocating &c. Winchester Street, Document 206224 setting forth that she desires that all of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than twenty-four thousand dollars, and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Cambridge before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the tenth day of July 1974, the return day of this citation.

Witness Edward T. Martin, First Judge of said Court, this tenth day of June 1974.

GBYSO a smash in Columbia

The musical excellence of one hundred Greater Boston youngsters has generated an overwhelming response and spurred an enthusiastic north-south exchange program.

The youngsters are members of the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra who conducted a 10-day concert tour to Bogata and the capital of Antioquia, Colombia, Medellin.

Their ininerary includes four concerts, five chamber music recitals, a series of open rehearsals, music education programs and a performance on the Colombian national radio-television network. INRAVISION.

The tour opened Wednesday, June 19 with a concert at Bogota's Teatro Municipale. GBYSO Conductor, Walter Eisenberg led the orchestra in a performance of Tschaikowsky's Symphony No. 5 in E minor, op. 64, the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" by Wagner and works by de Falla, Vivaldi and Gershwin. The initial performance received a five-minute standing ovation and was followed by rave reviews in the local press the next day.

The orchestra's Bogota debut also featured a private chamber performance at the residence of the United States Ambassador and Mrs. Viron P. Vakey, a public children's concert and a chamber recital at the Colegio Nueva Granada.

The five-day stay in Bogota was not all work and no play. Formal and informal programs with Colombian peers were scheduled. During a late evening dance at a local high school cafeteria, many of the students made acquaintances and jointly planned get-togethers later in the week, which included dinners at private homes and local restaurants, bowling, ice skating and movies.

On Sunday, June 25, the group flew from Bogata to Medellin for the concluding five days of their tour. Advance press reports from Bogota generated anticipation for the orchestra's appearances in the Andean capital.

A public organ recital, Monday evening, June 24, by 17-year-old Carol Heanue of West Roxbury at Medellin's Bascilica Metropolitana attracted more than 3,000 local citizens. The absolutely silent audience listened to works of J. S. Bach and Louis Vierne, and expressed its appreciation with standing applause.

The highly professional quality of this high school group, less than 30 per cent of whom pursue a career in music, continued to astonish Colombians who have attended the group's concerts. The orchestra's amazing ability and unique program have been discussed with music educatoors and local patrons of the arts during several daytime seminars in Bogota and Medellin.

By their example, Eisenberg and the orchestra's board of directors are working to stimulate similar programs in Colombia. Open workshops, addresses at local colleges and universities and extensive plans for on-going communications are a large part of the Youth Symphony's south-of-the-border mission.

An immediate example of the success of this program was the announcement of the appointment of GBYSO trombonist, Marshall Stith to the Bogota Philharmonica Orchestra. Stith, who graduated from Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts Music Program has been a coach with the Youth Symphony for the past two years. In addition, he has been the personal instructor for the orchestra's brass ensemble. During his affiliation with the Bogota Philharmonic, he will teach and coach the brass section of the orchestra.

Without question, the group generated a significantly personal rapport with the citizens of Colombia. Numerous endeavors between individuals for mutual aid and assistance have been arranged. These efforts characterize the original basis of the Massachusetts-Colombian laison which was formed in 1964 under the Partners of the Americas program.

The Partners is a people to people effort through which thousands of private citizens in the United States and Latin America work directly together to improve relations in the Americas while carrying out specific self-help programs for economic, social and cultural development. Through the Partners, Massachusetts has benn linked with Antioquia, Colombia, and under its honorary chairwoman, Mrs. Jessie Sargent, an active program has been developed. Past exchanges have included the delivery of medical supplies, an extensive student exchange program, a special visit to Massachusetts by a Colombian delegation and many cultural and educational interchanges.

This is the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra's fourth international tour. It has previously performed in Switzerland, England and Israel. The Colombian tour is sponsored by the U.S.I.A. in Bogota, the Partners of the Americas in Medellin and several local corporations.

GBYSO was founded in 1958 by Boston University to give orchestral training to young musicians and to supplement the music education programs in public schools. One hundred greater Boston communities are represented by the orchestra members, who are between the ages of 13 and 18.

Library begins diverse activities

"Dig It Up at Your Public Library" posters herald the start of Newton Free Library's summer program for children, which includes a total of 78 summer events for Newton boys and girls.

The full schedule of summer activities, including the summer reading program, creative activities, a treasure chest game and story hours and film, went into action July 2 at 2:30 p.m. at the Junior Library (formerly the Boys' & girls' Library) 126 Vernon Street, Newton Corner. This was announced by Mrs. Beryl Beatley, Newton Free Library's supervisor of children's services.

Major activities planned by the staff of the NFL junior department include: reading contests, pet shows, international folk tale story hours, and creativity programs, which will involve making mobiles, terrariums and puppets. Children will also learn about early New England, Robin Hood, Sherwood Forest, and Arthur and his knights. Boys and girls in grades 4 - 8 will participate in additional special projects and do book reviews.

The story hours, contests and creativity programs are planned to challenge, stimulate and excite the talents, skills, and minds of the boys and girls.

All Newton boys and girls are invited to join the fun and to participate in the Newton Free Library's wide range of activities.

Certificates for participation will be awarded at a special party in the fall.

The free programs are scheduled in the junior departments of the Branch Libraries throughout the city. Most of them require pre-registration. People can pick up the NFL's summer bulletin or check with the individual branch for specific dates and times, as programs and times are subject to change.

Drawings by New England artists at DeCordova Museum

"New England Drawing '74", an exhibition of recent drawings by 86 New England artists, will be shown throughout the summer at the DeCordova Museum in Lincoln, Mass.

According to Museum Director Frederick Walkey, this is " the first major survey of New England drawing in the past decade."

The exhibition contains 104 drawings selected from almost 1,300 entries submitted in a regional competition organized and juried by members of the Museum staff.

The exhibition presents a broad cross-section of contemporary New England talent. Many of the artists are relatively young and unknown, and for them the show represents the first public recognition of their work. Other exhibitors have long been among the leading figures on the New England art scene.

Describing the exhibition as a "feast of styles, techniques and ideas", Curator Carlo Lamagna notes the presence of such diverse influences as surrealism, pop art, op art, abstract expressionism and new realism. Some exhibitors are concerned primarily with representation in the classical sense, with problems of composition and space. For others, the process of drawing becomes a form of spontaneous, highly personal creative expression.

"New England Drawings" will be shown at the DeCordova Museum through Sunday, Sept. 15. Museum hours are 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Tuesday to Friday; and 1:30-5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday. Admission to the Museum and Park is $1.50 for adults and 50c for those under 21.

Chorus pro musica to give concert in Lincoln

Alfred Nash Patterson, founder and director of the Chorus pro Musica, will bring his 70-voice choral group to the DeCordova Museum in Lincoln for an outdoor concert on Sunday, July 7, at 4 p.m.

This is a year of celebration for the Chorus pro Musica, the 25th year of its founding.

Conversations with Patterson and members of the Chorus pro Musica reveal the harmony that has produced a vital, cohesive organization. Patterson extols the virtues of the group in describing the Chorus' founding, history and goals.

Speaking with Chorus members after a concert, one senses first their admiration and affection for their director, their joy in singing for him, and the personal satisfaction that singing with the Chorus offers.

These sentiments are voiced by college and post-graduate students, homebodies, businessmen, composers, professional church singers and music students — all from the greater Boston area. The Chorus has collected a loyal following of choral music devotees since their beginning in the basement of a Cambridge church. When Patterson became "mid-wife" to the Chorus, it moved to the Old South Church in Boston where he is organist and choir director.

The Chorus' 10 or 12 concerts each year take it to the largest cities in New England and New York and involve collaborations with the likes of Bernstein, Steinberg, Leinsdorf, Munch and Koussevitzky. The Boston Symphony is an old friend, and the Chorus recently presented a joint performance of Verdi's "Requiem" with the B.S.O.

Patterson's choice of programs has focused on "unknown gems from the past" and on contemporary music, with emphasis on the rare or little known. He has consistently treated the public to first performances of works. This avant-garde approach is tempered with a "healthy proportion of classics" to produce a thoughtful yet provocative program balance.

The July 7 concert at DeCordova will begin with music from the period of the American Revolution by William Billings (1746-1800), an innovative composer who influenced the course of early American music. The Chorus will sing Revolutionary War songs that were sung with patriotic fervor by soldiers and church-goers, and a choral selection called "Jargon."

The second section of the program, entitled "A Connecticut Yankee Leaps Fifty Years," contains work by Charles Ives (1874-1954), another composer far ahead of his time. Ives heard sounds in unusual relationships, and he took delight in combining different keys and rhythms in music interpreting the basic dissonance of American life.

Another view of historic America will be presented in pieces by Raymond Wilding-White, a contemporary composer who has taken his texts from inscriptions on gravestones in an ancient cemetery in Bennington, Vermont. Predictably, there is an element of down-to-earth Yankee character and humor in the words and music.

The program concludes with Aaron Copeland's "In the Beginning," offering a climatic and dramatic fusion of harmony and dissonance. Alfred Nash Patterson describes it as "the major a capella work of the first half of this century."

Students win prizes in annual music contest

Four Newton students won prizes recently in the Mass. Music Teachers Association's annual statewide music contest.

Scott Griggs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kent Griggs, 40 Bolton Rd., Newtonville, won a first prize trophy in the piano performance intermediate E. division.

Vincent D'Alleva, son of Mr. and Mrs. Remo D'Alleva, 25 Rangely Rd., West Newton, won a third prize trophy.

Griggs and D'Alleva are fourth year students of Mrs. Sylvia L. White of Newtonville.

Howard Mark Cohen, son of Sumner H. Cohen, 91 Mandalay Rd., and Mrs. Louis Sones, won a third place prize in the piano intermediate B. division.

Robert B. Fisch, son of Gilbert R. Fisch, 1650 Commonwealth Ave., West Newton, won a third place prize in the pinao intermediate C. division.

Two pupils of Mrs. Mary Ad Barnoff, 27 Trinity Ter., Newton Centre, won first place prizes in voice competition.

A pupil of Karen Komar, 61 Wade St., Newton Highlands, also won a first place prize in voice competition.

Conductor

Alfred Nash Patterson of Newton is founder and conductor of "Chorus Pro Musica"." The 60-voice choral group will give an outdoor concert in Lincoln July 7.

VOL. 104 NO. 28 | NEWTON, MASSACHUSETTS, THURSDAY, JULY 11, 1974 | PRICE FIFTEEN CENTS

Senior center opening today

The Newtonville Senior Citizen Drop-In Center at 41 Austin St. will be officially opened by Mayor Theodore Mann on Thursday, July 11, at 11 a.m.

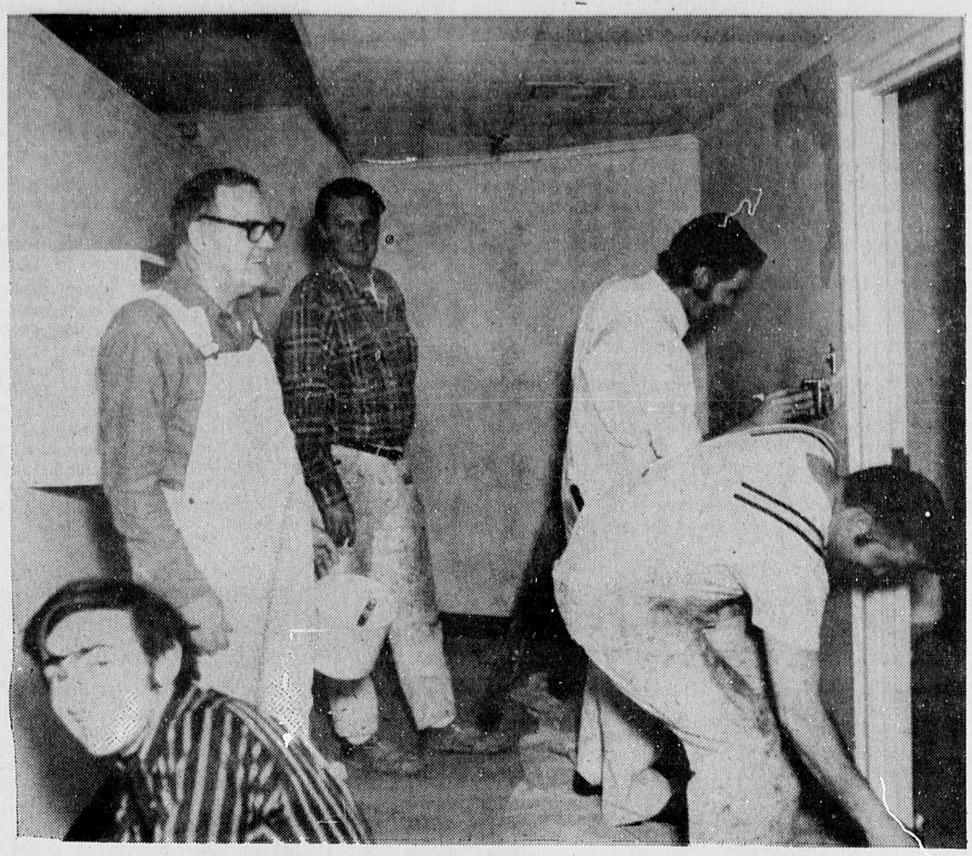

The center will be open every Monday through Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Plans for Sunday hours are being considered.

The center, staffed by senior citizens, many of whom are members of RSVP, will provide Newton's older citizens with various health screening services, Social Security information, tax assistance, and legal aid.

Two permanent services will be put into operation within the next few weeks at the centrr. The senior citizen job bank will place seniors in both full and part-time jobs as well as volunteer positions. The telephone reassurance program will provide a lifeline to shut-ins by providing daily telephone contact to those unable to leave their homes.

Located in an area of the city accessible to public transportation the center will serve as a feedback center, helping the city to keep abreast of the needs of its elderly population.

Both businesses and private sectors of the community have contributed invaluable time and resources. The Star Market Corporation, which donated the facility, the Newton Chapter of the Mass. Society of Painters and Decorators, the J. Homestock Company, and hundreds of private citizens have shared in the establishment of the city's first five-day-a-week senior center.

All set

Order 25% parking cut

Laws on parking promulgated by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency seem to have sneaked up on Newton.

Under the EPA ruling, all employers of more than 50 people — both businesses and municipalities — must reduce their present number of employees' parking spaces by 25 per cent. An "action plan" must be submitted by each employer to the EPA by July 31.

The goal of the EPA regulation is to reduce the two major pollutants in the air, carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons. The reduction will be accomplished by decreasing the number of cars on the road through the use of carpools and greater use of public transportation.

According to Lewis Songer, executive vice-president of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce, "probably more than 100 businesses" in Newton will be affected by the EPA parking regulation. Customer parking is not affected.

The Chamber of Commerce has notified all its members employing more than 50 persons, Songer said.

There are several suits pending, according to Songer, to obtain an extension of the deadline, but none that he knows in Newton.

The city of Newton as an employer will have to reduce the number of parking spaces for all its employees by 25 per cent at all parking locations, including the senior and junior high schools.

A plan will have to be submitted by the city to EPA by Sept. 30, 1974, for preventing overflow from employee parking lots onto the street. In other words, no employer may count on employees' being able to park on the street to make up for the reduced number of spaces in the lot.

Planning Director Charles Thomas said this week that he had no plans yet to submit to the EPA for the city, and that so far only one business firm had been to Planning Department for advice.

The greatest effect on the city as an employer may be on the School Department, which now provides parking for most of its teachers and other employees.

Newton North High School is presently in the midst of plans for a 300-car parking lot. There are about 280 full-time teachers at Newton North, according to the Planning Department, so it would appear that there will be a need for about only 250 spaces, including those for the part-time teachers.

No parking lot for students is contemplated for Newton North High School.

Newton South High School, which has a parking lot for students, will have to take steps to insure that teachers' cars do not overlfow into the students' lot, Paul Keough of the EPA said.

There may be a conflict between local zoning ordnances and the EPA regulations. In this case "federal law preempts local law," according to Robert Thompson, EPA assistant regional counsel.

Noncompliance with the EPA regulations, which carry the weight of law, subjects employers to fines eventually, although "evidence of good faith" in trying to devise a plan to reduce parking may be accepted initially.

The plans must be in effect by May 31, 1975.

Recreation Commission

Penney's fate still uncertain

Former Recreation Department head John Penney will be available to the department on a contractual basis if his successor, Russell Halloran, finds that his services are needed, a spokesman for Mayor Theodore Mann said this week.

Penney is on vacation now, he said.

Penney may be in line for a short-term job with the new Cpmprehensive Employment and Training Act office in Newton which will be in operation shortly. Penney would direct a program supplementing current recreation opportunities for disadvantaged children in 10 communities in the Newton area.

If Halloran wishes to employ Penney on a contractual basis, a request for an appropriation would have to be made to the Board of Aldermen. Its passage would probably meet strong opposition.

Penney's status in the city administration has not been clear for some time. After the appointment of Halloran as head of the Recreation Department, Mayor Mann requested the Board of Aldermen to create a new position, assistant Recreation Commissioner, for Penney.

After two months of debate, much of it in closed meetings, it was determined that such a request could not be granted. Another approach, to hire Penney on a six-month contract, also did not work.

Halloran took office July 1, and there is no money in the 1974-75 budget to fund another position.

The eight-member Recreation Commission is taking another look at itself and its operation during the change of command in the department.

Commissioner Paul Burke suggested at a recent Recreation Commission meeting that the city solicitor be asked for a definition of "the duties, obligations, and poers of the of the commission."

They are not clearly defined in the ordinance, Burke said, and the direction that the commission "shall advise the mayor and the Board of Aldermen" is too vague.

Commissioner Lynne Arthur replied that an ordinace change is being studied by Ald. Terry Morris.

Morris, she said, plans too meet with a recreation expert from a national recreation association for his advice on how too define the responsibility of the commission.

Concannon signatures challenged

Newton alderman Thomas Concannon, a candidate for Middlesex County district attorney, faces a serious challenge of the validity of the signatures of his nomination papers.

Concannon said Tuesday that, although he had known of a challenge by Mrs. Mary McMenimen of Lowell, whom he termed "a friend of Droney's" (Concannon's opponetn, incumbent John Droney), he found out the full extent of the problem only last week.

The main problem, Concannon said, is the filling in of the word "same" instead of the customary ditto marks. He himself, as well as others, put "same" on the nomination papers, which has been done for years, he said.

Until now, no one had known that such a procedure was incorrect, if it is, Concannon said.

Other aspects of Concannon's papers that were challenged were about 200 duplications of signatures, and, particularly disturbing to Concannon, about 50 signatures that were denied by the supposed signers.

Alan Licarie, executive secretary of the Newton Election Commission, whose staff certified 1,200 of Concannon's 1,350 signatures, defended the commission's not catching the duplications.

"As far as the amount of work we had in the last week, it would be impossible to keep track of duplications. We had several people working on each candidate's papers, and there is no way to note duplications."

Concerning the use of "same," written in, Licarie said "same" had always been all right in Newton.

"What we need is a state election commission. Now there are 351 cities and towns, and 351 different ways of doing things," Licarie said. "There should be the same standards in every community."

Licarie filed a bill last year to establish a state election commission. The bill was defeated.

Diane is a spectator with a purpose

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
Staff Correspondent

"Everyone's basically a spectator of life," says Diane Ossinger, who in public life is the mayor's attractive and outgoing executive secretary and who in private life chases fire engines and police cars for the sheer "thrill" of it.

If you think its odd, just think of the times you've slowed down on the highway thinking you're going to see some grisly collision and what you get is some guy changing a flat. And actually most of us chase fire engines, but only down the block.

Diane, however, is serious about her hobby and sleeps next to a small police radio monitor listening for fire calls and police calls. Not only does she follow by call but also by instinct. One night, around three or four, she was awakened by the smell of smoke and threw on a raincoat to attend the fire three or four blocks away.

"It's not the burning of property that fascinates me, it's the coordination between so many men and the fact that they do not get in each other's way," says Diane reverently.

She claims this hobby began when she was a youngster fascinated by sirens and was fed by a friend of the family who was a member of the Newton Fire Auxiliary.

Chasinf fire engines and police cars is a hobby that Diane loves and occasionally on her lunch hour will get in her car to see a fire. In fact she says that once she's in her car and hears sirens "not much will stop me." She's presently looking for a police monitor to outfit her car with.

Does she dress for the occasion? Not a chance. She's been to fires and accidents in her nightgown, flimsy slippers, even with rollers in her hair. Even bad weather doesn't deter her and she's been out in bad storms.

The worst fire she ever saw was in Canada. She was on a trip and stumbled upon it by accident. "There was a farmhouse engulfed in flames with no available water supply . . . an explosion began the fire and it wiped out an entire family."

"I hate to see death, it leaves you witha sick feeling," she says. She did encounter death one year ago when she came to witness an accident on Beacon Street where a police cadet was killed. "I was coming home from Boston about 11:30 p.m. and saw two police cars . . . when you see more than one you know something is happening." She followed the cars to Waban Square, the scene of the head-on collision.

At home Diane has a book with code numbers listed which she uses to locate the source of the fire call and is knowledgeable about police codes. She would have wanted to join the police force and still would like to "but because of my age I couldn't think of it." She laughed and said, ' I wouldn't have the physical stamina."

She says her hobby is exhilarating and if I see a police car going, it does something inside me like a shot of adrenalin."

"I find the swift action intriguing, there's so much to see." Awed by the teamwork it takes at the scene of an accident or fire, she has watched firemen save people, a dog, furniture and antiques.

One evening while taking her mother home from work, she spotted a cloud of smoke on the Pike. She dropped her mother off and dashed to the fire which turned out to be at the Rumford Avenue Battery Company. She stayed at that fire until midnight.

"There was never a duplication of effort, the fire was constantly changing from explosions occurring from battery acids, and the men were constantly shifting."

She says he's basically "nosy, I like to know what's going on or I would feel I missed out." But her conversations also reveal a genuine awe and respect for the police and fire men.

At the scene of an accident or fire, she stays well in the background, but if you're ever up in the mayor's office, stop in and say hello. And if you know the fire chief, the one thing Diane would love is a tour of the fire department anf of all the modern equipment since she's already had a tour of the police department.

Personnel director named

Paul C. Somers of Newton Centre has been appointed Newton's personnel director, Mayor Theodore Mann announced this week.

Somers will assume his new position Aug. 1 at a salary of $16,200.

Arnold Kublin, formerly personnel director for about three months, left the city officially July 1 to take a position in an indistiral firm.

Somers' currently is personnel director for the city of Attleboro. His previous experience includes management training in a Boston bank, directing curricular research for the Cambridge School of Weston, and work with the New York City Department of Correction and as a case-aide supervisor for a halfway house.

Somers has a B.A. degree from Suffolk University and a Master in Education degree from New York University Graduate School of Education. He has also attended Babson College Graduate School.

Somers is 29 years old, married and the father of one child, and lives at 136 Warren St., Newton Centre.

Law establishes advisory board

A new law effective July 1, 1974, has established "county advisory boards" in an effort to give cities and towns some say in county budgets.

The Middlesex County advisory board will have 54 members, one from each community in the county, but Newton's vote on the board will count 11.24 per cent of the total vote, based on the fact that Newton pays 11.24 per cent of the county assessment.

Representatives to the new boards are to be appointed by the chief executive of each community.

The boards are to meet publicly at least once before the submission of the county budgets by the county commissioners to the State House.

If a board opposes by a two-thirds vote any part of the county budget, it will file a report with the Joint Committee on Legislation, indicating which items in the county budget it would like to have changed.

The joint committee would then have to act on both the budget as submitted and upon the recommended changes.

The law and its applications have been little publicized and consequently seem to be almost unknown by municipal officials.

Mayor Theodore Mann of Newton, asked about his appointment to the Middlesex County advisory board, said through a spokesman that he plans to appoint his budget officer when that position is filled.

The bill establishing the county advisoty boards was filed by Rep. Paul Guzzi of Newton.

Conductor Walter Eisenberg signs his autograph at a reception following the opening concert of the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra in Bogota, Colombia. Pictured with him are Luis Antonio Escobar, Columbian composer, and Mrs. Eisenberg.

GBYSO a smash in Columbia

The musical excellence of one hundred Greater Boston youngsters has generated an overwhelming response and spurred an enthusiastic north-south exchange program.

The youngsters are members of the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra who conducted a 10-day concert tour to Bogata and the capital of Antioquia, Colombia, Medellin.

Their ininerary includes four concerts, five chamber music recitals, a series of open rehearsals, music education programs and a performance on the Colombian national radio-television network. INRAVISION.

The tour opened Wednesday, June 19 with a concert at Bogota's Teatro Municipale. GBYSO Conductor, Walter Eisenberg led the orchestra in a performance of Tschaikowsky's Symphony No. 5 in E minor, op. 64, the Prelude to "Die Meistersinger" by Wagner and works by de Falla, Vivaldi and Gershwin. The initial performance received a five-minute standing ovation and was followed by rave reviews in the local press the next day.

The orchestra's Bogota debut also featured a private chamber performance at the residence of the United States Ambassador and Mrs. Viron P. Vakey, a public children's concert and a chamber recital at the Colegio Nueva Granada.

The five-day stay in Bogota was not all work and no play. Formal and informal programs with Colombian peers were scheduled. During a late evening dance at a local high school cafeteria, many of the students made acquaintances and jointly planned get-togethers later in the week, which included dinners at private homes and local restaurants, bowling, ice skating and movies.

On Sunday, June 25, the group flew from Bogata to Medellin for the concluding five days of their tour. Advance press reports from Bogota generated anticipation for the orchestra's appearances in the Andean capital.

A public organ recital, Monday evening, June 24, by 17-year-old Carol Heanue of West Roxbury at Medellin's Bascilica Metropolitana attracted more than 3,000 local citizens. The absolutely silent audience listened to works of J. S. Bach and Louis Vierne, and expressed its appreciation with standing applause.

The highly professional quality of this high school group, less than 30 per cent of whom pursue a career in music, continued to astonish Colombians who have attended the group's concerts. The orchestra's amazing ability and unique program have been discussed with music educatoors and local patrons of the arts during several daytime seminars in Bogota and Medellin.

By their example, Eisenberg and the orchestra's board of directors are working to stimulate similar programs in Colombia. Open workshops, addresses at local colleges and universities and extensive plans for on-going communications are a large part of the Youth Symphony's south-of-the-border mission.

An immediate example of the success of this program was the announcement of the appointment of GBYSO trombonist, Marshall Stith to the Bogota Philharmonica Orchestra. Stith, who graduated from Boston University's School of Fine and Applied Arts Music Program has been a coach with the Youth Symphony for the past two years. In addition, he has been the personal instructor for the orchestra's brass ensemble. During his affiliation with the Bogota Philharmonic, he will teach and coach the brass section of the orchestra.

Without question, the group generated a significantly personal rapport with the citizens of Colombia. Numerous endeavors between individuals for mutual aid and assistance have been arranged. These efforts characterize the original basis of the Massachusetts-Colombian laison which was formed in 1964 under the Partners of the Americas program.

The Partners is a people to people effort through which thousands of private citizens in the United States and Latin America work directly together to improve relations in the Americas while carrying out specific self-help programs for economic, social and cultural development. Through the Partners, Massachusetts has benn linked with Antioquia, Colombia, and under its honorary chairwoman, Mrs. Jessie Sargent, an active program has been developed. Past exchanges have included the delivery of medical supplies, an extensive student exchange program, a special visit to Massachusetts by a Colombian delegation and many cultural and educational interchanges.

This is the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra's fourth international tour. It has previously performed in Switzerland, England and Israel. The Colombian tour is sponsored by the U.S.I.A. in Bogota, the Partners of the Americas in Medellin and several local corporations.

GBYSO was founded in 1958 by Boston University to give orchestral training to young musicians and to supplement the music education programs in public schools. One hundred greater Boston communities are represented by the orchestra members, who are between the ages of 13 and 18.

Library begins diverse activities

"Dig It Up at Your Public Library" posters herald the start of Newton Free Library's summer program for children, which includes a total of 78 summer events for Newton boys and girls.

The full schedule of summer activities, including the summer reading program, creative activities, a treasure chest game and story hours and film, went into action July 2 at 2:30 p.m. at the Junior Library (formerly the Boys' & girls' Library) 126 Vernon Street, Newton Corner. This was announced by Mrs. Beryl Beatley, Newton Free Library's supervisor of children's services.

Major activities planned by the staff of the NFL junior department include: reading contests, pet shows, international folk tale story hours, and creativity programs, which will involve making mobiles, terrariums and puppets. Children will also learn about early New England, Robin Hood, Sherwood Forest, and Arthur and his knights. Boys and girls in grades 4 - 8 will participate in additional special projects and do book reviews.

The story hours, contests and creativity programs are planned to challenge, stimulate and excite the talents, skills, and minds of the boys and girls.

All Newton boys and girls are invited to join the fun and to participate in the Newton Free Library's wide range of activities.

Certificates for participation will be awarded at a special party in the fall.

The free programs are scheduled in the junior departments of the Branch Libraries throughout the city. Most of them require pre-registration. People can pick up the NFL's summer bulletin or check with the individual branch for specific dates and times, as programs and times are subject to change.

Drawings by New England artists at DeCordova Museum

"New England Drawing '74", an exhibition of recent drawings by 86 New England artists, will be shown throughout the summer at the DeCordova Museum in Lincoln, Mass.

According to Museum Director Frederick Walkey, this is " the first major survey of New England drawing in the past decade."

The exhibition contains 104 drawings selected from almost 1,300 entries submitted in a regional competition organized and juried by members of the Museum staff.

The exhibition presents a broad cross-section of contemporary New England talent. Many of the artists are relatively young and unknown, and for them the show represents the first public recognition of their work. Other exhibitors have long been among the leading figures on the New England art scene.

Describing the exhibition as a "feast of styles, techniques and ideas", Curator Carlo Lamagna notes the presence of such diverse influences as surrealism, pop art, op art, abstract expressionism and new realism. Some exhibitors are concerned primarily with representation in the classical sense, with problems of composition and space. For others, the process of drawing becomes a form of spontaneous, highly personal creative expression.

"New England Drawings" will be shown at the DeCordova Museum through Sunday, Sept. 15. Museum hours are 10 a.m.-5 p.m., Tuesday to Friday; and 1:30-5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday. Admission to the Museum and Park is $1.50 for adults and 50c for those under 21.

Chorus pro musica to give concert in Lincoln

Alfred Nash Patterson, founder and director of the Chorus pro Musica, will bring his 70-voice choral group to the DeCordova Museum in Lincoln for an outdoor concert on Sunday, July 7, at 4 p.m.

This is a year of celebration for the Chorus pro Musica, the 25th year of its founding.

Conversations with Patterson and members of the Chorus pro Musica reveal the harmony that has produced a vital, cohesive organization. Patterson extols the virtues of the group in describing the Chorus' founding, history and goals.

Speaking with Chorus members after a concert, one senses first their admiration and affection for their director, their joy in singing for him, and the personal satisfaction that singing with the Chorus offers.

These sentiments are voiced by college and post-graduate students, homebodies, businessmen, composers, professional church singers and music students — all from the greater Boston area. The Chorus has collected a loyal following of choral music devotees since their beginning in the basement of a Cambridge church. When Patterson became "mid-wife" to the Chorus, it moved to the Old South Church in Boston where he is organist and choir director.

The Chorus' 10 or 12 concerts each year take it to the largest cities in New England and New York and involve collaborations with the likes of Bernstein, Steinberg, Leinsdorf, Munch and Koussevitzky. The Boston Symphony is an old friend, and the Chorus recently presented a joint performance of Verdi's "Requiem" with the B.S.O.

Patterson's choice of programs has focused on "unknown gems from the past" and on contemporary music, with emphasis on the rare or little known. He has consistently treated the public to first performances of works. This avant-garde approach is tempered with a "healthy proportion of classics" to produce a thoughtful yet provocative program balance.

The July 7 concert at DeCordova will begin with music from the period of the American Revolution by William Billings (1746-1800), an innovative composer who influenced the course of early American music. The Chorus will sing Revolutionary War songs that were sung with patriotic fervor by soldiers and church-goers, and a choral selection called "Jargon."

The second section of the program, entitled "A Connecticut Yankee Leaps Fifty Years," contains work by Charles Ives (1874-1954), another composer far ahead of his time. Ives heard sounds in unusual relationships, and he took delight in combining different keys and rhythms in music interpreting the basic dissonance of American life.

Another view of historic America will be presented in pieces by Raymond Wilding-White, a contemporary composer who has taken his texts from inscriptions on gravestones in an ancient cemetery in Bennington, Vermont. Predictably, there is an element of down-to-earth Yankee character and humor in the words and music.

The program concludes with Aaron Copeland's "In the Beginning," offering a climatic and dramatic fusion of harmony and dissonance. Alfred Nash Patterson describes it as "the major a capella work of the first half of this century."

Students win prizes in annual music contest

Four Newton students won prizes recently in the Mass. Music Teachers Association's annual statewide music contest.

Scott Griggs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kent Griggs, 40 Bolton Rd., Newtonville, won a first prize trophy in the piano performance intermediate E. division.

Vincent D'Alleva, son of Mr. and Mrs. Remo D'Alleva, 25 Rangely Rd., West Newton, won a third prize trophy.

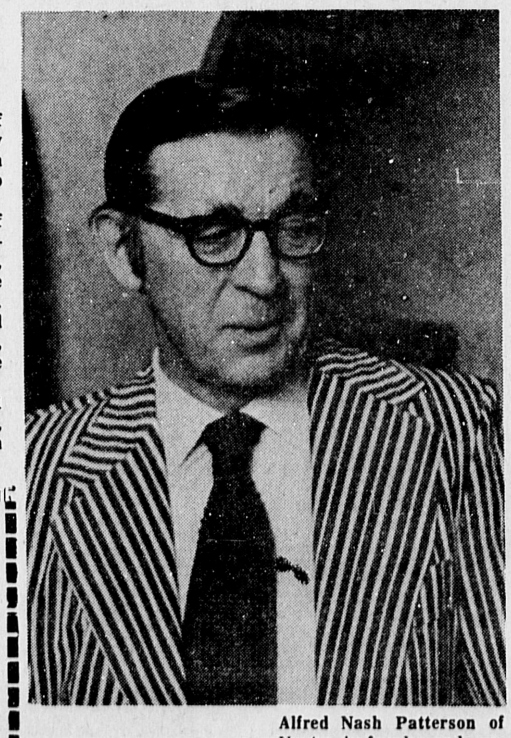

Griggs and D'Alleva are fourth year students of Mrs. Sylvia L. White of Newtonville.

Howard Mark Cohen, son of Sumner H. Cohen, 91 Mandalay Rd., and Mrs. Louis Sones, won a third place prize in the piano intermediate B. division.

Robert B. Fisch, son of Gilbert R. Fisch, 1650 Commonwealth Ave., West Newton, won a third place prize in the pinao intermediate C. division.

Two pupils of Mrs. Mary Ad Barnoff, 27 Trinity Ter., Newton Centre, won first place prizes in voice competition.

A pupil of Karen Komar, 61 Wade St., Newton Highlands, also won a first place prize in voice competition.

Conductor

Alfred Nash Patterson of Newton is founder and conductor of "Chorus Pro Musica"." The 60-voice choral group will give an outdoor concert in Lincoln July 7.

Order 25% parking cut

Laws on parking promulgated by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency seem to have sneaked up on Newton.

Under the EPA ruling, all employers of more than 50 people — both businesses and municipalities — must reduce their present number of employees' parking spaces by 25 per cent. An "action plan" must be submitted by each employer to the EPA by July 31.

The goal of the EPA regulation is to reduce the two major pollutants in the air, carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons. The reduction will be accomplished by decreasing the number of cars on the road through the use of carpools and greater use of public transportation.

According to Lewis Songer, executive vice-president of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce, "probably more than 100 businesses" in Newton will be affected by the EPA parking regulation. Customer parking is not affected.

The Chamber of Commerce has notified all its members employing more than 50 persons, Songer said.

There are several suits pending, according to Songer, to obtain an extension of the deadline, but none that he knows in Newton.

The city of Newton as an employer will have to reduce the number of parking spaces for all its employees by 25 per cent at all parking locations, including the senior and junior high schools.

A plan will have to be submitted by the city to EPA by Sept. 30, 1974, for preventing overflow from employee parking lots onto the street. In other words, no employer may count on employees' being able to park on the street to make up for the reduced number of spaces in the lot.

Planning Director Charles Thomas said this week that he had no plans yet to submit to the EPA for the city, and that so far only one business firm had been to Planning Department for advice.

The greatest effect on the city as an employer may be on the School Department, which now provides parking for most of its teachers and other employees.

Newton North High School is presently in the midst of plans for a 300-car parking lot. There are about 280 full-time teachers at Newton North, according to the Planning Department, so it would appear that there will be a need for about only 250 spaces, including those for the part-time teachers.

No parking lot for students is contemplated for Newton North High School.

Newton South High School, which has a parking lot for students, will have to take steps to insure that teachers' cars do not overlfow into the students' lot, Paul Keough of the EPA said.

There may be a conflict between local zoning ordnances and the EPA regulations. In this case "federal law preempts local law," according to Robert Thompson, EPA assistant regional counsel.

Noncompliance with the EPA regulations, which carry the weight of law, subjects employers to fines eventually, although "evidence of good faith" in trying to devise a plan to reduce parking may be accepted initially.

The plans must be in effect by May 31, 1975.

Recreation Commission

Penney's fate still uncertain

Former Recreation Department head John Penney will be available to the department on a contractual basis if his successor, Russell Halloran, finds that his services are needed, a spokesman for Mayor Theodore Mann said this week.

Penney is on vacation now, he said.

Penney may be in line for a short-term job with the new Cpmprehensive Employment and Training Act office in Newton which will be in operation shortly. Penney would direct a program supplementing current recreation opportunities for disadvantaged children in 10 communities in the Newton area.

If Halloran wishes to employ Penney on a contractual basis, a request for an appropriation would have to be made to the Board of Aldermen. Its passage would probably meet strong opposition.

Penney's status in the city administration has not been clear for some time. After the appointment of Halloran as head of the Recreation Department, Mayor Mann requested the Board of Aldermen to create a new position, assistant Recreation Commissioner, for Penney.

After two months of debate, much of it in closed meetings, it was determined that such a request could not be granted. Another approach, to hire Penney on a six-month contract, also did not work.

Halloran took office July 1, and there is no money in the 1974-75 budget to fund another position.

The eight-member Recreation Commission is taking another look at itself and its operation during the change of command in the department.

Commissioner Paul Burke suggested at a recent Recreation Commission meeting that the city solicitor be asked for a definition of "the duties, obligations, and poers of the of the commission."

They are not clearly defined in the ordinance, Burke said, and the direction that the commission "shall advise the mayor and the Board of Aldermen" is too vague.

Commissioner Lynne Arthur replied that an ordinace change is being studied by Ald. Terry Morris.

Morris, she said, plans too meet with a recreation expert from a national recreation association for his advice on how too define the responsibility of the commission.

Concannon signatures challenged

Newton alderman Thomas Concannon, a candidate for Middlesex County district attorney, faces a serious challenge of the validity of the signatures of his nomination papers.

Concannon said Tuesday that, although he had known of a challenge by Mrs. Mary McMenimen of Lowell, whom he termed "a friend of Droney's" (Concannon's opponetn, incumbent John Droney), he found out the full extent of the problem only last week.

The main problem, Concannon said, is the filling in of the word "same" instead of the customary ditto marks. He himself, as well as others, put "same" on the nomination papers, which has been done for years, he said.

Until now, no one had known that such a procedure was incorrect, if it is, Concannon said.

Other aspects of Concannon's papers that were challenged were about 200 duplications of signatures, and, particularly disturbing to Concannon, about 50 signatures that were denied by the supposed signers.

Alan Licarie, executive secretary of the Newton Election Commission, whose staff certified 1,200 of Concannon's 1,350 signatures, defended the commission's not catching the duplications.

"As far as the amount of work we had in the last week, it would be impossible to keep track of duplications. We had several people working on each candidate's papers, and there is no way to note duplications."

Concerning the use of "same," written in, Licarie said "same" had always been all right in Newton.

"What we need is a state election commission. Now there are 351 cities and towns, and 351 different ways of doing things," Licarie said. "There should be the same standards in every community."

Licarie filed a bill last year to establish a state election commission. The bill was defeated.

Diane is a spectator with a purpose

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
Staff Correspondent

"Everyone's basically a spectator of life," says Diane Ossinger, who in public life is the mayor's attractive and outgoing executive secretary and who in private life chases fire engines and police cars for the sheer "thrill" of it.

If you think its odd, just think of the times you've slowed down on the highway thinking you're going to see some grisly collision and what you get is some guy changing a flat. And actually most of us chase fire engines, but only down the block.

Diane, however, is serious about her hobby and sleeps next to a small police radio monitor listening for fire calls and police calls. Not only does she follow by call but also by instinct. One night, around three or four, she was awakened by the smell of smoke and threw on a raincoat to attend the fire three or four blocks away.

"It's not the burning of property that fascinates me, it's the coordination between so many men and the fact that they do not get in each other's way," says Diane reverently.

She claims this hobby began when she was a youngster fascinated by sirens and was fed by a friend of the family who was a member of the Newton Fire Auxiliary.

Chasinf fire engines and police cars is a hobby that Diane loves and occasionally on her lunch hour will get in her car to see a fire. In fact she says that once she's in her car and hears sirens "not much will stop me." She's presently looking for a police monitor to outfit her car with.

Does she dress for the occasion? Not a chance. She's been to fires and accidents in her nightgown, flimsy slippers, even with rollers in her hair. Even bad weather doesn't deter her and she's been out in bad storms.

The worst fire she ever saw was in Canada. She was on a trip and stumbled upon it by accident. "There was a farmhouse engulfed in flames with no available water supply . . . an explosion began the fire and it wiped out an entire family."

"I hate to see death, it leaves you witha sick feeling," she says. She did encounter death one year ago when she came to witness an accident on Beacon Street where a police cadet was killed. "I was coming home from Boston about 11:30 p.m. and saw two police cars . . . when you see more than one you know something is happening." She followed the cars to Waban Square, the scene of the head-on collision.

At home Diane has a book with code numbers listed which she uses to locate the source of the fire call and is knowledgeable about police codes. She would have wanted to join the police force and still would like to "but because of my age I couldn't think of it." She laughed and said, "I wouldn't have the physical stamina."

She says her hobby is exhilarating and if I see a police car going, it does something inside me like a shot of adrenalin."

"I find the swift action intriguing, there's so much to see." Awed by the teamwork it takes at the scene of an accident or fire, she has watched firemen save people, a dog, furniture and antiques.

One evening while taking her mother home from work, she spotted a cloud of smoke on the Pike. She dropped her mother off and dashed to the fire which turned out to be at the Rumford Avenue Battery Company. She stayed at that fire until midnight.

"There was never a duplication of effort, the fire was constantly changing from explosions occurring from battery acids, and the men were constantly shifting."

She says he's basically "nosy, I like to know what's going on or I would feel I missed out." But her conversations also reveal a genuine awe and respect for the police and fire men.

At the scene of an accident or fire, she stays well in the background, but if you're ever up in the mayor's office, stop in and say hello. And if you know the fire chief, the one thing Diane would love is a tour of the fire department anf of all the modern equipment since she's already had a tour of the police department.

Personnel director named

Paul C. Somers of Newton Centre has been appointed Newton's personnel director, Mayor Theodore Mann announced this week.

Somers will assume his new position Aug. 1 at a salary of $16,200.

Arnold Kublin, formerly personnel director for about three months, left the city officially July 1 to take a position in an indistiral firm.

Somers' currently is personnel director for the city of Attleboro. His previous experience includes management training in a Boston bank, directing curricular research for the Cambridge School of Weston, and work with the New York City Department of Correction and as a case-aide supervisor for a halfway house.

Somers has a B.A. degree from Suffolk University and a Master in Education degree from New York University Graduate School of Education. He has also attended Babson College Graduate School.

Somers is 29 years old, married and the father of one child, and lives at 136 Warren St., Newton Centre.

Law establishes advisory board

A new law effective July 1, 1974, has established "county advisory boards" in an effort to give cities and towns some say in county budgets.

The Middlesex County advisory board will have 54 members, one from each community in the county, but Newton's vote on the board will count 11.24 per cent of the total vote, based on the fact that Newton pays 11.24 per cent of the county assessment.

Representatives to the new boards are to be appointed by the chief executive of each community.

The boards are to meet publicly at least once before the submission of the county budgets by the county commissioners to the State House.

If a board opposes by a two-thirds vote any part of the county budget, it will file a report with the Joint Committee on Legislation, indicating which items in the county budget, it would like to have changed.

The joint committee would then have to act on both the budget as submitted and upon the recommended changes.

The law and its applications have been little publicized and consequently seem to be almost unknown by municipal officials.

Mayor Theodore Mann of Newton, asked about his appointment to the Middlesex County advisory board, said through a spokesman that he plans to appoint his budget officer when that position is filled.

The bill establishing the county advisoty boards was filed by Rep. Paul Guzzi of Newton.

Candidates

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The Newton Graphic will be presenting information on candidates for election in the fall in this format each week. The column is open to all those seeking office, local or statewide.)

(D-Brookline)

State Senator Jack Backman's Model Children's Insurance Bill received final approval in the state legislature.

The bill, part of his children's rights package, mandates benefits from the time of birth for expenses arising from illness, injury, congenital malformations or premature birth.

Backman this week also called upon the governor to "once again keep his commitment to ban small handguns in the Commonwealth."

"I am asking the governor to underline his commitment to meaningful handgun control by returning the Bartley-Fox bill to the legislature with an amendment which would prohibit the sale of all handguns with barrels of three inches of less," the state legislator said.

Backman said he has also offered this amendment to the "Saturday Night Special" bill now awaiting final Senate approval.

The Bartley-Fox bill provides a mandatory one-year prison sentence for illegal possession of a firearm.

IRVING FISHMAN

State Senator Irving Fishman's bill to require career school tuition refunds to students who drop out has been signed into law.

Schools covered by the Fishman bill are now required to print on the front of their contracts a notice stating that cancellation entitles students to a pro rata refund minus administrative costs equal to $50 or five per cent of the total contract price, whichever is less.

Failure to comply would be a violation of the state's Consumer Protection Act.

"This is a landmark piece of consumer protection legislation," Fishman commented. "For the first time consumers who have been enticed into unfair home study, business, trade and other proprietary school contracts will have an effective means of getting out."

Fishman and Backman are running against each other for election to the newly created state senate district that includes Newton and Brookline.

LOIS PINES

Democratic candidates for reelection State Rep. Lois Pines this week reported that the governor has signed a county tax reform bill which will save Newton taxpayers more than $2.6 million in the next two fiscal years.

The law makes major changes in certain formulas used to distribute state revenues and assess expenses. Rep. Pines sponsored and worked for the passage of the legislation.

The state House of Representatives last week also gave initial approval to the consumer bill field by Rep. Pines and Rep. David Lane that would protect homebuyers by requiring disclosure of defects by seller of used homes and warranties against defects by builders of new homes.

"Our disclosure and warranty bill gives the homebuyers the information and security they should have when making what is usually the biggest investment of their whole lives," Mrs. Pines commented.

PAUL GUZZI

Newton State Rep. Paul H. Guzzi (D-Newton), a candidate for secretary of state, Monday made public has 1973 income tax return.

In releasing the document, he reiterated his support for strong financial disclosure laws.

Guzzi's net worth, including all of his personal property, is $43,510. He earned $12,027 as a full-time satate legislator in 1973 and the income was supplemented by his wife's part-time teaching salary, a stipend from the Marine Corps Reserve and interest from savings for a total of $14,185.

The candidate this week also proposed reforms for the present signature-gathering system for all aspirants to elected office.

He proposed that the number of signatures for statewide offices be reduced by 50 per cent, dropped from 10,000 to 5,000; that uniform standards for all local clerks be used in validating the signatures; that a statewide computer voter registration list be available to every city or town clerk; that a coded check off box be on all nomination papers so clerks could indicate their reasons for not validating signatures; that signatures would be validated if the first name of a person is signed "substantially as registered"; and that a sample signature be included at the top of each nomination paper for voters to follow.

GEORGE SACCO

Rep. George Sacco, Democratic candidate for attorney general, has asked the Department of Public Utilities (DPU) to "insist on an immediate accounting of monies owed to the Commonwealth by the Telephone Company before considering their latest rate increase request."

Sacco made his demand in a letter to the chairman of the DPU June 28.

"It has come to may attention that the New England Telephone Co. owes rebates to the Commonwealth," he said.

JOHN P. LYNCH

Candidate for lieutenant governor John Pierce Lynch of Springfield this week reported filing a civil suit in Federal District Court in Boston requesting that a three-judge panel order Public Broadcasting Service (PBS) to provide free time to major candidates.

"At the hearing," he said, "I will request Federal Judge Frank Murray issue an injunction against PBS barring them from using public funds until they present a viable format for free time for major candidates in the upcoming state primary election."

BARTHOLOMEW J. CONTE

Bartholomew J. Cone of Lynnfield, former special aide to President John F. Kennedy, recently announced his candidacy for lietenant governor.

Conte calls for the expansion of the state's economy in order to create more jobs, adequate housing for the elderly, middle aged and young people, better crime control and quality education.

His platform also asks for streamlining state government, improvements and mass transit and roads, improvements in courts and prison systems and a shift in the tax burden of property owners.

Conte is a former Malden city counselor.

JOHN L. DANEHY

Incumbent Middlesex County Commissioner John L. Danehy has formally submitted his nomination papers for another four-year term as a commissioner. He was first elected in 1965.

"I am prepared to conduct myself in this campaign as I have during my tenure in public office—with my head held high prepared not only to defend but to fight, on my record, for strong, responsible and responsive county government," he said.

THADDEUS BUCZKO

State Auditor Thaddeus Buczko this week announced his candidacy for relection. He was elected in 1964 and reelected in 1966 and 1970.

"Over the years, our audit reports have provided a source of information to the Legislature and to interested department heads in bringing about savings to the Commonwealth and promoting efficiency in various agencies," he said.

"In seeking reelection, I make this promise: that the Department of the State Auditor will continue to be operated honestly, efficiently and effectively and that it will continue to report to the taxpayers of the Commonwealth how their monies are being spent by every agency of the commonwealth.

BCON makes its presence felt

By ELIZABETH McKINNON
Of the Graphic Staff

In the first year of its existence a group called Black Citizens of Newton (BCON) has begun to make itself felt.

Started in March of 1973 in reaction to an incident involving a black theological-school student and the police, BCON has become a cohesive group that is spreading its influence - and its members - into many aspects of life in Newton.

Claiming a membership of about 800 black adults, BCON has already initiated task forces on housing, political action, education, economic development and human relations.

In the realm of politics, Chairman Eugene Hampton recently sought election to the Democratic Party charter convention from the Fourth Congressional District. He lost, but BCON is actively pressing for the appointment of blacks by the Democratic state committee to fulfill the party's affirmative action program.

BCON has, in a sense, gone beyond the confines of Newton with its initiation and encouragement of a coalition of black-citizens group in other Middlesex County communities.

But BCON's major interest and sphere of influence is at home, in Newton, where it has been instrumental in improving the school curriculum to include the contributions and history of ethnic minorities.

BCON has also supported an increase in the METCO program and has advocated the hiring of more black teachers.

BCON has taken a strong position on the need for low-income housing and home ownership in Newton and tried, unsuccessfully, to work it in to the Newton Redevelopment Authority plan for housing.

Through BCON's economic-development efforts, Newton black citizens have obtained business contracts or have engaged in negotiations for contract with the Polaroid Corp., and BCON has been active in finding applications for secretarial, legal and managerial jobs in other businesses.

There is no doubt that BCON has been influential in smoothing relations between blacks and the laregely whie police force here, and BCON continues to work on human relations problems in schools and on the streets. BCON has five members who have been elected directors of the Newton Mental Health Association.

Eugene Hampton

The driving force behind BCON right now is Chairman Eugene Hampton, a 35-year-old engineer.

Hampton was born in Chicago, went to schools in the South and then in other parts of the country, and as an adult has lived in both the South and North. He has a long history of political and social involvement wherever he lived.

Even with Hampton as chairman, BCON does not represent only the more militant or activist blacks in Newton. In fact, many of BCON's leaders come from the "establishment" community of black - those who have lived here for a long time, many of whom were born and brought up in West Newton.

BCON does not have satisfy all blacks in Newton. Some prefer to pursue BCON's stated goal, "the attainment of an equitable share of all the benefits of the American system," in different ways.

But BCON is filling a gap for many blacks and in its second year seems here to stay.

BROADWAY

NEW YORK (UPI) — This is the time of summer hiatus for the Broadway theater. There will be no more productions until next fall, when the 1974-75 season begins on an indefinite date.

But there will be shows to be seen by visitors to the city, a dozen shows that should be available through Labor Day. They are:

"A Little Night Music" at the Majestic Theater. A lovely musical of tangled romances in turn-of-the-century Sweden; in its second year.

"A Moon for the Misbegotten," Eugene O'Neill's wonderful drama with Jason Robards and Colleen Dewhurst at the Morosco.

"Candide," a revised revival of the musical based on the Voltaire novel with score by Leonard Bernstein; at the Broadway.

"Don't Bother Me, I Can't Cope," long-running all-black musical revue with Micki Grant songs at the Edison.

"Good Evening" at the Plymouth is an hilarious two-man topical, satirical revue by and with England's Peter Cook and Dudley Moore.

"Grease" at the Royale is in its third year; a musical that looks back at the youth and music of the 1950s affectionately.

"Irene" stars Jane Powell in a drastically altered revival of the 1919 musical hit about a New York girl of Irish ancestry who wins a millionaire; in its second year at the Minskoff.

"Lorelei" at the Palace is a remake of 1950s "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" musical with the same star playing the lovable 1920s golddigger, Carol Channing.

"Over Here!" is a recent arrival starring the two surviving Andrews Sisters of singing fame in a musical that is deep in early 1940 nostaglia. At the Shubert.

"Pippin" at the Imperial is one of the theater's most unusual musicals, set in medieval France, well into its second year and the biggest Broadway grosser for many months.

"Raisin" is a musical version of the prize play, "A Raisin in the Sun," about a Chicago Negro family seeking a better way of life. At the 46th Street Theater.

"Words and Music" at the Golden is an amusing oddity in which veteran songwriter Sammy Cahn, who is vastly entertaining, reviews many of his hits with the aid of three singers.

Three productions planned by Waltham theatre group

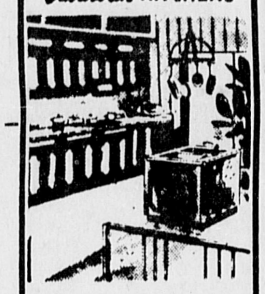

The Reagle Players of the Waltham Summer Theatre will open their sixth season on July 10, in Robinson Auditorium of Waltham High School.

Three productions are scheduled for this season; "No, No, Nanette," "A Man For All Seasons," and "Carousel."

The Reagle Players is a group of area residents of high school, college, and young adult performers. These young people are involved in all areas of theater production under the direction of Robert J. Eagle who is in charge of the drama department of the Waltham Public Schools.

"No, No, Nanette" is the first offering of the Players this summer and will run July 12 and 14, at 8 p.m. For ticket information people may call 891-5600.

Newton to Framingham by bicycle

The Sudbury River Conduit is one of the main sources of Boston's water and also provides a scenic woodland trail easily accessible from West Suburban Boston.

It is a special treat for the suburban bicycle rider, but its unpaved survace requires careful passage. Selected portions of the aqueduct are ideal for hiking, cross-country skiing, and snowshoeing.

Scout Troop 272 of Newton, has explored the 13-miles segment of the aqueduct that lies between Newton Centre and Framingham and has prepared the following as a trail guide to the route. This trail has special significance to the scouts of Newton and Wellesley because their camp ground is located near its western end. The troop is grateful to John D. Sears of the Metropolitan District Commission for permission to travel over MDC property.

The conduit is an underground cast-iron pipe about 5 feet in diameter that connects the Quabbin Reservoir with the City of Boston. The eastern segment pipes water from Farm Pond Reservoir in Framingham to Chestnut Hill Reservoir in Newton. Over most of its length the conduit is covered by an earth embankment that is interrupted at two points where the conduit passes beneath hills. One siphon and two bridges enable the aqueduct to traverse river valleys.

Closely set cement posts have been erected at intervals as obstacles to motor vehicles. In addition, a few residents and institutions have placed gardens and fences across the right of way, but these can readily be avoided. The MDC maintains the aqueduct and permission to travel this route must be obtained from them.

In Newton the 2.3-mile segment of the conduit lying east of Route 128 has several interesting features: Newton Centre Playground, Cold Spring Park, and Echo Bridge Park. the latter is famous for the acoustic properties of the bridge's arched undersurface and the fine view of Mill Falls. Near Centre Street, the eastern end of the raised dirt cover of the aqueduct skirts the north side of the Newton Centre Playground. The route west, through a densely populated region, can be recognized by white gateposts wherever the trail is interrupted by a city street. The aqueduct trail crosses Walnut Street just south of Beacon Street (near the A & P supermarket, goes over a retaining wall and between two houses where low evergreens have been planted illegally, and passes near the eastern border of Cols Spring Playground, an extensive forested area. Another connecting network of woodland trails runs north around the southern and western border of the park.

From here the route continues to the intersection of Boylston Street (Route 9) and Chestnut Street, crossing the MBTA tracks near Eliot Station. West of Boylston Street the route follows Chestnut Street south to the summit of a low hill where the aqueduct opens to the west through a narrow walk-way. In order to cross Route 128 one crosses Echo Bridge and follows a dirt trail south to Eliot Street, then beneath Rte. 128 to Central Street in Needham.

The 2.2-mile Needham segment of the route extends from St. Mary Street to Forest Avenue and includes views of a fine stretch of open land around Rosemary Brook. Access to the conduit is gained from Central Avenue in Needham (an extension of Elliot Street in Newton). The raised embankment is visible as one turns north on St. Mary Street.

Concrete posts obstruct passage at frequent intervals between St. Mary Street and the intersection of Cedar Street, Wellesley Avenue, and Central Avenue. Beyond this point, the route ascends a steep hill to a quaint stone building housing a surge tank, then descends rapidly to Rosemary Brook and ascends to another tank beyond the brook. This dip covers a siphon that is built into the aqueduct. West of the siphon the route emerges onto a parking lot of the Wellesley Country Club. Here the conduit crosses Brookside Avenue to a dirt trail through a small clump of woods. The route then emerges onto the eighteenth fairway of the Country Club Golf Course and traverses a smooth lawn to Forest Avenue. The main office of the club is just to the north.

In Wellesley the route extends for three miles from the Country Club Golf Course to Washington Street (Route 16) and crosses the Waban Arches of the Charles River. One-tenth of a mile west of Forest Street the aqueduct enters the campus of the Babson Institute. Crossing Broad Street, the route runs just south of a driveway that leads to the Alumni Building of the Institute. Here it is necessary to climb a low rail fence and follow a dirt trail through a stretch of dense woods.

In this region the gound over the conduit is level, so that the route is obscure. In about a quarter of a mile, the dirt track emerges into a clearing and continues to the right when the route appears to fork. The embankment reappears just before the route crosses Great Plain Avenue (Rout 135). Across Great Plain Avenue the aqueduct passes just north of the Wellesley incinerator and continues toward the intersection of Benvenue Avenue and Cartwright Road. The surface of the embankment is paved with asphalt as the route traverses the large grassy plain around Fuller Brook.

Between Cartwright Road and Dover Road, the conduit passes back and forth beneath the street and around private residences. Hence, one should follow Benvenue Road across Grove Street to Dover Road. Just to the south, on Dover Street, the aqueduct becomes prominent once more. The route emerges onto a flood plain between Lake Waban and the Charles River and becomes elevated on a high, multi-arched bridge, the Waban Arches. Here there is a notable view of the river and a park-like nature preserve in the surrounding area.

Across the Arches the conduit crosses the southern edge of the Wellesley College campus where the embankment is covered by a lawn and traverses a beautifully landscaped area. Just before Washington Street (Route 16), the lawn is replaced by a thicket, the route emerging about 50 yards north of Pond Avenue.

Through Natick the route extends 2.9 miles from Washington street (in Wellesley) to Everett Street. Although the aqueduct tunnels beneath two hills in Natick, interesting trails can be negotiated following the route of the conduit, thus avoiding extensive detours on town streets.

West of Washington Street, access to the aqueduct may be gained through a small fence hidden beneath an overhanging tree. The embankment has been landscaped and appears to be part of a local residence. The route then crosses Pond Street near a high stone wall and continues across Leach Street into Natick. Soon the route seems to merge into Brook Street while the aqueduct disappears beneath Carver Hill.

One should follow Union Street to the north and then a dirt road up a steep, forested slope to the crest of carver Hill. The trail is overgrown, but the route tends south over the summit. The route then descends to some private homes where a dirt trail leads west to the grounds of Memorial School, a pleasant spot for lunch.

The aqueduct embankment follows the northern border of the school grounds and continues to Riverben Drive north of the intersection of Aqueduct Road. (In order to detour around Carver Hill, follow Union Street north to Woodland, then west to Cover Lane. This street merges south into Riverben Drive.) The embankment is then visible across a wooded area near Cottage Street where it disappears beneath a low hill.

The route c an be followed by traveling west, through a pasture, to Rockland Road (just north of a cider mill). Here, one must detour south to Everett Street and follow west several hundred yards. The aqueduct runs parallel to and just to the north of Everett Street.

The aqueduct runs 2.5 miles through Sherborn to the Framingham border. The aqueduct parallels Everett Road and corsses Main Street (Route 27) and Speen Street. The surrounding area is heavily wooded and pleasant and the trail is well-marked. However, west of Speen Street, many trees have been felled in a manner as to obstruct passage through the area. The route then intersects Collidge Street just south of Meadowbrook Road and continues west across Course Brook. At this point, a stone housing has been erected over a culvert. Some distance to the west the embankment disappears and the conduit crosses to the south of a railroad line. The route ends at a fenced pasture on the Framingham line.

Insufficient funding slows day hospital

The day-hospital phase of the mental health center program for Newton will have to wait a while. The project has been approved, but insufficient federal funding has postponed the staffing of the program.

Already in operation, under a federal construction grant, is the 21-bed inpatient psychiatric unit at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

The postponement of the funding of the day hospital, to be set up adjoining the inpatient clinic, does not appear as a great setback to Newton - Wellesley - Weston Mental Health Area Director Edward Sahatjian.

If the federal money does not come through by November, Sahatjian said, "we still hope to open. The hospital will help us out, and the state Department of Mental Health may reallocate some funds."

The grant from the government that has had to be deferred is in the amount of $587,682 for staffing the hospital.

The projected day hospital will accommodate 25-30 people daily and will serve both as a preventive program to avert the need for inpatient care, and as a first step in leaving inpatient care and returning to normal life, Sahatjian said.

The Newton - Wellesley - Weston Area Mental Health Center consists of eight affiliated agencies — the Newton Guidance Clinic, the Wellesley Human Relations Service, the Charles River Association for Rteatrded Citizens, Newtork, the N-W-W section of Medfield State Hospital, the Gabler Children's Unit at Metropolitan Hospital in Waltham, the Newton - Wellesley Hospital, and the Newton Court Clinic.

Women's war on rape

By Gay Pauley
UPI women's editor

NEW YORK UPI — The General Federation of Women's Clubs has declared its own war, the war on rape.

"This should be no hush-hush thing," said Mrs. Carroll E. Mary Kathareine Miller, the new president of the 11-million-member international federation that calls itself the world's largest organization of woman.

"Statistics show rape cases on the increase, no matter what the size of the community," said Mrs. Miller, who now calls Charleston, W.Va., and Missoula, Mont., home.

Officially the program, begun as Mrs. Miller took office for two years, is called "Woman Against Rape WAR.

"We need citizen action groups throughout the country to stop the rising incidence," she said. "We are going to train groups of women in every community through our state federation, our district and local clubs, who will attend court when rape cases are heard to give moral support to victims.

"Everyone who reads newspapers knows that rape victims often are ruthlessly grilled in courts and ironically their reputations are frequently impugned so that many victims no longer will report the crime and make their private humiliation a public affair.

"We want to change the laws. Today, while the victim's sexual history becomes an open book in the courtroom, the defendant's criminal record is not admissable in rape cases. And, as there rarely are witnesses, the case pits the word of the victim against that of the defendant."

Mrs. Miller cited the work done by clubmembers in Indianapolis. They go to court "by the hundreds" to support women.

"As far as I can determine, Indiana is the only state where no convicted rapist can be given a suspended sentence," she continued. "We want to see this legislation enacted across the country."

Accordingly, the federation will propose that its 15,000 clubs in the United States adopt a resolution proposing that it be mandatory for a convicted rapist to serve time.

The federation also has programs to fight alcoholism and drug abuse; to promote highway safety and make seat belts mandatory, and to improve decaying downtown areas.

Other major activities include work with the New York Stock Exchange to teach women the rudiments of finance, especially in the area of wills and estate settlements; in conservation, a "Brighten the Night" program for better street lighting as a crime deterrent; a "Justice for Juveniles" programs; support of the Equal Rights Amendment many men are federation members, and promotion of the bicentennial.

Public records: a new dawn

By JOHN BUSINGER
State Representative

Monday, July 1, was the dawn of a new day for Massachusetts citizens and for their state and local government. On that day the Massachusetts Freedom of Information Act — Chapter 1050 of the Acts of 1973 — took effect.

Citizens who know that "information is power" will hail the arrival of July 1, 1974, for the nrew rights they will be branted to examine the records of their government. The availability of governmental record made or held by officials has been making almost daily headlines in connecetion with the Watergate investigation and has raised the "freedom of information " issue in a general way.

But the citizen's "right ot know" is critical also in terms of his state and local government, the decisions of which have so much impact on his daily life. A study conducted by Mass Public Interest Research Group (PIRG) East, released in April 1973, and entitled "That The Be Informed," prefaced their examination into the availability of official records in Massachusetts appropriately: "Reliable Information is the lifeblood of a democratic society. Without it, freedom will perish, and democracy will devolve to despotism."

The Massachusetts Freedom of Information Act, based on the concept of the Federal Freedom of Information Act of 1966, totally reverses Massachusetts law on public records and erases court interpretations of the old law. That law had a s it s basic premise the presumption that record were private. The citizen, who had the burden of proof, could overcome thai presumption only by showing that the record was required by law to be made or required by law to be received for filing. Doubt was resolved in favor of the custodian of the record.

The old law's definition of "public records" was tested in the courts by citizens and by the press. The most celebrated case testing that definition through its editor, Thomas F. Sleeper (now editor of the Brookline Chronicle-Citizen), who questioned whether or not under existing law the arrest register and daily log of the local police were public records. The Supreme Judicial Court's decision, Town Crier Inc. v. Chief of Police of Weston (1972), held that, under the statutory definition of "public records," the records sought were not public because a record kept by a public officer or employee is a public record only if the entries contained therein were made pursuant to a requirement of law and that there was no such statutory duty upon the police to keep and make entries in the arrest register and daily log (and thus the court did not need too reach and possible privacy arguments).

The Massachusetts Freedom of Information Act makes clear for the first time in Massachusetts law, be redefining "public records," that the papers and records of state and local government and also of the powerful public authorities like the Massachusetts Port Authority, and the MBTA, are presumed to be public unless one of a small list of carefully and narrowly defined exemptions applies.

Under the Act, "public records" means "all books, papers, maps, photographs, recorded tapes, financial statements, statistical tabulations, or other documentary materials or data, regardless of physical form or characteristics made or received" by various governmental bodies. The exemptions only serve to exclude from public view those materials where there is some unique justification for secrecy. For example, these include internal personnel and medical files, matters involving individual memoranda or letters relating or intra-agency memoranda or letters relating to policy positions being developed by the agency but not including reasonably completed factual studies or reports on which the development of such policy positions has been or may be based, certain investigatory materials necessarily compiled out of the public view by law enforcement or other investigatory officials, and trade secrets.

The reversal of the definition of "public records" is the cornerstone of the new law. Equally significant, with the new definition comes a reversal of the burden of proof. The citizen need know no longer that some statute makes a record public. The custodian must know the exemptions and claim one or more of them serve to make the record sought not a public record. If the public official or agency refuses a request for access to information, the citizen denied access may seek a writ of mandamus in the superior court. The act makes clear how the burden of proof has changed — "in any court proceeding there shall be a presumption that the record sought is public, and the burden shall be upon the custodian to prove with specificity the exemption which applies."

So truly the sun shone brighter for Massachusetts citizens on July 1. Those who firmly believe that a government like ours that depends upon the will and the voice of the people will survive only if the people have the right and the power to know what their government is doing will hail this new day. A government which claims it governs with the consent of the people but withholds the information people need to make informed judgments doe not, no matter how much self-convincing it does, benefit itself nor make a responsive or stable government, but in the end helps bring about its own downfall. The strength of a democratic government must rest with an enlightened people.

Represenative John A. Businger is the sponsor of the Massachusetts Freedom of Information Act and fought for three years for its passage into law.

Living cost top issue in Governor campaign

If Governor Francis W. Sargent is defeated for reelection next November, as the polls presnetly indicate he may be, a major factor contributing to his downfall will be one over which he has virtually no control whatever.

A survey directed by the writer produced the somewhat surprising conclusion that the top issue in Sarge's campaign will be the high cost of living.

That problem is of far greater concern to most people than the Watergate mess, of which many people are becoming weary and even bored.

The rising price of just about everything is a tremendous worry for elderly and retired persons living on fixed incomes who are unable to stretch their budgets beyond a point, are forced to scrimp, sacrifice, and do without some necessities of life.

Their resentment is directed at just about everyone holding public office—even though some of their targets may not be responsible in any way for the inflation and the staggering cost of just existing.

It is aimed at Republicans more than Democrats, but many of the people hit hardest by this condition feel that neither political party has distinguished itself by its efforts to help them.

Of course, it is much too early to count out Governor Sargent. He has a political bounce and resilience. He has more than three months in which to regain some of his lost popularity, and he has shown an ability to do that in the past.

Governor Sargent's reelection chances dropped sharply during the critical gasoline shortage last winter as automobile operators fumed while they waited in long lines to fill the tanks of their cars or wasted precious gasoline driving around looking for a filling station where the tanks were in operation.

As the gasoline shortage eased in the early spring, Sarge's political stock rose again. Then it suddenly slumped in May and the early part of June.

Now it appears that Sarge will be in trouble, particularly if Attorney General Robert H. Quinn is his election opponent.

The reason for that latter statement is that political analysts believe there are issues the Sargent camp could use effectively against former State Representative Michael Dukakis.

Polls at the present time show that Dukakis would defeat Sargent if the two were matched together, possibly by an even larger margin than would Quinn.

But veteran political observers consider that Dukakis is vulnerable to attack and expect that he will lose support when the spotlight of public attention is focused on his record while he was a member of the Legislature.

Recent polls showed Quinn leading Dukakis by about six percentage points in their race for the Democratic nomination for Governor. That margin probably will build up when the campaign moves into its critical stages.

Governor Sargent has encountered some unfavorable developments in the last few weeks which have knocked him off stride and set him back.

The order by Judge W. Arthur Garrity, Jr., that the state plan for reducing racial imbalance in Boston public schools be carried out next September, was a bad break for the Governor.

Sarge had advanced a proposal that voluntary busing be substituted for forced busing. His idea seemed to have enough merit at least to give it a trial even though it had not worked out in other cities. But Garrity's decision knocked it out.

Up to the time Judge Garrity made his ruling, Sarge was picking up some support in Boston from parents who are violently opposed to having their small sons and daughters bused to schools outside their home neighborhoods.

As the public reaction subsided after Judge Garrity's finding, Governor Sargent was being called a racist by some Black leaders. (The charge is unfounded.) And white parents were criticizing him for not intervening to curb the high-handed methods of officials in the State Department of Education.

Sarge has problems on every side, and the signs indicate they will increase rather than diminish.

Brooke pal violates law in Governor race

A number of persons high in the organization of Senator Edward W. Brooke are convinced that Brooke's political interests would best be served if Governor Francis W. Sargent is defeated for reelection next November.

Brooke himself has declared that he is neutral in the fight between Governor Sargent and former State Commerce Commissioner Carroll Sheehan for the Republican nomination for Governor.

He has asserted that he will support the primary winner in the final election.

That in itself is a rather unusual attitude for a Republican U.S. Senator to take toward a Republican Governor in his home state.

When Governor Endicott Peabody was challenged by the then Lieutenant Governor Francis X. Bellotti in the 1964 Democratic primary, Senator Edward M. Kennedy publicly supported Peabody and urged his nomination even though Ted was hospitalized with a borken back at the time.

Ted Kennedy knew, as presumably does Edward Brooke, that it is an accepted political fact that if a sitting Governor is rejected and repudiated by his own party in a primary, that party faces almost certain disaster in the subsequent election.

Some people close to Brooke point out privately that if Sargent were defeated for reelection next autumn, Brooke would be the undisputed leader of the Massachusetts delegation to the 1976 Republican national convention and his only Bay State adversary for a place on the GOP national ticket would be former U.S. Attorney General Elliot Richardson.

But they have been clumsy in manifesting their hostility to Sargent, and they are taking a gamble that the resentment, which is certain to flare up against Brooke in the Republican party if Sarge is defeated, will be forgotten by 1976.

That might not be the case. Republicans don't forgive and forget as quickly as Democrats. They nurse grudges and grievances and prolong their feuds.

Subject of much discussion in GOP circles is the fact that Albert A. Gammal, Jr., for years one of Brooke's top political lieutenants and now the regional head of the federal government's General Services Administration, is supporting Carroll Sheehan against Governor Sargent.

Brooke, of course, got Gammal the job. In case you are wondering, Brooke has been able to work both sides of the political street. He has done very well at getting patronage from the Nixon administration while at the same time blasting Nixon and calling for his resignation.

Democrats usually aren't that subtle. When a Democrat takes aim and fires at the leader of his party, that invariably marks the end of diplomatic relations between the two.

Actually, Gammal is violating the law when he involves himself in a contest for the Governorship. As a federal employee, he is prohibited by the Hatch Act from participating in a partisan election campaign. But with the protection and support of Brooke, Gammal apparently doesn't have to worry about the Hatch Act.

In fact, it seems that the only persons who have to concern themselves about the law are those close to President Nixon. Senator Hubert H. Humphry and Congressman Wilbur Mills recently were requested to appear before the Watergate Committee for questioning concerning alleged illegal campaign contributions. They ended that probe by flatly refusing to submit to interrogation.

When Edward W. Brooke was elected U.S. Senator, he pledged that he would represent all the people in Massachusetts. He could start doing that by instructing his friend, Albert Gammal, to cooperate with wither the State or the City of Boston by turning over the Boston Naval Shipyard at no cost.

After all, we are supposed to be friends, not ememies. Gammal could be thrown out on his ear a little more than two years from now, and possibly sooner. Meanwhile, some of the people in the Sargent camp might blow the whistle on him for his illegal politicing.

Cong. Studds explains position on abortion

Congressman Gerry E. Studds, who represents the South Shore and Cape Cod on Washington's Capitol Hill, does not personally like the procedure of abortion, but he believes he should not impose his views on other people.

He would leave the decision on abortion to the conscience of each woman and the judgement of her physician.

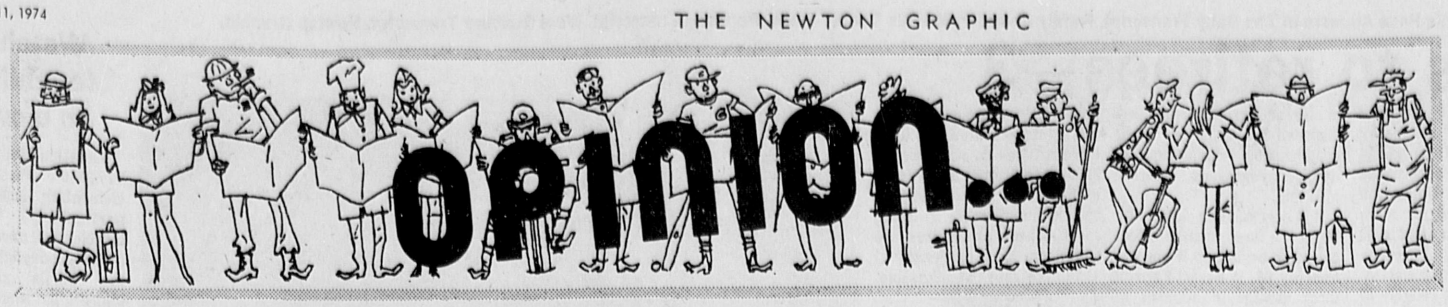

This is the reply of Congressman Studds to a request for his views on abortion:

"I do not support a Constitutional Amendment to prohibit abortion, I believe it best not to take this course because the proposed amendments to the Constitutionnare even more restrictive than our own former Massachusetts law—in that they would prohibit the procedure in all instances whatsoever—even in the event of rape or incest and possibly even in cases where the life of the mother is endangered by the continuation of the pregnancy.

"As you know, this is a deeply personal and highly controversial area—with many sincere Americans holding strong convictions on both sides. At Senate hearings, leaders of our major religions testified eloquently on both sides of the question.

"In such a situation it seems wisest for the government not to intrude—but rather to leave the decision to the conscience of each woman and the judgement of her physician. While I do not personally like the pricedure of abortion, I do not believe that I should impose my views on others; nor should they impose theirs on me.

Crystal Lake

o the Editor:

I am 10 years old and have een enjoying the facilities at rystal Lake in Newton since I as very small. Now that I am lder and able to swim rather ell, since I was on the Swim eam at the Newton YMCA for wo years I find that I am no onger able to enjoy Crystal ake swimming.

Most of the time I am not ermitted to swim in other han the shallow end and annot use the diving board, (I lso represented the diving eam at the Y). This is too imiting and most of my friends nd brothers have found imilar problems.

We feel that there is an unust attitude in the manner the ules are handled at the lake.

For example, we must take a "test" daily to "qualify." Most of the time the guard supposedly giving the "test" isn't even watching and sometimes we "pass" and some times we don't.

One particularly miserable evening I was refused after having "passed" two nights in a row. My little sister "passed" that particular night and her friend didn't. Later my sister, who is eight, "swapped" with her friend so that her friend could have a turn in the deep part and this was with the full consent of the guard. Her friend had been refused that night also. There is obviously a glaring lack of uniformity or any semblance of logic to the whole thing.

My parents feel that Crystal Lake is not used by the teenagers often enough and that these experiences "turn them off" by the time they are twelve. This has happened with my five older brothers. They have all sat out their tearful times at Crystal Lake and eventually stopped going at all. Also just because a kid is big doesn't mean he can swim any better than I, but big kids can do as they please regardless of how they may qualify.

I will be happy to hear from any others who may wish to join a campaign to make Crystal Lake an enjoyable place for us not yet big kids.

The Little League story

To the Editor:

I was a little upset when I read the article in the July 4 edition of the Newton Graphic which quotes Ald. David Jackson as saying "I think Little League is the worst thing that has happened to boys and to baseball."

Before I become very upset and follow up on this article and quote, I would appreciate it if Ald. Jackson would acknowledge by return mail the following questions:

1. If the quote is accurate, what reasons and facts do you have to back up such a statement?

2. Is your Planning Committee and the Recreation Department ready to assume the responsibility of providing Youth Baseball for youngsters, ages 8-12, which would take the place of the five Little Leagues comprised of approximately 2,000 youngsters with a total budget of $50,000 plus from April 1 through June 30 annually?

3. What plans does your committee have to provide such a program that the Recreation Department could undertake and what year would it be implemented?

4. When could your committee hold apublic hearing in order to discuss, rebut or suport the statements made by you and Ms. Bartley concerning Little League? If this is not possible, I am hereby requesting equal time to appear before your committee in order to state my opinions and facts at the next meeting.

If it wasn't for the voluntary efforts of the officers, managers, coaches, parents and women auxiliaries to provide fun, fair play and good sportsmanship through s competitive sport like Little League, where would these youngsters be? Probably playing in the streets or at some school playground with no supervision, no insurance coverage for accidents and most likely, playing in a baseball diamond not properly maintained. Through the efforts of the five Little Leagues, the playgrounds have been improved and maintained, not for the sole purposefof little leaguers, but all school children using these fields.

Michael LeConti,
past president

Gratitude

To the editor:

I would like to express my gratitude to the officers of the emergency unit of the Newton Police Dept. for their swift and very kind reponse to my call foor help at the time of my husband's death.

Their thoughtfullness was a great comfort and is very much appreciated.

Criminal justice

TO THE EDITOR:

If one accepts the myth that we understand the problems and purposes of our criminal justice system, why can't that system perform the simple magic of reducing crime and eliminating recidivism? After all, our expectations are reasonable.

Police have our permission to sternly enforce everchanging laws and, at the same time, be always-sympatheic public servants. Judges are allowed the right to daily dispense the wisdom of Solomon.

The commissioner of correction should appreciate, as we would, being castigated by everyone for anything he does. All correctional officers are blessed with our own facility for being firm and fair to all people at all times. Inmates enjoy(Wouldn'twe?) being told to behame like reponsible citizens while deprived of any responsibility and locked in cages that would offend the NSPCA.

The Parole Board, seeing a person sho may have been degraded to a childish degree of dependency, shares our ESP and can always accurately predict how that person will behave in our unpredictable societyl And parolees, while they may have no friends or funds, are absolut ingrates unless they follow our sterling example as individual paragons of virtue.

Given the myth – and it is one– the we have a legitmate and lasting commitment to investigating and improving our system of justice, athe only magic being performed is the fact that we don't have more recidvism by people who have been in prison and more resignations by career professionals who are disgusted with public indifference.

Until, and unless, we eunderstand that there is no more magic in the criminal justice system than there is in ourselves, we should be prepared for less of what we expect and more of what we deserve.

CPAs tips to retirees—3

(Last in a series of three articles on how to stretch retirement dollars)

Nearly all senior citizens are concerned about rising costs of maintaining good health. Hospital and medical costs have climbed faster than most other expenses in the last decade. Fortunately, the elderly are at least partially protected against runaway costs by Medicare, a form of hospital and medical insurance worth thousnads of dollars to those 65 or older.

To help the elderly understand what health benefits are available, the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants has gathered the following information:

The Medicare program consists of two parts. Part A covers most hospital costs, including a semi-private room, general nursing care, lab tests and the use of hospital equipment such as x-ray machines. The patient has to pay some costs in accordance with a set formula. Unless you have been disabled for more than two years, you must be 65 and eligible for Social Security benefits to qualify for Part A.

Part B, covering roughly 80 per cent of doctor bills and other medical treatment costs, is open to most persons 65 and over, regardless of whether they are covered by Social Security. But some persons fail to join Part B because of a $6.30 monthly fee (scheduled to go to $6.70 in July, 1974) or because they subscribe to some other health maintenance plan.

Part B covers treatment in a hospital, doctor's office or your home and includes part-time nursing care and the rental or purchase of prescribed equipment such as wheel chairs or hospital type bed. Generally it does not cover routine shots or checkups, or drugs, eyeglasses, hearing aids, etc.

It is necessary to sign up for Medicare three months before coverage begins, so if you are nearing 65, it wise to enroll three months in advance of your birthday so that you will be covered from the earliest possible moment.

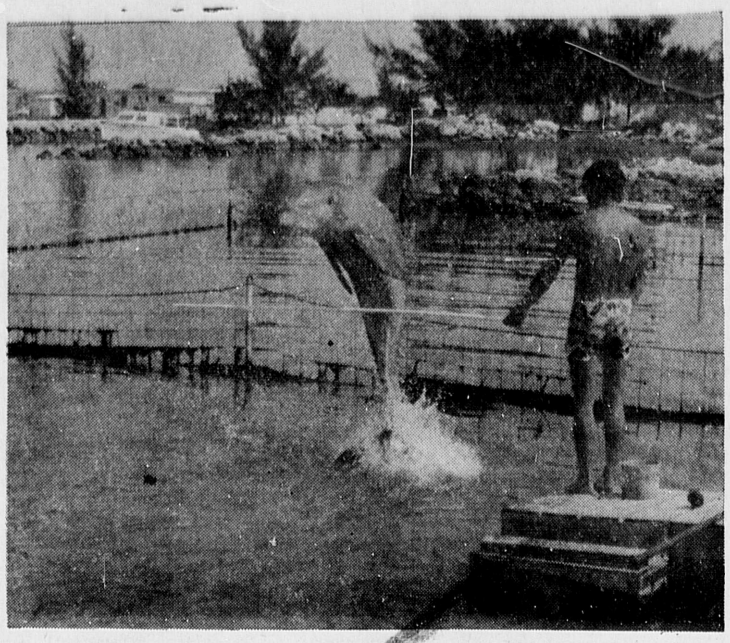

While the financial resources of most elderly citizens are sharply lower than what they were earlier in life, there are a number of offsetting compensations available that let them keep more of what they received. The American Institute of Certified Public Accountants urges all retirees and their families to take full advantage of these opportunities.

The Institute also emphasizes that the suggestions and reminders offered in these three articles do not describe all the requirements that may be necessary for utilizing the options mentioned. In some cases, where procedures are complicated, professional assistance may be advisable.

TOUGH TO REPEAT

DETROIT (UPI) — Only one pitcher, Hal Newhouser of the Tigers, has been able to win the American League's Most Valuable Player award more than once since the award was established in 1931 with Lefty Grove as its first winner.

What makes Newhouser's feat unusual, the Royal Crown Sports Bureau notes, is that he won his two awards consecutively for his work in the 1944 and 1945 seasons.

Doing his thing

It's school days for one of the N.E. Aquarium's five new dolphins. Marine mammal training Sonny Allen encourages his apt pupil to jump over a hurdle, a very difficult task for a 350-pound animal to learn. The Aquarium's dolphins and sea lions have been in training for the past four months at Flipper Sea School in Marathon, Fla., and they will return to Boston later this summer.

Luxury on wheels

Public transportation can be uncrowded, clean, and efficient. It can even be luxurious.

According to the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association, your local Christmas Seal agency, this spring the federal government unwrapped a model of the "bus of the future." The sleek, soft-riding vehicle sported huge panoramic windows, which were three-feet high and ran the entire length of the bus. doors were plenty wide enough to enter comfortable. And the floor was only 17 inches above the curb, half as high as in standard buses, making it faster and easier to board as well as less of a hassle for elderly and disabled people.

According to riders, the trip was quiet and soft, a bit bumpier than even-railed commuter trains but smoothe enough to read newspapers and enjoy it. In addition to comfortable, upholstered seats, there was wall-to-wall carpeting. Not a bad way to go.

Major companies submitted designs for the model, the first new bus design in this country in more than 15 years. It took three years and $26 million to finance the project.

For one year, the bus will be driven hard in the Arizona desert. And it will face the hazards of the big city too. Identical models will be sent to New York, Miami, Seattle, and Kansas City this summer. The buses, which won't cost much more than current models, probably won't be ready for the boarding public until 1977. Hopes are that they will lure motorists away from their cars and cut down air pollution.

Car exhaust is the major contributor to polluted air. And improved public transportation can help lick the pollution problem. Decreasing the number of cars on the road — by organizing car pools or substituting bicycles whenever possible — is another way to attack the problem.

To find out more about ways to reduce pollutants in our air, contact your Lung Association. It's a matter of life and breath.

Wider use of electronic ignition planned for '75

By THE AUTOMOTIVE INFORMATION COUNCIL

Components that start out as add-on equipment by performance buffs sometimes end up as standard equipment on the family automobile—but for different reasons. The electronic ignition systems that are standard equipment on many of today's automobiles—and will be standard on most of the 1975 models—are a good example.

These units originally were installed by performance buffs because standard ignition components could not produce the strong spark required by competition engines which turn at much higher revolutions per minute.

While the performance requirements of your family car's engine differ from a racing-type engine, electronic ignition systems benefit everyone by providing increased gas milage, longer intervals between tuneups and lower exhaust emissions.

Conventional ignition systems utilize a mechanical switch—commonly called "points"—which is activated by a rotating cam located inside the distributor. As the points open and close, a very high electrical current ix produced by another component in the system—the coil—which functions like a transformer. This electrical jolt travels along the spark plug wire to the spark plug, where it jumps a small air gap at the tip of the plug, creating the spark that ignites the air-fuel mixture inside the cylinder.

The points are subject to mechanical wear and deterioration and must be adjusted and replaced periodically, otherwise the engine will run less efficently or misfire. In addition to wasting gasiline, engine misfire typically increases exhaust emissions tenfold.

Most electronic ignition systems eliminate the points by substituting electronic switching devices. Since these components do not wear, the engine "holds its tune" for much longer intervals.

These systems typically generate a more powerful and longer duration spark. This allows for more complete burning of the air-fuel mixture, resulting in better economy and reduced emissions. The increased capacity of some electronic ignition systems also helps to fire fouled spark plugs and start flooded engines.

VA information

Q — Does the Veterans Administration pay dividends on the Service-Disabled Veterans (RH) policy issued me two months ago?

A — No. Dividends are paid only on National Service Life Insurance and U.S. Government Life Insurance policies with "V" or "K" prefixed policy numbers.

Q — I entered military service before completing high school, and was honorably discharged last month after two years of duty. Can I get free GI Bill benefits from Veterans Administration while finishing high school?

A — Yes. Veterans in your category may receive educational assistance without charge against basic entitlement. Suggest you apply to the VA regional office in your state for this benefit.

Watch out for children on bicycles

Vacation for more than 977,000 Massachusetts elementary school children, particularly those with bicycles, will mean six hours of additional daylight exposure to the perils of crowded highways, the Insurance Information Institute warns in a safety reminder to parents and motorists.

The Institute cited statistics of the Registry of Motor Vehicles, showing that the highest incidence of pedestrian and bicycling deaths and injuries among children of school age involves those between the ages of five and 14.

Records for 1972, latest available complete year, show that 49 children in this age group were killed as pedestrians on Massachusetts highways, while 1,937 were injured. In addition, 14 children were killed while riding bicycles and 1,488 were injured.

Parents are asked to make sure their children are familiar with the road before allowing them to ride bikes on public ways. The Institute cautions motorists to always give cyclists the right of way and to approach and pass children on the highway with caution.

Nature's Ways

By WAYNE HANLEY
Mass. Audubon Society

Cicadas have popped up on Cape Cod in such numbers that the natives insist the insects' whirring song can be heard above the roar of the traffic.

One must keep in mind, of course, that this is an early estimate on the decibels. The roar of traffic had not rached the Fourth of July crest when experienced listeners made the test.

The cicada is the "17-year locust", a winged, one-inch long insect that vaguely resembles a house fly. Both the males and females have drums on their abdomens, but only the males tune up and buzz. If the females also buzzed, one might have difficulty hearing the 6 p.m. news on television duringa bmper crop year for cicadas, such as this one.

Cicadas always have interested naturalists not because they have a loud, monotonous song, but because in many ways they are untypical insects. The caggage aphid, for instance, has 16 generations in a summer and each generation results in an average of 41 young. To make matters worse, all 41 usually are females and they reproduce without being fertilized directly. So an aphid in one summer could have 1,560,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 descendants! Theoretically, that is. Thank heavens predatory insects cut wholesale swaths through the aphid packs.

But the female cicada flies to the twigs of a tree and inserts fewer than 500 eggs. And that is it for the cicada for the next 17 years! The young hatch, drop from the twigs, burrow underground and for 17 years rummage around, chomping on tree roots and the like. Then they take their turn in the sun, and Cape Codders hear another massive serenade for a few weeks.

There are two things in that formula that are unusual for insects: they usually lay more eggs in a lifetime (termites may lay 6000 to 7000 daily), and few i sects live so long.

One would think that the slow breeding rate would imperil the future of the cicada. Yet, as Cape Codders can testify, the insects are astonishingly successful. Entomologists have counted as many as 40,000 cicadas emerging from the soil from beneath the limb-spread of one large tree. The holes through which they emerged were so close together that they averaged 84 per square foot.

Not all cicadas require 17 years in which to complete the cycle from egg to egg. A few do it in three or four years. And there is more than one population of 17-year cicadas, so a different population may complete its 17-year cycle in three or four years from 1974.

It is unfortunate that cicadas were misnamed "lucusts" for they are not the locusts that scouraged the earth in Biblical days—and still scourge the Middle East.

Federal Consumer Advocate

Editor's Note—The following is published monthly by the Boston Federal Executive Board. Direct all queries to Boston Federal Executive Board, Room 2200, John F. Kennedy Federal Building, Boston, Ma., 02203.

Due to the number of queries generated by our previous column on interstate land sales, it was deemed worthwhile to devote another entire column to this subject.

Q. My husband and I have been invited to a dinner party at a local hotel by a lareg out-of-state land development company. Can you give us some clues to potential deceptions we might be on the look-out for?

A. Your question might be answered better by listing what selling practices a reliable sales firm would avoaid:

1) Concelaing or misrepresenting facts about current and resale values.

2) Failing to honor refund promises or agreements.

3) Misrepresenting facts about the subdividion relating to legal title, claims against it, latent dangers such as swamps or cliffs, unusual physical features, such as poor drainage, restrictions on use, or lack of necessary facilities and utilities.

4) Failing to execute the subdivision as planned.

5) Failing to deliver deeds, title insurance policies.

6) Subjecting potential customers to Abusive treatment and high pressure sales tactics.

7) Failing to make good inducements such as free vacations, gifts, etc.

8) Participating in "Bait and Switch" tactics whereby lots are advertised at extremely low prices and then pressure the shopper to buy one that is much more expensive.

9) Failing to grant rights under the Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosure Act.

Q. Supposing I were a consumer who feels he was deceived by one of those interstate land sales companies, where could I turn for help?

A. There are several places to go for assistance such as:

Housing and Urban Development Agency, Office of Interstate Land Sale Registration, 451 Seventh Street, S.W., Washington D.C. 20410; or Boston Regional Office, Federal Trade Commission, 150 Causeway Street, Boston, Mass. 02114. Phone - 617-223-6621.

Then there is your State Attorney General or your State Department of Consumer Affairs or your local Better Business Bureau.

Q. Have there been any attempts at self-regulations by these land sales firms?

A. Yes. There is an American Land Development Association (ALDA). They have adopted a 10 point code of ethics which support full disclosure. Unfortunately, ALDA has approximately 500 members of the stimated 10,000. None of the larger companies are included. Since ALDA has no effective sanctions, the aggrieved consumer is better off seeking help from federal or state agencies or a private attorney.

YOUR Almys charge account card is good in any of Almys 11 other stores in Salem, Beverly, Danvers, Burlington, Revere, Hanover, Brockton, Methuen, Hadley, Cambridge and Nashua, N.H.

Air Force band concert at Cape Cod Canal

The Air Force Band from Otis Air Force Base, Cape Cof, will present a two-hour concert Friday, July 19, at 7 p.m., under the auspices of the Massachusetts Maritime Academy, on the Academy campus at Taylor's Point, bordering the Cape Cod canal.

Rear Admiral Lee Harrington, Academy President, announced the music will include some Big Band Sounds of the 30's and 40's, a few current feature rock and pop songs, and other varied slections. The program will be open to Cape Codders, tourists and summer residents.

Capt. Lawrence J. Gilbo, Band Commander, said the band is made up of Air Guardsman musicians from a very heterogeneous background in civilian life. They include salesmen, teachers, machinists, counselors, accountants, and carpenters, all fused together by their penchant for playing music.

The Band was formed in 1947 and through the years it has performed at various military and civilian functions ranging from reville parades to World's Fairs and Presidential Inaugurations.

Capt. Gilbo said the musical program will include selections from Fiddler on the Roof, Colonial Rhapsody, Parade of the Chrioteers, Music from The Sting, Melodies of Tschaikowsky, and well-known marches such as Washington Post, The Billboard, American Eagle,a dn DeMolay Commandery.

He said the program will also include some Big band Sounds performed by the 567th's Combo with Sgt. Roy Hagen, Sgt. Bob Liberatore, Sgt. Tom Finn, and Sgt. George Christo.

Boston College radio station to go on air

Boston's newest radio station, WZBC-FM, owned by Boston College and operated by students at the Jesuit University, will present its first summer special on July 22 at 10 p.m.

The program entitled "A serious look at the Future of Radio and TV" will feature major figures in the Boston broadcast area. Participants are Perry S. Ury, Eastern Regional vice president of RKO General; J. William Grimes, vice president, CBS Radio Division and general manager of WEEI and Sy Yanoff, general manager of WBZ-TV.

The program, which will be taped on Thursday evening, July 18, is planned as the first of a series of programs on the media in Boston.

Among the topics to be discussed will be the effect of format, ratings and regulations on the broadcast media.

The program will be repeated in September.

WZBC is located at 90.3 FM on the dial and has an effective radiating power of 17 watts. Because of the location of the antenna on the Boston College campus on a hill overlooking the city, the signal may be picked up throughout the greater Boston area.

Green plant ideal for picture window

If your home has a large picture window that lets the sun shine in, you may have an unnecessary energy problem.

If the sun shines through that window you have what amounts to a "greenhouse" inside, with temperatures far higher than they need be. That means your air conditioner will be working overtime, using energy you would really rather not spare.

The American Assn. of Nurserymen suggests a novel remedy — a green, growing awning of leafy vines to screenout the sun's rays. The way they describe it, it sounds like a fairly simple project.

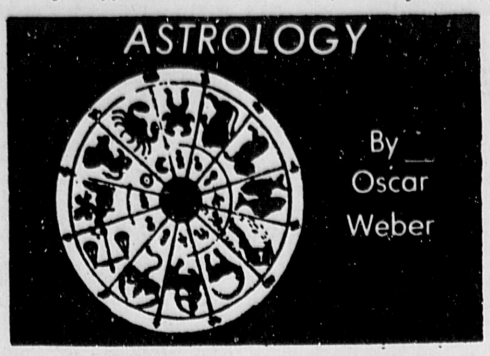

Put up a trellis, they instruct, coming out horizontally from the roof overhang above the window. Train your deciduous twining vines on that trellis, and after a couple of growing seasons you will have an atrractive and highly practical addition to your home.

The nurserymen suggest you select a deciduous vine for this purpose because its leaves will fall off when winter comes to let the sun stream in through the window to save on heating energy. It's an awning that nature herself adjusts to meet your heating and cooling needs.

piranha Serrasalmus nattereri
The much-feared piranha has a reputation for attacking and killing animals far larger than itself. Although stories of its ferocity may be exaggerated, the sharp triangular teeth are capable of skeletonizing a victim in short order. If they go into a feeding frenzy, they are dangerous to man.

TRUE PICES

Q. I am a believer in what astrology charts tell me and I love your column. Would you be good enough to tell me my prospects? I was born on March 9, 1920 at 2?01 p.m. in Boston, Mass. I seem to be a true Pices in all aspects.
ba.

A. All folks who are born when the Sun is in Pisces are not alike. The variations are indicated by the positions of the Moon, the planets and particularly by the Sign of the Zodiac on the Eastern Horizon at the mement of birth called the Ascendent. Any planet that may be in the First House is also significant.

In your chart the planet Neptune which is the "ruler" of your Sun Sign Pisces was in the First House close to the Ascendent and in "conjunction" aspect to Jupiter. That is why you "seem to be a true Pisces." In addition, your Moon was in Scorpio in Favorable aspect to the above indicating you have excellent possibilities of developing a form of extra sensory perception.

You have had strong hunches about things, are intuitive and have a fantastic imagination. Your sense of humor enables you to laugh in the face of adversity and you are capable of developing an idealistic philosophy in life.

You have a fine intellect that is capable of benefiting from a high education and would do well in the academic world. You are inclined to be just and honorable and others are apt to appreaciate your sound moral principles.

You would be well advised to avoid gambling or taking needless risks. Do not permit your enthusiasm or "bling faith" to influence your better judgement. Practice moderation in all matters for best results. Smoking, liquors, fried foods and fumes from volatile oils are apt to have a subtle and harmful effect on your health and would best be avoided.

Sociable and Romantic

Q. I have recently become interested in Astrology and would enjoy hearing about my horoscope. I was born on June 18, 1937 at 2:18 a.m. in Neward, New Jersey. M.C.H.

A. Your horoscope indicates a sociable, idealistic and very romantic disposition which may have made it difficult to settle down earlier in your life. You were likely to have had independent and somewhat erratic ideas about human relations and friendships in general and about sex in particular.

You could be ardently in love only to turn cold especially when the recipient of your affections proved incompatible intellectually. You are capable of being impulsive in emotional matters and you may have attracted some unusual people or experienced some strange relationships.

You are able to facinate others with your magnetism and may be influenced by your hunches or first impressions about them. On the one hand you are apt to seek perfection in a loved one while on the other hand your trusting and impressionable nature may attract one who is unreliable or unworthy.

There are some indications in your chart that you may develop poor sleeping habits which in time could exact a toll for such neglect if continued.

Influential friends and acquaintances are apt to prove helpful from time to time. You are likely to attract a large and varied assortment of comvpanions during your lifetime. You are not apt to tolerate any injustice from anyone and will sevdr a relationship rather than put up with it.

All your senses are alert and you are keenly aware of all that is going on around you. You have kexcellent powers of observation.

Fall pilgrimage by Cardinal to spend Yom Kippur in Jerusalem

A Fall pilgrimage being sponsored by Humberto Cardinal Medeiros of Boston will spend "Yom Kippur," the solemn 'Day of Atonement' of Jews, in the City of Jerusalem.

The Holy Land tour, which will also visit Rome and offer an optional extension to Ireland, is now being organized by the Cardinal's pilgrimage staff. It will depart Boston for Tel Aviv on Sunday, Sept. 22, returning from Rome on Sunday, Oct. 6. "Yom Kippur" occurs this year on Thursday, Sept. 26. The extension into Ireland will occupy five days.

Spiritual director of the Holy Land pilgrimage will be Rev. Stephen C. Doyle, O.F.M., a Franciscan priest and Scripture scholar who currently teaches at Pope John XXIII National Seminary for Delayed Vocations in Weston (Mass.) Father Stephen is an alumnus of the Hebrew Union College (Rabbinical School) in Cincinatti and the Pontifical Biblical Institute in Rome, as well as of St. Bonaventure's University and the Catholic Uniciversity of America, Washington, D.C.

Stops on the Holy Land itinerary include Tel Aviv, Haifa, Tiberias, the Sea of Galiliee, Jerusalem, Bethlehem, the Judean Desert, Jericho, the Dead Sea, Qumran, and many other places associated intimately with the life of Christ and the Bible.

The group will depart Jerusalem for Rome on Oct. 1, the stay in Italy coinciding with the opening of the 3rd International Synod of Bishops and the feast (Oct. 4) of St. Francis of Assisi. In Rome, the group will visit the four Basilicas of Rome, modern and ancient parts of the city, the Vatican, and Santa Susanna, the titular church of Cardinal Medeiros, which is staffed by American Paulist priests. An audience with Pope Paul is anticipated.

An optional excursion to Assisi on St. Francis' feast day will be available.

Overseas flights will be via Alitalia Airlines. Organizer of the pilgrimage is Brother Gerard Brassard, A.A., who directs the Cardinal's domestic and foreign pilgrimages. Technical arrangments are by University Travel, Cambridge. Tour rate is $912 for the basic trip.

The Ireland extension will visit Dublin, Limerick, Killarney, Cork, and intervening points. Departure for Boston will be via Shannon Airport on Oct. 10.

Further information, descriptive brochures, and reservations may be had from Brother Brassard, Boston Pilgrimages, P.O. Box 291, Cambridge, Mass. 02138. Registration requires a deposit of $100 per person.

Recreation notes

100 attend first arts concert

Summer Arts in the Parks

The Newton Recreation Department's summer arts in the parks program got off to a good start the night before the fourth, when nearly a hundred young people and adults attended a concert by the Newton High Jazz Ensemble at the Newton Centre Playground. Following the concert, another 150 attended the showing of "Brian's Song," at the Centre Playground. This film was the first in the department's summer film program being conducted throughout the City during July and August.

Nantasket Trip

Monday, 40 children from the Warren Junior High School Playground went on a picnic and outing to Nantasket. Supervising the activity were playground leaders, Paul Puzzanghero and Mary England.

Puppet Show

Eleanor Boylan presented a puppet show and demonstration at the Burr Playground Tuesday afternoon for the children of the District II playgrounds, including Hamilton School, Williams School, Auburndale Playground, Warren Junior High School, River Street Playground, Franklin School, Wellington Playground and West Newton Common.

Day Camp Trips

Youngsters attending the Newton Recreation Department's Day Camp for Special Children, took an all-day trip to the Stoneham Zoo Friday. The campers from the Bowen School took along a picnic lunch. The group was supervised by Miss Eleanor Weiner, director; William Bell, assistant director and recreation leaders, Bill Henderson, Lynne Blackman, Leslie Chin, Marcia Stein and Judy Lipson. Director Diane Rubinoff and leaders, Robin Goldberg, Barbara Piselli and Peter Hite of the Mason-Rice Day Camp are planning a trip for Thursday, July 11. Many trips to zoos, camp sites and points of interest are included in the program for the seven week camping season.

On TV Show

Upcoming performances in the Summer Arts in the Parks series include a puppet show and demonstration by Eleanor Boylan at the Emerson School Tuesday, July 30 at 2 p.m. July 18, at the Auburndale Playground from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. the Garden City Squares will hold a square dance.

The Newton High Jazz Ensemble will present two concerts, the first on July 14 at City Hall and the second at the Franklin School on July 17. Starting times for both concerts is 7:30 p.m.

David White will present a "Children's Illustrations Workshop." drawings of fantasy and fun with children, Thursday, July 11, at the Newton Centre Playground at 10 a.m.

"Paper Pottery" with Judy Chernin will be offered at the Burr Playground at 10 a.m. Thursday, July 11.

The Summer Film Program will continue with Chaplain Night at the Franklin School on Wednesday, July 17 from 8:45 to 10 p.m.

The classic films on that evening will include "The Fireman," "His New Job," and "Tillie's Punctured Romance."

Eagle Scout David Hall (center) of Newton Centre is given his silver medal by Ralph S. Brisson (right), and Scoutmaster Paul Sawin (left). David comes from a scouting family. His father, Henry Hall, is a committee member of Troop No. 205 and is its first aid counselor. His mother, Mrs. Alice Hall, is chairman of the Newton Campfire Girls as well as a No. 205 committee member. David's brother, Steven, is a life scout in the troop and his sister, Carolyn, is a Discovery Club girl.

Newton Scouts receive high awards

Several Newton Centre Scouts received high awards, one of them Eagle rank, at Troop No. 205's Annual Banquet, held recently at the Newton Methodist Church.

David Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hall of 57 Parker St., reached scouting's highest rank, Eagle.

Well on their way toward reaching the same rank are Steven Hall, David's brother; Michael Ijams and David Levitan, who received their Life rank and Stuart Cole, Charles Belden and Stephen Ijams who received Star rank at the dinner.

David , who began his scouting with Cub Pack No. 205, performed an outstanding Community Project, according to Scoutmaster Paul Sawin. He set up a time and place for the Red Cross Bloodmobile to operate in Newton Cnetre and then lined up blood donors.

The scout spend approximately 50 hours in all on the project, while keeping up with his troop duties as senior patrol leader.

In making the Eagle presentation, the scoutmaster told some 150 attendees at the dinner, that David was "one of the few scouts in the troop to have captured the trophy for top patrol when he was a patrol leader and that in addition, he also held the Scoutmaster's Citation, an award unique to the troop and presented for service to the troop."

Ralph S. Brisson, Newton district executive for Norumbega Council, delivered the "Eagle Charge." He told David that everything he had received and enjoyed through scouting, he was expected to return through scouting, for other scouts.

Other ranks achieved were: First Class, William Ijams; Second Class, Eric Hintsa; Tenderfoot, Harry Ricles, Stuart Feldman, Ilan Hochman; Scout, Devin Stewart, John Kilborn, Chris Arthur, William Gans and Eliot Young.

Steven Hammett received the Scoutmaster's Citation and William Gans the Most Cheerful Scout Award.

David Levitan received the largest amount of merit badges — seven — and only the Eagle Community project now stands between him and Eagle rank. His badges were woodcarving, coin collecting, personal management, theatre, metalwork, emergency preparedness and communications.

Other merit badges earned: Gerald Fridman, drafting, firemanship, metalwork, first aid and the French Interpreter's Strip; Eliot Young, skiing and the German Interpreter's Strip; David Sawin, metalwork and firemanship; David Hall, citizenship in the nation and safety; Stephen Ijams, firemanship and first aid; William Ijams, first aid; Stuart Feldman, swimming; Harry Ricles, stamp collecting, and Michel Fridman, cooking and the Hebrew Interpreter's Strip.

Those Troop offices filled were: Assistant Scoutmaster Philip Rounseville and Chris Hammett; Senior Patrol Leader, David Hall; Assistant Senior Patrol Leader, Steven Hammett and David Levitan; Patrol Leaders, David Sawin, Steven Hall and Charles Belden; Assistant Patrol Leaders, Eric Hintsa, Stuart Cole and Yaron Hochman.

Troop Committee Chairman Larry Belden was presented a Scout Statue in recognition of his long and devoted service too the Troop.

The scoutmaster was presented a new uniform by the troop — and the scouts voted to 'retire' his 11-year-old one.

Kelley new chief at St. Margaret's

Edward C. Kelley Jr., M.D., of West Newton, has been appointed to the position of Chief of Obstetrics and Gynecology for St. Margaret's Hospital in Dorchester.

Kelley currently serves as director of medical education at the hospital, a post he has held since 1966. He was the first director of the Maternal Infant Care Program at Laboure Clinic in South Boston, a satallite clinic of St. Margaret's. He currently is serving his sixth year in that post.

A 1952 graduate of Harvard University, Dr. Kelley received his medical degree from Tufts University School of Medicine in 1956. He served his internship at Brooke Army Hospital, Tex., and his residency in OBS-GYN at St. Margaret's and Carney Hospitals.

An assistant clinical professor at Tufts, Kelley is also a staff member of the Carney and New England Medical Center Hospitals.

Certified by both the American College and the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology, he is a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, the Obstetrical Society of Boston and the New England OBS-GYN Society.

Kelley is married to the former Mary Ellen Gaffney and is the father of six children.

At German conference

Richard T. Geist of Newton will be returning home from Germany soon after attending the annual convention of the American Association of Teachers of German in Bonn.

The six-day stay included lectures, workshops, speeches, discussions and a look at some of the modern language-teaching aids.

This year's convention was the largest in the 50-year history of the association and the first ever held outside of the United States.

Oak Hill Library now at Memorial School

The Oak Hill Park branch of the Newton Free Library has moved to new quarters in the Memorial School on Stein Circle, Newton Centre.

The Library's former location in the Oak Hill Shopping Center was sold along with the block of stores, and the rent asked by the new owner was more than the city could pay.

The School Department and Dr. Olive Eldridge, principal of the Memorial School, offered empty school space to the branch library. The Memorial School library will be found on the second floor.

In its new location, the Oak Hill Branch Library will continue to offer varied services to its patrons, and will have easy access to the street.

Oak Hill Branch Library hours will remain the same, which means open Monday-Friday, 1-6 p.m., and additional hours on Thursday, from 10 a.m. to noon.

Union Market National Bank would like to offer you a bribe.

1/2% off on loans plus a free radio or cooler or outing set.

We want all your business. So we're ready to make it worth your while.

The deal is this: If you open a single statement account with us, (that's one monthly statement called the Work Statement, that covers both your savings and free checking accounts), we'll give you a 1/2% discount on any loan of $2000 or more.

And when you take the loan we'll sweeten the deal with your choice of a free RCA Portable AM/FM Radio, a Coleman Snow-Lite Low Boy Cooler Chest or a Thermo Serv Outing Set with picnic blanket and thermos.

In fact, you can get the free goods with any $2000 loan even if you don't open a single statement account. (We figure some of your business is better than none at all.)

But hurry, drop by our installment loan department now. This offer is good only while the supply lasts.

After all, how long can a bank offer a bribe like this.

free portable AM/FM radio

free cooler chest

free outing set with picnic blanket and thermos

We work as hard for your money as you do.

We received a most unusual recipe from a Watertown reader–whether you take it seriously or not, it's up to you. Thank you, R.P.E.

THE "HANDFUL" RECIPE
FOR THOSE THAT EAT ALONE

1. Handful of a pan (small)
2. Handful of water
3. Handful of onions
4. Handful of hamburg
5. Handful of tomato sauce
6. Handful of parsley
7. Handful of sesame seeds
8. Handful of raisins

Heat water to boiling, then put in order: 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. Will be done in a "handful" of time. And there is more than a "Handful" of vitamins.

"Handfully yours" Mr. R.P.C. Watertown

I received a telephone request for "Aunt Gert's Strawberry Whipped Cream Pie" over the weekend and remembered the magnificence of this elegant dessert–the easiest of pies to assemble–and so I made the pie to the delight of my family. Here it is for those who missed it when it was printed in 1969.

AUNT GERT'S STRAWBERRY
WHIPPED CREAM PIE
WITH GLAZE

Prepare and bake a 10-inch pie crust. Cool. Whip ½ pint heavy cream and pile into crust–smooth out. Have ready 2 bought sponge layer cakes. . . put 1 layer on top of the whipped cream. Slice the second layer and fill in spaces. You'll need 2 pints strawberries. Reserve 1 cup of strawberries. Wash, dry and stand up remaining strawberries on top of layer cake. Make the following glaze and spoon carefully over strawberries:

STRAWBERRY GLAZE

1 cup strawberries, crushed
1 cup sugar
2 heaping teaspoons arrowroot
One-third cup water
3-4 drops red food color

Combine crushed strawberries and sugar. Combine arrowroot and water and mix well. Combine strawberries and arrowroot mixture and cook until thick–add 3-4 drops red food color - do not allow to boil. Spoon carefully over strawberries. Refrigerate for 2 hours before serving. Serves 10

Mrs. T.A., Norwood has sent in an unusual relish which she serves with barbecued meat or poultry. Yummm, delicious!

MELON-PIMIENTO RELISH

1 cup cider vinegar
1 cup granulated sugar
2 teaspoons whole allspice
1 teaspoon whole cloves
2 jars (4 oz. ea.) pimientos, drained and diced
1 cup finely chopped cantaloupe
1 cup finely chopped green pepper
½ cup finely chopped onion

Combine vinegar, sugar, allspice and cloves. Bring to boiling point. Boil gently about 15 minutes. Strain liquid. Discard spices. Combine pimientos, cantaloupe, green pepper and onion. Pour vinegar mixture over cantaloupe mixture. Refrigerate, covered, overnight or longer. Serve with meat or poultry. Makes about 3 cups.

Question: We attended a very informal brunch lately and the hostess served a most unusual omelet. . . though I've asked her many times since then for the recipe, she keeps telling me that she can't find it. So, I'm asking you if you ever heard of an omelet that has cooked fine noodles and cheese in it. I'd really appreciate your helping me with this because it's quite good.

Mrs. N.B., Dedham

Answer; My files yielded the following recipe–hope it's the one you want:

CHEESY NOODLE OMELET

8 eggs
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
2 cups noodles (fine) cooked
1 cup (4 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon chopped pimiento
2 tablespoons butter, melted

In a bowl beat eggs with salt and pepper. Stir in noodles, cheese, green pepper and piminento. In large covered skillet melt butter; pour in egg mixture. Cover and cook over medium heat for 15-20 minutes or until set. Do not stir. Cut into wedges; remove from pan. Serves 8

Question: Due to the increased price of canned salmon, I've cut down on my purchase of this food and yet occasionally I do buy the small can as a special treat for the family. Have you any ideas on stretching a small 7-¾oz. can to serve 4?

Answer: Does the idea of French Salmon-wiches fried to a deep golden brown appeal to you? Here's a very good recipe and what's more, it serves 4!

FRENCH SALMON-WICHES

(From Better Homes and Gardens Fish and Seafood Cookbook)

1 can (7-¾ oz.) salmon
1 teaspoon instant minced onion
2 teaspoons water
¼ cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
¼ teaspoon salt
8 slices bread
1 beaten egg
2 tablespoons milk
Sesame seed
¼ cup shortening, butter or margarine.

Drain salmon, reserving liquid. Remove bones and skin from salmon; flake. Soak onion in water for 5 minutes. Blend together salmon, onion, mayonnaise or salad dressing, green pepper, salt. Spread mixture evenly on 4 slices of bread; top with remaining bread. In shallow dish combine reserved salmon liquid, beaten egg, and milk; dip each sandwich in the egg mixture. Sprinkle both sides of sandwiches with sesame seed. Heat shortening, butter or margarine in skillet; place sandwiches in skillet and brown on both sides. Continue cooking until sandwiches are heated through. Serve while hot. Makes 4 sandwiches.

Dimitri's suit and coat

Fall heralds the country gentleman

By RUTH LENSON

"The man of fashion this fall will find his search well rewarded with men's wear fashions to suit his individual needs. In addition to a collection of hats and overcoats, there is heavy concentration on tailored clothing. Fully constructed two and three piece suits, though seen as the rising young star in today's new fashions, will not replace the classic suit." So spoke Chip Tolbert, Fashion Director of the Men's Fashion Association at the opening seminar of MFA's four-day Press Preview of Men's Fall-Winter Fashions held in the turn-of-century Monmouth Hotel in beautiful Spring Lake, New Jersey.

Pierre Cardin, the world famous French designer, was present for the opening of the press preview of fall fashions. Cardin, credited with revolutionizing men's fashion, has two basic concerns: the man's idea of himself, and his desire for an understanding of dressing for different moods and moments in time.

Cardin designs for the contemporary man (who can afford his fashions)–this man, claims the designer, "rarely goes to bed taking off the same clothes he wore that morning". Cardin blends his futuristic vision with a rare sense of taste and fit as well as his love for new and luxurious fabrics and materials.

Shaped Clothing sustains the classic Cardin fit with prominent shoulders and suppressed waist. Pants are plain fronted or forward tucked, sometimes full and always flaring slightly from knee to trouser bottom. He also concentrates on slope shoulders, slightly narrower lapels, somewhat shorter jackets with different vent treatments.

Another European designer highlighting the men's fashion scene is Piero Dimitri, winner of the 1973 Coty Fashion Award in Menswear Design. After working as apprentice to top European designers, he will be Design Consultant for all Michaels-Stern lines as well as stylist for the "Dimitri for Michaels-Stern line. Lester Frankenstein, president of the 125 year old firm feels confident that Dimitri will inject creative vitality into menswear '74.

Following are some of the styles prevalent in the country gentleman fall trend:

THE COAT STORY: Lots of camel, loden green, navy and tweeds. Such as: the golden-camel wool tweed single breasted fly-front topcoat with fly front closing, epaulets and buckle free tabs. OR, the vicuna-color wool double breasted town coat with back half belt and shoulder high inverted back pleat.

"Plaids brighten city streets and dignify country lanes," says Chip Tolbert as he commented on plaid fashions stepping down the runway. Browns have never been more desirable—golden tans, rust, luggage, and pale beiges. Modeled was a handsome brown, tan, rust camel plaid wool single breasted water repellent coat that is actually an elongated pea coat. (Incidentally we counted over fifteen pea coat variations ranging all the way from oyster white to a near copy of the Navy's regulation pea coat.)

In true trench coat styling, a plaid in brown, rust, beige wool tweed, double-breasted and belted. The coat for many seasons is the multi-color plaid Harris tweed reversible to natural cotton gabardine.

RAINCOATS: Natural Dacron, polyester, cotton rubberized double-breasted trench coats. . . also a double-breasted trench coat in polyester rayon twill with a plush zip out pile lining.

Loden green is important this year as seen in a double-breasted belted coat with deep pockets concealed in French seams.

FAKES are fun to wear for men too! For example, a dark brown simulated suede double breasted coat with deep pile collar and lapels. And, for the adventuresome a leopard print acrylic pile wrap coat. Want to put on the "dog"? Well, maybe the "rabbit" would be more exact–it's a deeply piled white acrylic double breasted coat with a standup collar and wide lapels.

The businessman may prefer the black and gray diagonal weave double-breasted chesterfield coat that boasts quiet refinement. Super elegant when worn over a charcoal pin-striped wool flannel vested suit, oyster white shirt and port wine silk tie.

SUITS: Though stripes are making a comeback in fall suits (newest are those in black with white pinstripes and brown with camel pinstripes) there are also many variations of the brown-on-brown theme. Also shown are a liberal sprinkling of knits. Many fall suits are sensible three-piece outfits. Some offer vests which are reversible while other sport suits offer an extra pair of trousers which make it possible to convert the suit to a sport coat and slacks ensemble.

The "town and country look" features details such as suede or smooth leather elbow patches and sued cording around lapels and pockets. Fashions for leisure time have brought forth soft cable knit sweaters with modified shawl collars and deep pocksts.

Choosing a sport coat this fall will be easy. . . country-type plaids, windowpanes as well as solid colors and the keyword is "refined". A round of applause greeted the classic navy jacket worn with camel and navy windowpaned trousers, a burgundy knit sweater vest and off white shirt.

Sedate fashions are "safe" fashions '74.

Food and Fashion by Ruth Lenson

Across the Kitchen Counter

For centuries the most popular dessert, especially in the summertime, has been ice cream.

Frozen desserts trace their ancestry to the time of Charles I of England over 300 years ago. The king's French chef came up with "frozen milk" that so pleased the king that he pensioned his chef with 500 pounds a year and swore him to secrecy about the recipe.

Forerunners of frozen desserts graced the table of Louis XIV, where they were described as "delicious sweetmeat, cold and compact as marble". Ice cream made the society pages when Dolly Madison was the First Lady...she served strawberry ice cream to the delight and amazement of her guests.

Today ice cream is an American favorite and it's easy to see why. No other food is so rich in flavor, refreshing in taste or can be served with such a minimum of effort, and speaking of effort, though it does take a bit of doing, many people are discovering the pleasure of making their own ice cream. It's fun to make in your own kitchen, using either the ice cube tray of your refrigerator or an electric (or hand-cranked) freezer.

With so many ice cream flavors available today, vanilla remains the most popular. If you would like to "guild the lilly" try any one of the following toppings for a real treat:

VANILLA ICE CREAM TOPPINGS

Pour warmed maple syrup over vanilla ice cream and sprinkle salted almonds on top...or, Combine equal parts of whole cranberry sauce and marshmallow cream and spoon over vanilla ice cream...or, spoon canned warm applesauce over vanilla ice cream and add a dash or two of ground nutmeg...or, in a saucepan combine ½ cup bourbon, ½ cup light cream, ½ cup corn syrup and simmer gently for 20 minutes. Serve warm over ice cream or store in covered container in refrigerator and serve chilled. Makes about 2 cups delicious sauce

There are two methods of making ice cream at home. The hand-cranked or electric freezers produce a fine textured cream because air is beaten into the freezing mixture by the dasher. To make the churn type ice cream, follow manufacturer's directions. The following is a checklist for successful homemade ice cream:

Make ice cream mix and chill. Use packaged crushed ice to give the ice cream finer texture. If you start with a block of ice or cubes, chip ice from block; place in a canvas-type bag and crush with mallet or hammer. Pour chilled mix into freezer can, filling it no more than two-thirds full to leave room for expansion. Layer ice and salt 1 cup salt to 2 quarts ice, until tub is tightly packed. To harden ice cream: carefully remove cover, left out dasher and scrape ice cream back into the can. Pour off brine and pack container with more salt and crushed ice in same proportions. Cover with towels or newspapers to insulate; let stand 1 hour to harden.

FRENCH VANILLA
ICE CREAM

4 egg yolks
1 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
1 vanilla bean split lengthwise or 2 tablespoons pure vanilla extract
2 cups heavy cream

For crank type freezer method: In top part of double boiler, beat egg yolks with sugar and salt. Thoroughly blend in milk; if using vanilla bean, add now. (To use vanilla bean, remove and scrape inside part into custard mixture.) Cook, stirring constantly over hot, not boiling water until thick and mixture coats a metal spoon. Remove from heat; cover with waxed paper, touching surface of custard; chill. Stir in cream and vanilla extract (if used). Pour into freezer container of ice cream maker. Insert dasher; put on lid and fit into crank unit. Pack freezer alternately with crushed ice and coarse salt (see above checklist tips). If using hand crank, turn until it turns with difficulty. Remove container and carefully clean lid-remove dasher and pour ice cream into a large freezer container to within ½ inch from top. Cover well and freeze 3 hours or longer. FOR REFRIGERATOR METHOD: Make custard as above and cool, but do not stir in cream. Pour cooled custard into ice cube tray without cube divider, freeze until mushy and partially frozen, about 1 hour. Whip cream until soft peaks form; turn partially frozen custard into chilled bowl and beat until smooth. Fold in whipped cream. Pour into 2 large freezer contains to within ½ inch from top. Cover and freeze 3 hours or longer, stirring often during first hour. Makes 1 quart. FRUIT ICE CREAM—Add 2 cups pureed strawberries, raspberries, peaches or crushed pineapple. PEANUT BRITTLE ICE CREAM — 2 cups crushed peanut brittle. Prepare French Vanilla Ice Cream; after adding cream stir in one of the above variations.

APPLE BLOSSOM
ICE CREAM SODA

2 cups apple juice
1 pint peach or vanilla ice cream

Pour one-half cup cold apple juice into each of four 10-ounce glasses. Divide ice cream equally among glasses; fill with chilled ginger ale and stir gently. Makes 4 servings.

CHOCOLATE
ICE CREAM SODA

¼ cup chocolate syrup
1 small scoop vanilla (or chocolate) ice cream
½ cup sparkling water, chilled
1 large scoop vanilla (or chocolate) ice cream
Sparkling water

In a 12-ounce glass blend together syrup and small scoop ice cream. Add sparkling water; stir slightly. Top with large scoop of ice cream and add additional sparkling water to fill glass.

PINEAPPLE JUBILEE
BANANA SUNDAE

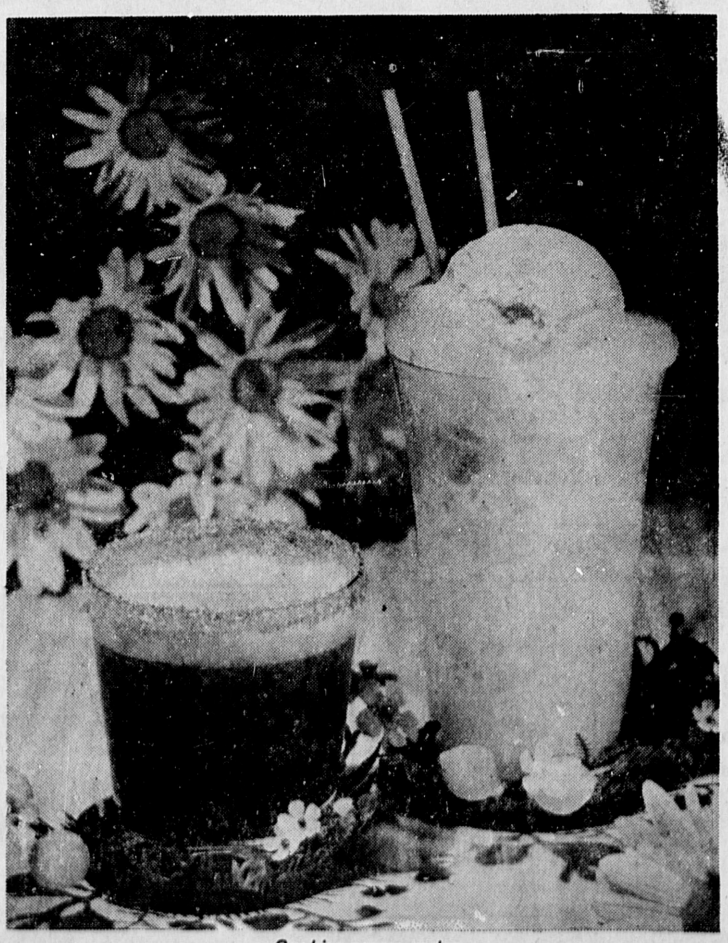

1 can (1 lb. 4 oz.) pineapple tidbits
½ cup sugar
1½ tablespoons cornstarch
⅛ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon powdered ginger
¼ teaspoon almond extract
6 small bananas
1½ pints vanilla ice cream
½ cup sliced strawberries

Put canned pineapple with liquid into a sauce pan. Bring to boil. Blend sugar, cornstarch, salt and ginger; stir into pineapple. Reduce heat and cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and is clear. Remove from heat. Add almond extract to thickened mixture. Cool. Peel bananas. Cut into halves lengthwise, then cut each half again crosswise. Arrange a banana into each of 4 serving dishes; top with ice cream and about ¼ cup of cooked pineapple sauce. Garnish with cherries or whole strawberries. Serves 6

BUTTER CRUNCH
ICE CREAM TOPPING

½ cup butter
¾ cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 tablespoons light brown sugar
½ cup chopped nuts
Ice cream
Whipped cream, optional

Melt butter over low heat. Blend in bread crums, sugar and nuts. Cook, stirring occasionally, until deep golden brown. Remove from heat and spread on baking sheet to cool. Break into crumbs. Layer into parfait glasses with ice cream. Top with whipped cream and more Butter Crunch, if desired. Serve immediately or store in freezer, covered until ready to use. Makes 2 cups.

New England Horizons

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — A computer that reads, and talks, once the figment of writers of science fiction, is now a reality.

Engineers at Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) have developed a computer which can pronounce any word in the English language, or any string of words.

Under the guidance of Associate Profm Jonathan Allen, the MIT engineers have programmed the computer so that it can pronounce any English word correctly, even if it has never encountered it before.

The computer, much in the manner of humans, figures out the word by applying literally thousands of learned rules of pronunciation. And the voice which comes out of the loudspeaker atop the computer is completely nonhuman in origin, constructed by a model of the human vocal tract programmed into the computer.

It is a far cry from the backtalking, troublesome "Hal" of the movie "Space Odyssey: 2001," but scientists have a history of eventually catching up with the imaginations of science fiction writers.

The MIT talking computer speaks in flat, featureless tones, but the engineers are working on this aspect and are teaching it how to pause and inflect at the proper place in a sentence, and even to change the pronunciation of words according to how they are used in a sentence.

Allen said the reading machine project involved two primary problems —building a machine to scan and recognize printed matter and to transform it into computer language, and building a computer to transform the scanned text into understandable speech.

Both were solved by drawing on earlier efforts in MIT's Research Laboratory of Electrics (RLE). This text-to-speech project began as part of an overall effort at RLE to build a machine to read to the blind, but one practical near-future application might be, Allen said, using a phone —in a library, for example —to dial up the computer and having the desired information automatically read to the caller.

Allen said he and his colleagues avoided force-feeding the computer so that it would memorize all the words in the English language.

"We could have attempted to feed all the words in the English language into the computer's memory, and instructed the computer to match each word in a text with a pronunciation," he said. But, he added, "this would have been unwise because the number of English words is enormous — several-hundred thousand —and because new words are constantly being invented.

"It is much better to proceed from a basic understanding of the general linguistic rules of pronunciation," he said. "The basic properties of English would be applicable for a much longer period than mere word lists."

Allen said a much simpler method was to use "morphs," which make up all words. He said there are only about 11,000 morphs. The computer, he said, can understand aot 10 times that number of words by using morphs.

To that Allen and his colleagues added some 400 letter-to-sound rules and came up with a computer which would pronounce individual syllables strung together. And by drawing on rules of linguistics developed by many researchers, the engineers taught the computer how to combine the syllables into correctly pronounced words.

SEARSPORT, Maine (UPI) — Cherry cokes, strawberry sodas and chocolate malteds began fading from the American scene a few years back when drug stores began moving out their fountains and stocking garden supplies and sports clothesm

But in this Maine coastal town, a person with a hunger for nostalgia and a hot fudge sundae can find both.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Schofield opened "The Ice Cream Parlor" on Main Street a year ago and the summer tourists and lthe year-rounders in Searsport are delighted.

A visit to the small shop is like stepping 20 years into the past. A person gets served from an ancient, marble-top fountain that was salbaged from a nearby drug store. Lined up behind the fountain are metal paper-cup holders, "Coke" glasses and large glass soda containers.

Completing the Victorian atmosphere are bent wood and wire chairs clustered around small antique tables. Children can purchase penny candy from an antique candy counter.

"We're very proud of our fountain," said Mrs. Schofield. "There's not that many around. Matter-of-fact, they are practically extinct."

The Schofields moved here several years ago from Rochester, N.Y., because "we wanted a change of pace and a way to get out of the rat race." They started out with an antique shop but are selling it to devote fulltime to the ice cream parlor.

"My husband had managed a large supermarket and the pressure was pretty great," said Mrs. Schofield. "We decided to make the break and haven't been sorry."

She and her husband found that by stocking sandwiches they could remain open yearround. "The tourist like it too," she said. "I suppose part of it is the nostalgia thing. They like the way it looks with the Victorian furniture and the tin walls."

As a special treat for visitors, the Schofields have installed an old roller-type music box that plays eight different tunes. "They're mostly Scottish and Irish tunes, but people seem to get a kick out of them."

The Schofields are sold on this historic sea port and probably hand out more free tourist information than the local gasoline station.

About The Ice Cream Poarlor: "We thought it would be a nice thing for the town. It is a little different —a special place to eatm"

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Charles Garcia is trying to get the Connecticut National Guard to give an even break to the kind of guys he grew up with in Harlem —blacks and Hispanics.

Garcia, a former Air Force captain, has been hired as the guard's Equal Employment Opportunity officer to ensure that minorities have a fair chance for advancement in the state's military.

Garcia said, however, he doesn't know just how far and fast his new bosses want him to push for equality.

"I am still feeling my way around and I really don't know to what extent they want me to do the job they hired me for," said Garcia, a typical native of Cuba with blond hair and blue eyes.

"Most of these military types are not really racist but just afraid of change," he said.

There is discrimination in the military, he saidn "but no more than in private business or the government."

Garcia has met with Connecticut National Guard Commander John F. Freund, a man Garcia says he respects. But so far, he said, his duties haven't been defined.

Earlier this year Freund announced that Connecticut Guardsmen would no longer carry weapons into civil disturbances until it is certain they have been fired upon.

"He doesn't seem to be afraid of change. He's got a lot of guts and that decision of no weapons during riots shows he's got guts," he said.

Garcia already has spotted a number of regulations he feels are biased, but he is waiting for a clarification of a rule he believes may bar him from taking action until a specific complaint has been filed.

One such regulation, he said, prevents female civilian employes of the Guard from rising above a certain salary unless they ljoin the Guard as members.

Garcia said he would also like to become involved in recruiting work, especially with minorities, since the elimination of the draft has caused a sag in Guard enrollment.

"The middle class guys who used to join the Guard to avoid doing full military service aren't signing up any more," he said.

Minorities traditionally have gone into the Army where the prospects of learning a skill have been powerful magnets, he said.

Stepped up recruitment drives also may bring the Guard's ethnic makeup in line with that of the rest of the state, he said.

Two years ago, he said, there were less than 60 blacks, Hispanics and women in the Connecticut National Guard. He said the number has increased to more than 400 but still doesnt reflect a cross-section of the state's population.

Garcia said his recruitment activities will be aided by a number of public help projects he has already discussed with members of the National Urban League.

This year, disadvantaged children on their way to summer camp may be given free medical checkups by Guardsmen while children in Bridgeport's Beardsley Terrace housing project may get a baseball field through the courtesy of the Guard.

"This is the post-Kent State era of the National Guard," said Garcia, referring to the killing of four students by Guardsmen during a 1970 riot at the Ohio school.

Garcia, who was born in Havana, Cuba, was raised in New York City. He is a graduate of Fordham University and joined the Air Force in 1963. He was supervisor of a training academy in the Panama Canal Zone for South American Air Force officers.

He, his wife and three children live in Bloomfield.

HOME REPAIRS

NEW YORK (UPI) — The remodeler's tools —wall paneling, ceiling systemsn new floor covering, siding —can work wonders, putting a fresh new face on an old house.

Butn warns Dr. David L. Watson, chief entomologist for Velsicol Chemical Corp., Chicago, home facelifting jobs, particularly in basements, can cover up a lot more than old boards and bricks, cracked plaster, unsightly pipes and electrical conduits, shabby paint. Remodeling can hide the evidence of the subterranean termite.

"You may not have thought of this," Watson said, 'but your nice, new dropped ceiling and beautiful wall paneling are going to hide many nooks and crannies from sight for good. And these are just the kinds of places where early signs of termite infestation occur."

Such signs, he said, include very tiny pellets, the excrement of termites, which digest the cellulose content of wood, paper, cardboard or cloth; thin mud tubes on basement walls or columns, the "tunnels" termites use to get from the floor up to wood ceiling joists, window sills and other wood parts of a house.

The presence of tiny wings anywhere is something else to look for, Watson advised. "When termites settle in some place, usually in late spring or early summer, they don't need their wings any more so they simply drop them and burrow in. After that, their presence is difficult to detect because they are silent, and they tunnel around totally concealed. They're careful not to disturb the surface appearance of the wood, or box, or book they're feeding on. A termite-eaten 4' x 4' beam might look structurally sound, yet you can poke your finger into it."

Inspection

Watson suggests careful termite inspection as a forerunner to any large remodeling job. A house must be gone over carefully from top to bottom, inside and out. Dark areas, such as crawl spaces, should be checked with the aid of a flashlight. Wood parts should be prodded with a sharp instrument. Look for the physical evidence of termites; the excrement, discarded wings, the mud tunnels.

Problem areas that call for extra careful inspection, and remedying, include wood siding that's in direct contact with the ground outside; leaky faucets, inside or out, which might provide necessary moisture for termites; firewood or lumber piled directly against the house.

If you have the slightest doubt, a professional inspection is in order and, Watson says, the cost is nominal.

To find a reliable firm, he advises looking for a local company with an established office location which you can inspect; one which advertises its services and its association with the National Pest Control Association and the state association. A check with the local Better Business Bureau and following up on references given by the firm will provide added insurance.

Beware Itinerants

Beware itinerant salesmen who appear uninvited, often in unmarked trucks, offer free, on the spot, termite inspection, subsequent "evidence" of severe infestation and dire warnings of what will happen if you don't have extensive treatment "right away." Wait until you can check further. The house won't fall down.

If termites are present, however, they must be eliminated. They can do thousands of dollars worth of damage to a home and its contents. Watson advises a professional job since it requires special skills, training and equipment and the handling of chemicals.

"What the pest control operator does," he explained, "is put a chemical barrier around the house which termites won't cross. Those insects outside, living in their subterranean nests, won't go through it to get to the house for wood. They have to move on or perish from lack of food.

Termite Prevention

"If there are termites in the house, they won't cross the barrier to get to the soil for moisture, which they need every 36 hours. They simply dry up and die."

In areas where termite infestation is moderate to heavy, particularly in parts of the country that are fairly warm the year around, Watson suggests termite protection as a preventive.

If you're building a home, he advises, preventive treatment is simple and inexpensive before the basement floor or slab is poured and should be a must.

In home improvement jobs that involve room additions with new foundations, Watson stresses, wood scraps must not be buried along the foundations during backfilling. "They're just an invitation to an enemy that attacks five times as many homes in the United States each year than fires, and does up to half a billion dollars worth of property damage."

Household Hints

If your hose has been in the sun all day, drain off the water in it before sprinkling your garden. Otherwise, you may scald both plants and roots.

Plants that do well in hanging baskets include fuchsia, ivy geranium, some species of peperomia, spider plantn asparagus fern and African violetsm

Set up a washup area near your gardening storage shed. It will help keep your tools and garden boots clean.

Shrubs act as windbreaks and provide homes and food for birds and animals.

Shredded paper, wood chips, straw, hay and rotted sawdusts make good mulches.

If your house is near a noisy road, plant shrubs and tall evergreens to screen out the sights and sounds of motor traffic.

Strongly perfumed flowers such as honeysuckle and phlox attract hummingbirds and honey birds.

Pots for container gardening should match the plants they'll hold: tallh thin pots for tall plants; shallow, wide ones for short ones.

The Vegetable Patch

From dawn until darkness, Americans are rallying around the vegetable patch these days.

They are doing it, most of them, to pare the food bill. Included are young families, college students, retirees, welfare recipients. Many of the latter garden in public plots.

Millionaires are in the great hoedown, too, for other reasons. Stewart Mott, one of these, gardens on a penthouse terrace in an apartment on New York's Park Avenue. The General Motors heir, political activist and patron of the arts started his high in the sky vegetable patch to have better food— crops not contaminated by pesticides. He also keeps chickens up there and tends fruit trees.

Another rooftop garden is in New York's Harlem—at Benjamin Franklin High School.

The affluent in the garden movement are into growing their own vegetables for much the same reason cited by Mott. Others garden for pleasure—to stretch their minds and let their spirits soar.

Even on Windowsills

Some gardeners do their digging with small tools aimed at the soil in tiny tubs and pots on office and apartment windowsills. An officemate has 25 tomatoes coming along on a plant in a nine inch plastic pot on her living room window sill.

Where space is a problem, some homeowners are putting tomato plants and others in any sunny spots available —even if they fall in the middle of a small prize lawn.

The many styles of American gardening came into focus in a United Press International check of large and small vegetable patches in dozens of towns.

The really most unusual place for a garden is Hart Island off Manhattan—a place where unicentified dead are put to rest, called "Potter's Field." The gardeners working on the 10-acre "farmlet" are from Phoenix House, a drug rehabilitation program. The recovering former addicts, who ferry back and forth, garden as therapy and also to help make Phoenix House support itself.

In Ghetto and College

Also in New York, Liz Christy, an architect, has founded The Green Gorillas. Youngsters who are Green Gorillas garden on empty lots in broken down parts of town, their neighborhoods. For Ms. Christy, it is a labor of love.

In St. Louis, students from St. Louis University help elderly and nearly indigent persons garden in their neighborhoods. There is a lot of this spirit— help the less fortunate—in the garden movement.

Vegetable gardens are thriving in the San Francisco Bay Area, but few admit the high price of food has anything to dt with the rush to gardening. Most say they want to be outdoors or they like to see things grow.

The city of San Francisco offers 25 sites of unused city land for use by citizens as gardens. They range from minisize to half an acre. The city provides insurance and composted soil. The rest is up to the gardeners.

Vegetable Bonanza

For the fifth year the University of California at Berkeley has offered students plots. The six-acre garden is near a married students' housing project. The six acres provide 486 plots about 20 feet by 25 feet. Ellen McKeon, mother of one and married to a UC graduate student, has had a plot for the past three years. Her crops include peas, chard, carrots, lettuce, beets, broccoli, tomatoes, cucumbers, green beans, onions, corn and pumpkins.

She estimates the family saves $5 to $6 a week in the summer months from the crop. She started the garden "just out of the joy of it."

The fever pitch of the gardening movement is felt especially at the hundreds of County Agricultural Extension Agent offices.

The agent in Bernalillo County, Albuquerque, N.M., is James Sais. "My calls from people asking about gardening have increased 75 per cent," he said. "That's the trend in New Mexico and across the nation."

Enough Seeds for Most

Nurseryman Randall Haroldson agrees with Sais. Seed sales in the spring increased 600 per cent from previous years, Haroldson says. Many brokerage seed companies in the midwest worked 24 hours a day to fill seed orders.

In Wethersfield, Conn., a seed distributor, the Hart Seed Co., reports $ shortage of carrot seeds. This was due to a poor crop. The nation's biggest seed supplier, Burpee's in Philadelphia, says however that the general seed shortage some had forecast did not materialize— mainly because the upped demand had been anticipated.

In Boston, there are some 350 community garden sites. Each is 10 by 15 feet. The Park Department provides loam and water. Across the river in Cambridge a similar program at Fresh Pond has so many takers that the garden sites were assigned by drawing.

The First National Bank in Council Bluffs, Iowa, is into renting garden plots. President Hal Booth says the garden is a nonprofit venture and the first year, 1973, the bank lost money on it.

$15 A Plot s

"But it brought a lot of people together," Booth said, "and more than 2,000 of them had nice, fresh vegetables from their own gardens."

To rent a plot costs $15. The bank provides seeds and does all the planting and early cultivating. Later, the patron must tend the garden himself when plants are too large to be cultivated by tractor.

Each plot is 1,000 square feet, providing thirty rows of vegetables. One woman got 270 quarts of canned vegetables out of her plot last year.

She is the wife of an employe of another bank. The bank in the gardening movement doesn't restrict plot rentals to its customers.

And so the gardens grow around the nation. Got yours started yet?

COOKING

NEW YORK (UPI) — Weight-conscious people are irrational. They'll skip cream in their coffee but eat a whole pound of steak at one meal.

That's a bad trade-off, says Dr. Sami AM Hashim, head of nutrition and metabolic research at St. Luke's Hospital here. l

"I'd rather see a man eat only half a pound of steak and have all the cream he wants in his coffee. Two tablespoons of light cream contain only 54 calories, but a pound of steak has about 1,000," Dr. Has im said in an interview.

His work focuses on atherosclerosis and obesity. He said he's not looking specifically for links between the two.

Turn Off Appetites

He is a strong believer in behavior modification that changes obese patients' eating patterns.

For starters, each fatty is asked to answer about 600 questions. He's asked not just what he ate and when, but what else was on the table.

The idea is to turn off appetites by keeping extra food out of sight.

The doctor said tests show an overweight person generally will not push to get food when he is deprived of it by an understocked refrigerator or pantry.

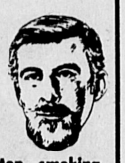

"To stop overeating and to exercise in our society is a hell of a problem," Dr. Hashim said.

Tips for Homemakers

"There's hardly a magazine, a (television) commercial, or supermarket with 50,000 different varieties of food, that doesn't pressure us to eatm

"The overweight individual is influenced by these external pressures. The non-obese responds more to internal cues, to hunger."

Mrs. Slater named chairman for Hadassah annual buncheon

The Boston Chapter of Hadassah has named Mrs. Paul D. Slater, Chestnut Hill, its 1974 Donor Buncheon Chairman.

The 48th annual two-day fundraising event, which is expected to attract over 2000 members and friends, will be held in November.

A graduate of the Tufts University School of Occupational Therapy with a bachelor of science degree, Mrs. Slater is a life member of Hadassah and currently serves as vice president of the Chestnut Hill group.

Among other positions of leadership she holds in philanthropic organizations are the vice presidency, Women's Division, Combined Jewish Philanthropies, in which she has actively participated for many years and more recently as their growth gifts chairman and special gifts chairman. She has also been a frequent visitor to Israel on CJP missions. She was the founder and first president of the Women's Division, Greater Boston Heart Association and currently serves as a member of their board of directors.

Mrs. Slater's other civic and community interests in organizations with which she is affiliated include membership in Newton's Temple Reyim and Park School PTA, Hebrew Rehabilitation Center, Jewish Family and Children's Service, New Engand Home for Little Wanderers, ORT, Beth Israel Hospita, Women's Auxiliary.

Mrs. Paul Slater

Judy is the mother of four young children and is the wife of Paul D. Slater, president of Albert M. Slater & Son, Boston.

As this year's donor chairman for the Boston Chapter, Mrs. Slater will spearhead efforts for a kick-off garden party and luncheon for special givers to the Hadassah Medical Organization, to be launched next Monday, July 15 at the summer estate of Mrs. Harry N. Gorin, Marblehead. Over 100 invitations have been mailed to special donors, where Mrs. Charlotte Jacobson, a former National Hadassah president and currently national buildings development chairman, will be the featured speaker.

Through this outdoor gala and other special events to be held throughout the summer and fall, the Boston Chapter will endeavor to raise funds to meet National Hadassah's multi-million dollar building projects and programs in Israel, where it fully supports and maintans the largest medical complex in the Middle East and the sixth largest in the world.

DAR women attend Quincy flag ceremony

Members of Lydia Partridge Whiting Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, attended the flag-placing ceremony at the tomb of John Adams, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, in Quincy July 4.

Mrs. William A. Hurley, Newton Highlands, a past chapter regent, and present state historian, Massachusetts DAR, was in charge of arrangements, and was accompanied by Mrs. Ross E. Langill, Newton Highlands, present chapter regent, and Mrs. David Hamblen, III, Newton, past Massachusetts DAR state historian, who gave the tribute to Adams.

Also present were Massachusetts State Regent Mrs. Raymond F. Fleck, Norwood; Massachusetts DAR State Corresponding Secretary Mrs. Raymond L. Bisplinghoff, Wellesley Hills; Assistant State Treasurer Massachusetts DAR Dorothy Willard, Needham, who gave the invocation and benediction.

In addition, those attending were Mrs. George Bonsall, Mrs. Frederick W. Adams, and Marion G. Rogers, all of Quincy; Mrs. Harry E. Brown, Brookline and Dr. David Hamblen, III, Newton.

John Adams is buried with his wife, Abigail, his son, John Quincy Adams, and his daughter-in-law, Louisa Catherine, in the crypt of the First Parish Church, Quincy, the "Church of the Presidents." Preceding the ceremony, William Flavin, historian of the church, gave a short account of the organizing and building of the historic church.

Julia Shulkin honored at 80th birthday party

Mrs. Irving Shulkin, the former Julia Shufro, was honored on her 80th birthday recently at the Chestnut Hill Country Club.

Committee discusses lawsuit

Members of the aldermanic Land Use Committee Monday night met briefly in executive session to reportedly discuss a lawsuit that has been pending for almost a year.

The suit, challenging the Board of Aldermen's policy of having apartment developers agree to give 10 per cent of their units to the Newton Housing Authority for subsidized housing, was instituted by developer Michael Iodice.

Iodice owns an apartment development that is now nearing completion in Auburndale. When granted permissive use to build last year by the Board, he agreed to donate units for elderly housing but not larger apartments for family housing.

The Land Use Committee also held two brief public hearings and postponed the third hearing that was on its agenda because of questions over proper notification of abutters.

Few residents were present in the stifling aldermanic chamber for the hearings.

Newton at 128 Industrial Park developers Edwin M. Howard and Isadore Wasserman have asked for permission to build a warehouse and office facility and locate some parking within the Charles River floodplain.

Ald. Alan Barkin pointed out the developers' plans call for a supporting pier for the building to be in the floodplain too and suggested that if the pier is part of the structure, it could not be built in the floodplain.

Gene Brown Volvo Village, located on Beacon Street in Newton Centre returned seeking permission to park on adjoining land.

The dealer has been turned down several times on requests similar to this one. This time, he has modified his proposal and is asking for less space for parking.

A hearing on Boston College's request to conduct a day care facility at 258 Hammond St., was not heard because of complaints from two abutters that they did not receive the required legal notice of the hearing.

It was rescheduled for Aug. 19, the next meeting of the Land Use Committee.

TV PROFILE

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Singer-comedienne Kaye Stevens is the newest member of the cast of television's No. 1 soap opera, "Days of Our Lives," but her life style surpasses anything the script writers can dream up. 1

Red-haired Kaye leads the existence of the very, very rich.

Her home in Margate, Fla., 28 miles from Miami, is a showcase situated on a lake, surrounded by lawns, exotic trees and a pond that houses her pet six foot long alligator, Rufus.

Kaye's mother lives on the same property in a separate house. Both abodes are in a bird sanctuary.

Kaye moved to her hideaway 15 years ago when she was first married. She has been divorced 10 years and has no immediate intentions of remarrying.

Steady Boyfriend

Her steady boyfriend is Sam Warner Hiatt, an enormously wealthy man of 26, many years younger than Kaye. He lives in Aspen, Colo., but is content to follow Kaye around on her nightclub circuit, temporarily suspended while she stars in the NBC daily series.

Kaye's Florida home has three bedrooms. Her own is immense to compensate for the tiny chambers she occupies in hotels on the road.

All the furniture in the house was custom made. Her boudoir is a study in sunshine. The carpet is bright yellow shag, six inches deep. The draperies are yellow and white velvet. The bed rests on a dais. And her bathroom includes an 8-foot-square sunken tub.

There is a terrace off the bedroom that overlooks her pool.

Her living room is done in yellows and white with deep blue velvet divans. All the windows have shutters and the walls are decorated with paintings collected from all over the world. All the tables are glass topped.

Dining Room

Her dining room is spacious and much used. She frequently entertains 16 at sit-down dinners prepared by herself w i t h help from her housekeeper.

Kaye rents an apartment in Beverly Hills. It is a two bedroom penthouse done in browns, dark blues, beige and lots of satin and silk. She's had the apartment for seven years.

She is poised to build a mountain-top chalet at Lake Tahoe where she owns property. She is anxious to get started because her steady fella likes to ski in that area, as does Kaye.

NBC will write Kaye in and out of "Days of Our Lives" to accommodate her three-month circuit of nightclubs on the road.

She travels with a conductor, drummer and guitar accompanist, hiring local musicians at each of her stops.

Royal Wardrobe

Kaye probably has more clthes than Jackie Kennedy Onassis and Princess Grace combined. She has individual wardrobes in Florida, Beverly Hills and Lake Tahoe where she now has a condominium.

Additionally, Kaye employs a full-time secretary who accompanies her on the road, takes care of her correspondence and does the packing.

Several years ago Kaye bought a German shepherd from the pound for $3.75 and then shelled out $3,000 to have a fence built around her Margate home to keep "Trouper" from chasing the local fauna.

Over 1,000 fake licenses sold since 1971

BOSTON (UPI) — An aide to a high state official is the "brains" behind a statewide racket involving the sale of driver's licenses to unqualified drivers, the Boston Herald American said today in a copyright story.

The newspaper said Motor Vehicles Registrar David Lucey and District Attorney Garrett Byrne are investigating the racket in which licenses are sold for as much as $500 to Portuguese, Spanish-speaking and other minorities who are unable to get licenses through normal procedures.

"This case has developed way beyond expectations and it's now snowballing," the Herald American quoted an official close to the investigation. The official said numerous persons have been questioned and in some cases given lie detector tests since the discovery four months ago of an illegally issued license.

Although similar to a phony license racket uncovered by Dedham police in Needham more than a year ago, Officer Bo Scheffler said the two are unrelated.

Scheffler said the ring, which operated out of Needham and West Roxbury, used a legitimate press in Needham to make the licenses. The officer said to his knowledge the racket stopped completely.

The newspaper said it was reported that investigators have learned of sales of licenses to other drivers not of minority groups "as well as 'fixes' in cases where licenses have been suspended after motor vehicle violations."

Finelli directs credit union

Robert N. Finelli of 39 Melbourne Ave., Newtonville, was elected to serve a two-year term as a director of the Credit Union League of Massachusetts, Inc., at the organization's annual convention in New Hampshire last week.

In joining the board of directors, Finelli will be responsible for assisting in the governing of rules and regulations of the Credit Union League, which is composed of approximately 400 credit unions across the state.

Robert Finelli

Finelli is treasurer-manager of the Boston Gas Company Employees Credit Union, a position he has held since 1972. He joined Boston Gas in 1949, and was the assistant treasurer of the Employees Credit Union for 11 years and a member of its board of directors for 13 years.

He is past treasurer and president of the Boston Gas Employees Association, and past steward and financial secretary-treasurer of the Boston Gas Workers Union for 15 years.

A lifelong resident of Newton, Finelli is a 1949 graduate of Our Lady's High School (now Newton Catholic), a treasurer of Newton North Little League, and a member of American Legion Post 440 of Newton.

He and his wife, Rosemarie, have four children.

Alternative education focuses attention on 'antiachievers'

Perhaps the only private school in the country that will not accept a top-notch student is the Center for Alternative Education in Boston.

The Center was created six years ago by two counseling psychologists from the research division of University Center who were overwhelmed in their private practice with adolescents unable to cope with academic demands and, as a result, becoming socially maladjusted. As their self-esteem suffered, these youngsters found themselves unable to satisfy their parents, their teachers, or even themselves.

The Center for Alternative Education was founded with the avowed purpose of getting answers to that question. The staff was required to explore and evaluate every approach, technique, and skill they could call upon. Several years of testing out various models proved to all the professional staff that it was possible to turn a failure into a success-oriented person, but traditional approaches were as doomed as the supplying of alcohol to alcoholics.

Youngsters in academic trouble are prone to all sorts of symptoms which, if not treated, often become the disease known as "antiachievement."

Antiachievers have clearly defined behavior patterns - the most destructive being irresponsibility. So long as a child is unable to be responsible commensurate with his age and unique personality characteristics, that is how long he is assured of being basically unhappy, unfulfilled, and frustrated. Therefore, the Center for Alternative Education has one overriding goal: teaching for responsibility. Once that goal is accepted by all staff members, it is not necessary to waste time philosophically discussing permissiveness, love, discipline, punishment, grades, or even homework.

Every course at CAE relates to the teaching of responsible behavior and as soon as a student accepts responsible behavior as his goal, there is no possible way to stop him from learning. At that point, academics become a source of pleasure, parent-child relationships improve, and students begin to grow emotionally and cognitively without constantly fearing failure.

Charles Roselli

Charles Roselli named to receive N.E. faculty award

Former Newton resident Charles Rosselli, 29, has been named the recipient of the 1974 outstanding faculty award of the New England Section of the American Society for Engineering Education.

Rosselli is a senior instructor of civil and highway engineering technology at the Wentworth Institute. He has initiated and developed 16 new courses in the area of civil and environmental engineering technology.

He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Society of American Military Engineers, the Boston Society of Civil Engineers, the American Association of Bioengineers, the American Society for Engineering Education and Boston Post, Society of American Military Engineers.

Rosselli has an associate degree in civil and highway engineering from Wentworth, a bachelor of science degree in civil engineering from Northeastern University and will receive his master's degree in environmental engineering from Northeastern in the fall.

Dr. Stuart Rosenthal, 457 Centre st., Newton has been elected president of the Greater Boston Chiropractic Society for 1974-5.

Susan Werbe named director of school

The Newton Community Service Centers, Inc. has announced the appointment of Mrs. Susan E. Werbe as teacher-director of the new pre-school Child Center in West Newton.

Mrs. Werbe has a master's degree in early childhood education from the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, School of Education. For the past two years, she has been director of a Head Start program in Hampshire County. Her experiences includes participation in a variety of pre-school programs, one which used behavior management as an approach to help children with documented special needs.

In addition, she designed and taught an introductory university level course in women's studies and directed an individual study in early childhood education as part of the University Without Walls Program.

The Child Center, which will function under an advisory committee to include members of the board of directors of NCSC, Inc., and representatives of the host agency, The First Unitarian Society in West Newton, is in the process of accepting student applications.

Th school, held in the facilities of the First Unitarian Society, 1326 Washington St., West Newton, includes two classrooms and an outdoor play area. It will operate five days a week, 7:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., beginning in early September, for children three to five years of age. Hours are made flexible to accommodate people with different needs.

This program will offer stories and games for imaginative growth. Students will also engage in art projects.

A morning snack will be provided. Those staying for lunch will bring a box lunch and a beverage will be provided. Transportation will be available on a limited basis.

Further information is available by phoning 969-5906 or visiting the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc., 429 Cherry Street, West Newton.

Stanley Elkerton gives talk on wastewater treatment

Stanley D. Elkerton, of 238 Winchester St., Newton Highlands, spoke at the recent spring meeting of the New England Water Pollution Control Association in Kennebunkport, Me.

Elkerton, a systems engineer for Metcalf & Eddy, received a B.S. in civil engineering from Clarkson College of Technology. He is a member of the Boston Society of Civil Engineers, New England Water Pollution Control Association, and Water Pollution Control Federation.

His talk discussed considerations and techniques involved in upgrading existing wastewater facilities to provide nutrification.

Four Newton residents were elected officers of the Boston University School of Medicine Alumni Association at its recent annual meeting.

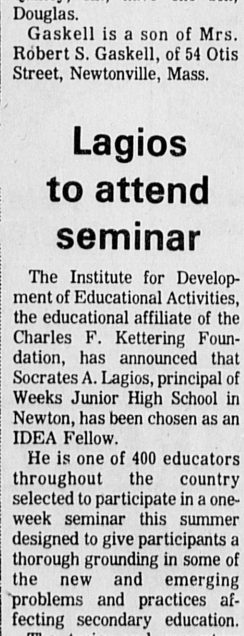

Dr. Martin B. Levene was elected president; Dr. Herbert Mescon was named first vice president; Dr. Murray M. Freed was chosen second vice president; and Dr. Job E. Fuchs was reelected as secretary.

Leven, Class of 1950, is a radiotherapist at Beth Israel Hospital in Boston and an associate professor of radiation medicine at Harvard Medical School. He was the first vice president of the association last year.

Mescon, Class of 1942, is professor of dermatology and chairman of the department at Boston University School of Medicine.

Also instructing at BUSM, Freed, Class of 1952, is a professor and chairman of the Department of Rehabilitation.

Fuchs, Class of 1944, is an assistant clinical professor of medicine, also at BUSM.

Robert S. Gaskell

Gaskell named central division sales manager

Robert S. Gaskell has been named central division sales manager by Scripto, Inc., an Atlanta-based multi-national manufacturer of writing instruments and lighters.

Gaskell joined Scripto in 1954 as a junior salesman. He served 18 years as a salesman and district sales manager.

He attended Colgate University and served with the Army Air Corps during World War II and subsequently with the U.S. Air Force.

He and Mrs. Gaskell, the former Beatrice Altmix, of Quincy, Ill., have one son, Douglas.

Gaskell is a son of Mrs. Robert S. Gaskell, of 54 Otis Street, Newtonville, Mass.

Lagios to attend seminar

The Institute for Development of Educational Activities, the educational affiliate of the Charles F. Kettering Foundation, has announced that Socrates A. Lagios, principal of Weeks Junior High School in Newton, has been chosen as an IDEA Fellow.

He is one of 400 educators throughout the country selected to participate in a one-week seminar this summer designed to give participants a thorough grounding in some of the new and emerging problems and practices affecting secondary education.

The topics and presenters will range from "The World Crisis in Education" by Ian Lister of England's York University to "Teacher Unions May Soon Control Public Education" by David Seeley, director of the Public Education Association of New York City.

Ms. Farrar to attend business program

Constance M. Farrar, C.L.U., director of brokerage services, Downing & Desautels, New England Life, will attend a one-week program of advanced study in business and family financial planning at the 93rd C.L.U. Institute at the University of Connecticut in Storrs, Connecticut.

Ms. Farrar is one of 300 C.L.U.s who are registered to attend three Institutes to be conducted this summer on university campuses for members of the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters.

At these graduate-level seminars, C.L.U.s study such subject areas as estate planning, economics, life underwriting in the '70s, pension reform legislation, disability planning, the corporation and its employee-shareholders, mutual funds and variable annuities, financial statements.

Ms. Farrar received her C.L.U. designation in 1961 and is currently enrolled as a degree candidate at Metropolitan College, Boston University. She is past president and member of the zonta Club of Newton; past president and member of the Needham Toastmistress Club, a member of NAACP, and Lay Reader at the Church of the Messiah in Auburndale. GUIDELINES ON ALCOHOL PROBLEMS
WHEN TO CONTROL YOUR DRINKING
Do it before it becomes a "big topic of interest" to you or anyone else. "Later" could be too late. Alcohol is addictive so your habit is apt to progress. It is also a mind-altering drug, so your ability to think clearly (about alcohol or anything else(could get progressively worse. That is alcohol's insidious "vicious circle" . . . the more you drink; the worse you think. Occasional periods "on the wagon" prove little . . . but they often fool the problem drinker. Daily Drinkers should be extra-careful to keep the bottle in its place least they end up inside the bottle

Sanity, insanity— baseball cards!

By TOM GRAVES
Sports Editor

I spent $36 a couple of days aog for baseball cards. At a drug store, that used too mean 3,600 cards and 720 pieces of bubble gum.

All I received was about 140 cards, and a few moments of doubt about the sanity of my purchase.

Baseball card collecting has become a serious hobby. Single cards from the late 1950's can now sell for over $1 apiece. Cards from the 1930's sell for $10 and $20 apiece. The guy I bartered with last week told me that he had about 30 responses to his ad for selling cards.

Until a few days ago, it had been seven or eight years since I last collected baseball cards. Sometime in 1967, my happiness became less dependant on the dail feats of professional athletes. It became no longer important for me to have a card of Carl Yastrzemski in my pocket when I went to school in the morning. Of course, this liberation was a little late, since I was already 16 years old, but my social growth has always been a little retarded.

Back in those innocent days of flipping and playing colors, I had thousands and thousands of cards. One summer in California, to the dismay of my father, my brother and I spent day after day playing games with baseball cards rather than enjoying the beach my father was trying too treat us to.

Over the years, the balance of power in card collecting switched over to my younger brother. For unremembered reasons, he always had more money than me, and I gradually sold off much of my collection.

To this day, however, if anyone is interested, I still have six 1961 cards of Chuck Essegian. According to the back of the card, one of Chuck's claims to fame was that he led the Northwest League in 1956 with a .366 batting average.

Sometimes I resent the fact that my mind is cluttered with names like Jake Woods, Rip Repulski (he had the same birthday as me), and Harry Chiti (watch your pronunciation). I even have brain cells remembering that George Scott played high school ball in Greenville, Miss.

The highlights of my collection are some ancient cards I bought from a New York company when I was a kid. Included in these are four cards from 1910 with cagarette ads rather than statistics on their backs.

The cards from the 1930's seem more given to prose than statistical information. One card tells me that "nimble footwork and ability to make one hand stops ranks Sam Leslie the Brooklyn first baseman as one of the most useful players in the game at his corner of the infield." Even without using commas, it seems like the author wasted a lot of space. Nowhere on the card am I told how many triples Leslie hit in 1934.

Although no other kind of card seems to have ever caught on as much as baseball cards, numerous attempts have been made to attract the bubble gum chewing public. Wrapped in rubber bands, I have cards picturing the Beatles, Fabian, The Three Stooges, racing cars, basketball players, and the stars of television's Gilligan's Island.

My interest in baseball cards was renewed recently when a guy came into the office and mentioned that he collects cards from the late 1940's. We talked about old players for awhile, and he asked if he could trade for my 1948 Stan Musial.

During the last few days, I have been sorting cards the way I did when I was 12 years old. There have been piles of cards on my living room floor as I have tried to place Turk Lown with his 1957 Chicago Cubs teammates.

Hopefully, this madness will end soon. The old cards which must have cost a penny apiece originally were available for a nickle each 10 years ago. Now they cost 20 or 30 cents each.

I am not worried about being too old to collect baseball cards. I am afraid that I cannot afford them.

Newton residents guest partners in golf tourney

Several Newton residents were to be guest partner in the Pro-Am to kick-off the annual sectional championship of the New ngland Professiohal Golfer's Assn. at the par 72 Ferncroft Country Club course in Ferncroft Village, Danvers, July 8-10.

On the initial day, 100 gust amateurs were to play with the 100 professional golfers entered in the $10,000 tournament which is co-sponored by Commonwealth Bank & Trust Co., a subsidiary of Commonwealth National Corp. The bank also sponsors the Tournament of Women Golf Champions.

Players were to have included Bernard Baldwin, Sidney Covich, Seymour Kapsten, Paul Kussell, Shepard Kussell, Sumner Rosnberg, and Herbert Sherman, all of Newton; and George Baldwin of West Newton.

Good sports competition

The Newton Jaycees have joined with WBZ radio and television in the sponsorship of the "Good Sports Competition" a statewide athletic competition designed to find the "best" male and female amateur athlete in Massachusetts.

The Newton competition will be held Saturday (July 13) at Newton Norh High School. Its purpose is to find the top-nonprofessional male and female athlete in the city. The top three men and women will be entered in the Massachusetts Jaycees district runoffs, to be held on July 27.

Finalists in the district runoffs will meet on Aug. 3 in Boston College stadium.

Newton registrations will be takn until Saturday. The limit is 150 applicants. Competition is open to people ages 18 or over. The athlete cannot be a high school graduate on athletic scholarship to college, on a varsity team in college or a professional athlete.

More than 125 Jaycee chapters and 4,000 Jaycees in Massachusetts are participating in the event.

Events Saturday include: basketball foul shooting, 880-yard run, street hockey goal shooting, obstacle course, shot put, 100-yard dash, football punt for distance, women's soccer kick, long jump, baseball throw for accuracy.

People interested in entering can calll Bob Alkon(969-6032) or Jim Bishop)237-1783) for applications.

A $3 entry fee benefits Jayce projects.

Competes in tournament

Betsy Richmond of Newton Centre, recently placed second in the singles competition of the Dean Junior College Junior Championship Tennis Tournament.

Over 200 young tennis players competed in the event which was sanctionned by the U.S.L.T.A. and the N.E.L.T.A.

Playing int the 14-and-under dividion, Miss Richmond was defeated in the singles competition 6-3, 6-3 by Merrilee Keller of Weston, Mass.

With Lobsters

Ellenann Walsh of Chestnut Hill, is one of thirteen local youth participating as a ballgirl at the Boston Lobsters' tennis matches. The youth were selected through recommendations on a regional basis.

The position requires quickness, responsibility and a knowledge of tennnis. As well as ont on the court responsibilities, rotating duties include work in the press box, locker room or on the team bench.

Ellenann is the daughter of Annellen and James Walsh and attends Mount Alvernia High School. She will continue to work at the Lobsters' matches until the season ends in late August.

Champion archer

Bob Burtman of Newton Centre was a member of Northfield Mount Hermon chool's championship boys' archery team this spring.

The boys' team won the Class B National Interscholastic Archery Championship, compiling 2,463 points.

Golf finalist

Steve Condon of Newton, New England CYO golf champion, and Steve O'Kan of Waltham, finalist in last year's Greatre Boston CYO championship tourney, are among the standouts in the field for the 35th annual CYO open tournament, which will be played at Ponkapoag Golf Course, Canton, July 22-26.

Condon has been Riversside Golf Club champion three times.

O'Kane, a member of the Tufts University team, plays regularly at Weston.

Other top Senior Divsion entries received to date are: Paul Feeney, Melrose, winner of the MGA Junior- Junior title and a Mt. Hood course regular; and Charlie Lowder, Jr., No. 1 player on the Bentley College team.

Association formed for tennis improvements

A n association is being organised to improve the public tennis facilities in Newton. The interests of the group includ rules for play, maintenance of facilities, and the number ond types of courts.

During the nect few weeks there will be people at tennis courts collecting signatures from people who would be interested in joining and supporting the organization.

Entertainment World

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Courage is a girl named Jill Kinmont, the Olympic skier who became a paraplegic after a skiing accident and whose life story is being filmed in "The Other Side of the Mountain."

Operating an electrically controlled wheelchair, Jill maneuvered a ramp (especially built for her) at the Hawthorne School in Beverly Hills and came to a stop in her office. She has been a teacher in remedial reading at the grammar school for seven years.

"I'm what they call a partial quadraplegic," Jill said cheerfully enough. "But I get around beautifully."

Jill Kinmont smiles a great deal. At 37 her face is youthfully beautiful, displaying no inkling of the physical pain and psychological torture she has suffered in the 19 years since she broke her neck on the slopes in Alta, Utah.

With the help of braces Jill feeds herself with her left hand and writes with her right.

"This movie has had an emotional impact on me," she said. "It's strange to see someone else playing your own life. But I thought it would be more traumatic for me than it has been.

"I was on the set the day they did the accident up in Mammoth (Calif.). It was so incredibly done —in three or four separate stages —that it seemed unrelated to me.

"The way it was filmed isn't the way it really happened. It was all over in a matter of a split second, compared with the two days it took to film it with stunt girls and stunt men.

"For me the emotional impact was being up in the mountains and the snow. I had a tremendous urge to ski."

For a moment Jill's eyes held a faraway gleam. There is an esthetic quality to skiing, she said, that surpasses sport. At age 18, when the accident took place, skiing was practically Jill's whole life.

Jill, too, had to accustom herself to seeing actress Marilyn Hassett playing Jill Kinmont. It wasn't an easy adjustment.

"It wasn't so bad when she was skiing," Jill said. "But it was strange seeing her in the wheelchair with her hair fixed like mine and wearing the same kind of clothes. It was eerie —like seeing myself.

"In scenes where she is working with children —as I do here —I was really pulling for Marilyn. The director pulled a lot of emotion out of her."

Jill and Marilyn have not become fast friends —purposely. Marilyn doesn't want to copy or imitate Jill. To avoid it, she relies on information given her by Jill's brother, Jerry, to give accuracy to her portrayal.

"I love it here at the school," Jill said. "There isn't time to look back or to indulge in regrets.

"Not being able to use my hands and fingers bothers me most of all. But the first thing that flashed into my mind when I realized my condition was to deal with the situation —not remorse."

Jill Kinmont flashed her everready grin and the wheelchair was forgotten.

Long mufflers and wool knit gloves are accessory news for fall.

MISS AGNELLI ELECTED

PORTO SANTO STEFANO, Italy (UPI) — Susanna Agnelli, sister of Gianni Agnelli, president of the Fiat auto works, has been elected mayor of this town on the scenic Argentario Promontory, favored as a vacation site by European royalty.

A local resident, she ran on a platform of defending the landscape, and promised to issue only a small number of building licenses.

In defense of expansion in professional sports

sports spice

Commentary by Bruce Cornblatt

I am here today to defend expansion in sports. I realize that this stand is about as popular as a matzah ball in Charles Colson's soup, but it is something about which I feel very strongly.

Nothing annoys me more than those with-it sports fans who let you know how knowledgeable they are by dropping the key phrase "expansion is diluting the product." These phrase droppers are an insufferable lot. I first ran into them in my college days. My major was sociology and the key to a good grade in any sociology course was looking worried and remarking that college needs "more relevance". Mention relevance and you had it made. So it is with sports discussions and "diluting the product".

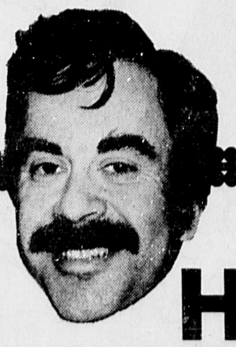

Firstly, let us stipulate that certain expansion moves are indeed ridiculous. Letting the ABA and the WHA expand is like advising the old woman who lived in the shoe to increase her family. Adding teams indiscriminately and without careful study and research will lead to a cheapened product and a distinct lessening of the sports quality. Anything done to an extreme leads to disaster. However, this should not lead to a blanket dismissal of expansion.

Let us look at the watering down of talent argument. Initially, expanding a sport will water down the talent at that time. But that is not the end of the story. Think for a moment that you are a great natural athlete growing up in Atlanta. You have excelled at every sport you have tried but you're sixteen and it's time to concentrate on one sport. It's 1969 and you might choose football or baseball.. But in 1973 you become an Atlanta Flame fan and really take to hockey. You like the sport so much that you decide to push your natural athletic skill toward a hockey career. Without expansion, a young athlete in Atlanta would hardly choose hockey. However, with expansion, the young man is exposed to the sport and a potentially great career begins. Here we see that the initial dilution of hockey talent can lead to a new supply of talent in previously untapped areas. This can happen with basketball in Kansas City of Baseball in San Diego. With expansion, you are setting up this special kind of farm system all over the country, the kind that never dries up.

My support of expansion does not, however, rest solely on these athletic considerations. Even the most fanatic Bruin fan (is there any other kind?) had to admire the incredible love affair between Philadelphia and their Flyer's Stanley Cup victory. I was in Philadelphia in late February, about the time that the city was beginning to realize how good the Flyers really were. Reading the newspapers and listening to the street chatter, one really got a sense of the city's pride and love for their hockey team. No longer was Philadelphia the home of the losers. I have been a frequent visitor to Philadelphia, but this time the town seemed happier, more alive. You remember how it was those great September days with the 1967 Red Sox. So it was with the Flyers. Without expansion, the Flyers would not exist.

Philadelphia during the hockey playoffs was indeed a remarkable phenomena, but even that is dwarfed by Miami at football season. You have your Don Shula shows, Nick Buoniconti commercials, Jake Scott articles as well as the sellout crowds and wild celebrations. More importantly, however, is the sense of pride and dignity that takes over the city. This is not to say that everything changes in these cities. Philadelphia is still a crummy city. It just becomes less crummy. Miami remains a vulgar place. It just becomes less vulgar. Even if it is only three hours on Sunday, one can be in Miami and not get ripped off for twenty dollars worth of souvenirs, or watch overweight businessmen flaunting their money. Without expansion, the Dolphins would not exist.

For those of us who live in Boston, it is easy to become indignant and self-righteous about expansion and complain that the Candadians only play here twice or the Knicks only come to the Garden four times. But one must look at the bigger picture. Atlanta and Kansas City should get to see Bobby Orr, just as Seattle and Portland should get to see John Havlicek. To ignore this dimension of expansion is like having all the food in your neighborhood and refusing to understand the rationale behind sharing it. You might not east as well, but the rest of the neighborhood won't starve. Most importantly, after they discover food, your neighbors may start growing it themselves.

OBITUARIES

Rev. Robert E. Mezoff

Rev. Robert C. Mezoff, pastor of Newtonville United Methodist Church, died Wednesday (July 3) in an automobile accident in Quincy.

Rev. Mezoff, 40, of West Newton, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew J. Mezoff of Bridgeport, Conn. Born in Bridgeport, he was a graduate of Boston University and its school of Theology. He also studied in Switzerland and in 1968 was awarded a fellowship to study at Harvard.

As a member of the New England Conference and the Southern New England Conference of the United Methodist Church, Rev. Mezoff served pastorates in Rockport and Arlington before coming to Newtonville five years ago.

He was active in the life of the local community and having earned the rank of Eagle Scout in the Boy Scouts, maintained support of the organization and was a member of the Advancement

Rev. Mezoff

Committee of the Norumbega Council.

Funeral services, conducted by the Rev. John E. Barclay, superintendent of the Greater Boston District of the Southern New England Conference of the United Methodist Church, were held in the Newtonville church Monday (July 8). Rev. Per J. Hassing and Father Charles J. Ring, C.S.S., also participated, as did Rev. Mezoff's son, Danny.

Rev. Mezoff is survived by his parents; his wife, Mrs. Elaine Mezoff; and three sons, David A., Daniel L. and Robert C.

In his memory, an educational fund for the Mezoff boys is being established by the church. Anyone wishing to contribute can send a donation to: Mr. Charles E. Smith, treasurer; 167 Waverly Ave., Newton 02158.

Loretta Kramer

Services were held in Temple Emanuel Monday (July 1) for Mrs. Loretta (Smith) Kramer, pioneer in the field of geriatric recreation and founder of the Gold Age Club at the temple.

Mrs. Kramer, 70, of 79 Concolor Ave., Newton, died Saturday (June 29) in Massachusetts General Hospital.

She was a member of the Sisterhood of Temple Emanuel, the Brandeis University Women's Committee, the Beth Israel Hospital Women's Auxiliary and the Friends of the Association for Retarded Children.

Mrs. Kramer is survived by her husband, Max Kramer; a son, Ronald E. of Canada; a daughter, Mrs. Diane Winokur of California; two brother, Harry of Holbrook and Benjamin Smith of Newton; and five sisters, Mrs. Lena Bornstein of Randolph, Mrs. Tibbie Richstein of Brockton, Mrs. Minnie Kempner of Boston, Mrs. Jean Viscott of Newton and Mrs. Ada Rubman of Milton.

Raymond J. Veduccio

Funeral services for Raymond J. Veduccio were held Monday (July 8) with a mass in Our Lady Help of Christians Church.

Mr. Veduccio, 68, of 66 Anthony Rd., Newtonville, died Friday (July 5) in Waltham Hospital after a short illness. A lifelong resident of Newton, he had been a security guard at Raytheon until his retirement three years ago.

Husband of the late Annie Veduccio, he is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Rejame Hutchins of Newton; three brothers, William, a retired police sergeant; Richard, a Newon police officer; Robert of Natick; two sister, Mrs. Alice Murphy and Mrs. Gladys Tedeschi, both of Newton.

At one time, Mr. Veduccio's father, Nicholas, was police chief in Newton.

Burial is in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

GOING UP
HONG KONG (UPI) I Mt. Shisha Pangma, whose 8,012 meters makes it one of the highest peaks in the Himalaya Mountains, has risen by about 3,000 meters since the late Pliocene period 65 million years ago, according to a study by the Institute of Botany of the Chinese Academy of Sciences.

ROSE LOVERS
CHICAGO (UPI) — The rose was chosen national flower in a Chicago Tribune poll, leading the marigold by a better than 2 to 1 margin. Of almost 1,500 readers who voted, 43.4 per cent chose the rose, compared with 19.5 per cent for the marigold.

MEATY FACT
CHICAGO (UPI) — The meat packing industry has one of the highest rates of on-the-job injuries and the resulting costs are a contributing factor to higher meat costs, according to a National Safety Council spokesman.

Mailing, telethon aid Centers' fund drive

The drive to raise $50,000 for construction of an addition to the Newton Community Service Centers' West Newton headquarters building was given a boost recently when a group of senior citizens prepared a mailing and 23 NCSC board members conducted a telethon.

The fund raising campaign now underway is the first capital fund raising drive conducted by the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc., in 20 years.

"The Newton Community Service Centers, Inc., has provided valuable services for Newton residents since 1907," said Edward C. Uehlein, chairman of the building fund.

"Our ever-expanding programs and services have brought about the need for this addition."

"The existing facilities are jammed beyond capacity day and night—all of which is evidence that what we are offering is vitally needed by our citizens. The needs of thousands of Newton citizens are being met yearly," Uehlein added.

The NCSC, Inc., offers a broad range of programs, services and activities for all age groups in the city. Some of these include: care service, programs for children, all tyoes of classes, day camp, nursery school, youth center with assorted programs run by high school students, hot line for people in need, social clubs for adults, sports, Job Bank, Retired Senior Volunteer Program, and many others.

Senator Edward Brooke, Rep. Robert Drinan, and Mayor Theodore Mann are serving as honorary chairmen of the current fund-raising campaign.

Attorney Oscar Wasserman is serving as chairman of the Building Committee. Also involved in a leadership role is Sister Margaret Gorman, chairman of the Psychology Department at Newton College and president of the board of directors of the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc.

Those who conducted the recent telethon for which the Boston Gas Company gave the use of its offices and telephones included: Sister Margaret Gorman, Mrs. Mark Warshaw, Mrs. Robert A. Carleo, Mrs. J. Seymour McLean, Robert C. Jackson, Mrs. John R. Taplin, Anthony J. Bibbo, Mrs. Morgan S. Campbell, William Chisholm, Jr., Mrs. John E. Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. David Cooper, Mrs. Joseph S. Daniele, Mrs. George Hauser, Mrs. David Mofenson, Mrs. Richard Morse, Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Uehlein, and Mrs. Frank C. Wheelock, Jr., and Mr. Arthur Martin.

Contributions may be sent to the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc., 429 Cherry Street, West Newton, Massachusetts 02165.

Student writes about Walkathon

Erica Sussman was one of almost 1000 people who participated in the Walkathon for Israel in May, sponsored by the High School Team of the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston.

The 15-year-old from Newton Centre had eight sponsors, and raised $41.50 for the Israel Emergency Fund. But thoughts of the Walkathon did not leave her, even after her money was collected and sent to CJP.

Erica, a student at the Union Hebrew High School in Brookline, needed a topic for a Hebrew composition to be read at the school's closing exercises — and she chose the Walkathon.

Her composition was admired by Joseph S. Finstein of the Bureau of Jewish Education, who supervises the Union Hebrew High School. He sent it to "Olam Hadash," a national illustrated Hebrew magazeine for youth, and it will be published in the magazine's September issue.

Translated from the Hebrew, Ezica's story reads as follows:

"On the thirteenth day of the month of Iyar I marched with many friends in the Walkathon. The Walkathon was held to commemorate the 26th anniversary of Israel's struggle for freedom. The young men and women hiked for 10 miles from Chestnut Hill to Boston.We sang many songs in Hebrew and in English. There were 1000 people in the Walkathon.

"Wehen we got to Boston Common we had a big gathering. The Walkathon lasted for four hours. We had buses which transported us to Chestnut Hill after the gathering. The Walkathon lasted a long time, but we derived much pleasure from it."

The Newton student got involved in the Walkathon through her youth group, the Reform Youth Fellowship of Temple Israel. Erica was recently confirmed from Temple Israel in Boston, and plans to attend post-confirmation classes in the future.

But for the next six months, Erica will be in Israel, studying at the Leo Baeck school in Haifa on a Temple Israel scholarship. The school, which is supported by Reform congregations in the United States, has an exchange program which will allow Erica to live with an Israeli family during her stay in Haifa. She plans to study Hebrew and work on a kibbutz. Her Newton high school, where whe will be a junior in the fall, will give her credit for courses taken in Israel.

Erica was one of many people who helped raise more than $20,000 for the Israel Emergency Fund through the Walkathon. Marlene Maletz, Walkathon chairman, noted that the event was so successful that plans are being made to have another Walkathon next year.

WATERMAN RETURNS

NEW YORK (UPI) — Waterman of France and Allied Products Division of Consolidated Cigar Corp. recently made a marketing agreement to bring the Waterman pen name back to the U.S. market.

A.N. Brainard, president of Consolidated Cigar, said the distribution agreement reached between the two companies is the first step in his organization's diversification into nontobacco products.

Waterman writing instruments include fashion styled fountain pens, ball points, fiber tips and pencils. In 1971 Waterman of France acquired the U.S. Waterman rights and finally those in the United Kingdom and Canada.

To hard boil an ostrich egg takes a big pot and a lot of patience. The egg tastes much like that of a chicken but weighs an average of three pounds. It needs two hours to hard boil, says Grzimek's "Animal Life" encyclopedia.

CANVAS SHRINKAGE

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The canvas products industry shrank a little in the United States between 1967 and 1972, the Commerce Department reports. At the manufacturer's level, the value of shipments dropped by $3 million to $271 million. However, the manufacturers' value added portion of this volume rose 12 per cent in the same period as economies were made in the use of raw materials.

TV Profile

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ja'net DuBois is beautiful, black and plays Willona, the happy-go-lucky neighbor on the "Good Times" series.

She is also single, bright and ambitious.

Ja'net is a writer as well as an actress. She was nominated for an Emmy as a writer for "Maybe It's All In My Mind," a television drama-musical for a local Hollywood Show.

A native of Philadelphia who was reared in Babylon, N.Y., Ja'net lives alone in a Hollywood apartment and likes it.

She has furnished her one-bedroom dwelling with an array of colorful furniture highlighted by clusters of bright pillows. The walls are covered with large oil paintings.

Wants to Write

But she is looking for a house in hopes her mother will move west to live with her. Ja'net came to Hollywood a year and a half ago, fleeing the soap opera, "Love of Life," in which she played a nurse.

Her principal purpose in coming west was to write. The den of her apartment has been converted into an office, complete with desk, typewriter and file cabinets.

Her dream is to write "The Billie Holliday Story" for movies, despite the fact the legendary singer's life has already been done for the big screen.

Ja'net met Billie once and wants to play her in a movie.

Personally, Ja'net has simplified her life as much as possible. SVHE HAS A MODERN, FULLY EQUIPPED KITCHEN BUT SELDOM USES IT UNLESS SHE ENTERTAINS. She refuses to cook a meal just for herself.

Cooks Creole Dishes

She arises bright and early and throws some fruit juice, an egg and instant protein in a blender. That and a vitamin pill comprise breakfast. Lunch is a salad or light soup. For dinner she stops at restaurants, often by herself but occasionally with a date.

She works five days at week at CBS-TV, three days of rehearsal and two days of shooting the all-black comedy series.

When Ja'net does have friends in for dinner more often than not she prepares fancy French and Creole dishes. Her father is Haitian, and taught her mother the recipes of his native island.

As Willona, Ja'net's wardrobe is somewhat tacky on the show. The actress makes up for this in private life with dozens of beautiful, flowing gowns. She seldom wears pants —a standby of her professional wardrobe.

Her current beau is not in show business. He's athletic and enjoys horseback riding. Naturally, Ja'net has taken up horseback riding, heading for Malibu on weekends to ride in the mountains.

Highly Disciplined

Ja'net enjoys solitude, however. And a great deal of her spare time is devoted to reading books at home, sitting by a flickering fire in the hearth and listening to classical music on her expensive stereo rig.

She is highly disciplined and makes a point of devoting a set number of hours a week to working at the typewriter.

Because most of the parts she has had on television lack real dimension and opportunity for drama, she is convinced the best solution is to write a good play and then star in it herself.

Her proudest performance so far was a richly dramatic role in an episode of the "shaft" series this past season.

Ja'net keeps herself physically trim by attending dance classes and playing tennis, both of which she does well.

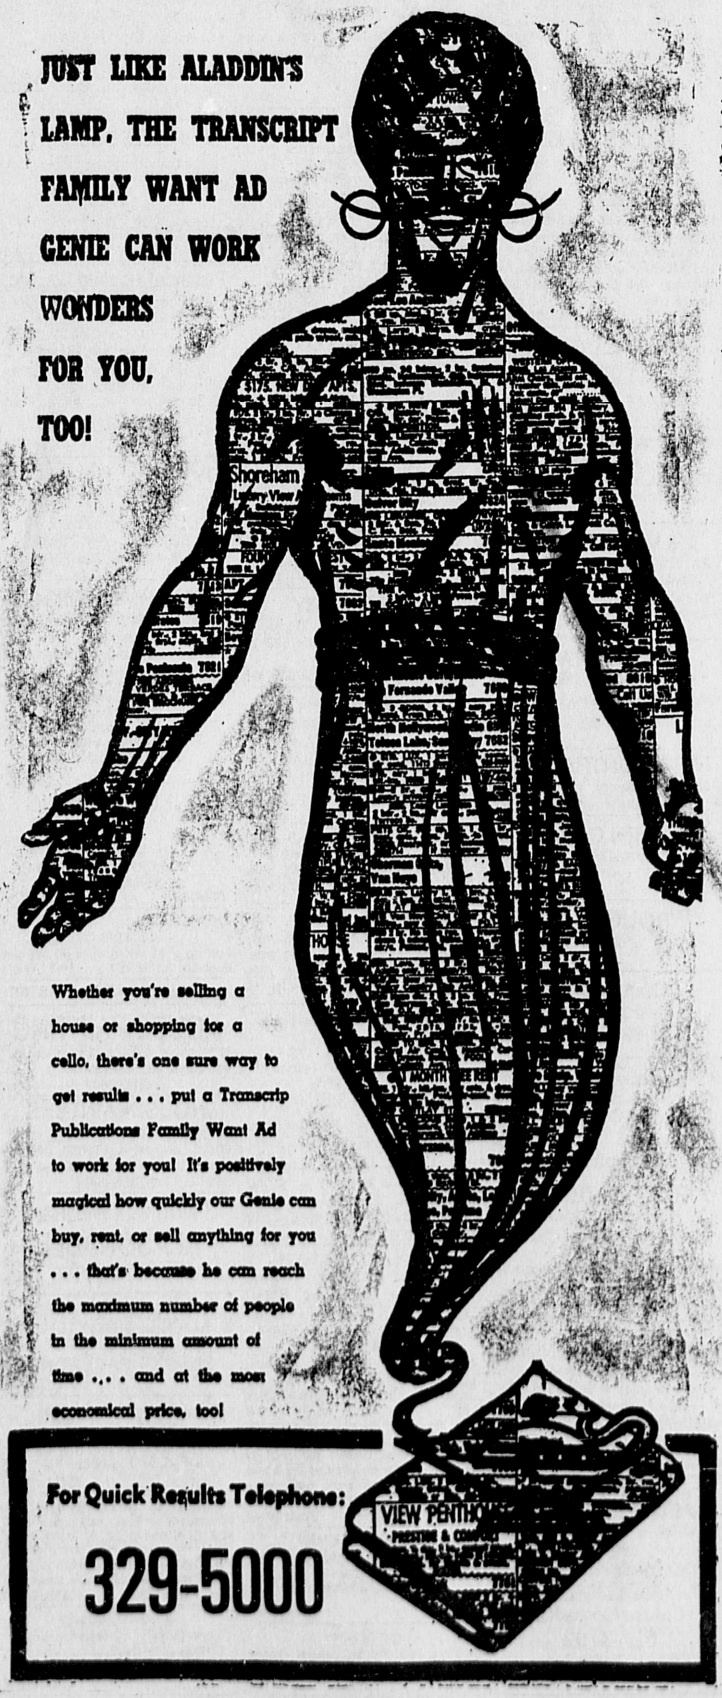

Willona's characterization is not difficult for Ja'net who says she has an aunt who reminds her of the cheerful extrovert — and Ja'net herself is a happy young woman with a dream to become a big star.

TELEVISION NOTES

NEW YORK (UPI) — NBC's "Columbo" series, starring Peter Falk, begins its fourth season in the fall, and the producer for 1974-75 will be Everett Chambers, who handled it during its first season.

One of the CBS "Kojak" episodes for the new season will be the first two-hour segment for this normally one-hour program. Title is "Another Fine Mess," with Michael Constantine, Tige Andrews and Sheree North backing up star Telly Savalas.

A new member of the cast of ABC's daytime serial, "One Life to Live," is Lisa Richards, who plays a nurse and who is a veteran of other video serials.

More dependable than a man.

Someday a handsome prince will ride up and carry you away.

Or maybe you don't see it that way.

Not that you've got anything against handsome princes. It's just that they're not very reliable.

That's why it's nice to know you've got some control over your future. Like being financially prepared for whatever lies ahead.

And one of the easiest ways to build future funds is with U.S. Savings Bonds. Buy them through your bank. Or join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.

Bonds are steady, solid, dependable. Just the kind of security a girl needs.

Then if your handsome prince does come along, so much the better.

You can always buy him a castle.

Take stock in America.

TV Profile

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ja'net DuBois is beautiful, black and plays Willona, the happy-go-lucky neighbor on the "Good Times" series.

She is also single, bright and ambitious.

Ja'net is a writer as well as an actress. She was nominated for an Emmy as a writer for "Maybe It's All In My Mind," a television drama-musical for a local Hollywood Show.

A native of Philadelphia who was reared in Babylon, N.Y., Ja'net lives alone in a Hollywood apartment and likes it.

She has furnished her one-bedroom dwelling with an array of colorful furniture highlighted by clusters of bright pillows. The walls are covered with large oil paintings.

Wants to Write

But she is looking for a house in hopes her mother will move west to live with her. Ja'net came to Hollywood a year and a half ago, fleeing the soap opera, "Love of Life," in which she played a nurse.

Her principal purpose in coming west was to write. The den of her apartment has been converted into an office, complete with desk, typewriter and file cabinets.

Her dream is to write "The Billie Holliday Story" for movies, despite the fact the legendary singer's life has already been done for the big screen.

Ja'net met Billie once and wants to play her in a movie.

Personally, Ja'net has simplified her life as much as possible. SVHE HAS A MODERN, FULLY EQUIPPED KITCHEN BUT SELDOM USES IT UNLESS SHE ENTERTAINS. She refuses to cook a meal just for herself.

Cooks Creole Dishes

She arises bright and early and throws some fruit juice, an egg and instant protein in a blender. That and a vitamin pill comprise breakfast. Lunch is a salad or light soup. For dinner she stops at restaurants, often by herself but occasionally with a date.

She works five days at week at CBS-TV, three days of rehearsal and two days of shooting the all-black comedy series.

When Ja'net does have friends in for dinner more often than not she prepares fancy French and Creole dishes. Her father is Haitian, and taught her mother the recipes of his native island.

As Willona, Ja'net's wardrobe is somewhat tacky on the show. The actress makes up for this in private life with dozens of beautiful, flowing gowns. She seldom wears pants —a standby of her professional wardrobe.

Her current beau is not in show business. He's athletic and enjoys horseback riding. Naturally, Ja'net has taken up horseback riding, heading for Malibu on weekends to ride in the mountains.

Highly Disciplined

Ja'net enjoys solitude, however. And a great deal of her spare time is devoted to reading books at home, sitting by a flickering fire in the hearth and listening to classical music on her expensive stereo rig.

She is highly disciplined and makes a point of devoting a set number of hours a week to working at the typewriter.

Because most of the parts she has had on television lack real dimension and opportunity for drama, she is convinced the best solution is to write a good play and then star in it herself.

Her proudest performance so far was a richly dramatic role in an episode of the "shaft" series this past season.

Ja'net keeps herself physically trim by attending dance classes and playing tennis, both of which she does well.

Willona's characterization is not difficult for Ja'net who says she has an aunt who reminds her of the cheerful extrovert — and Ja'net herself is a happy young woman with a dream to become a big star.

TELEVISION NOTES

NEW YORK (UPI) — NBC's "Columbo" series, starring Peter Falk, begins its fourth season in the fall, and the producer for 1974-75 will be Everett Chambers, who handled it during its first season.

One of the CBS "Kojak" episodes for the new season will be the first two-hour segment for this normally one-hour program. Title is "Another Fine Mess," with Michael Constantine, Tige Andrews and Sheree North backing up star Telly Savalas.

A new member of the cast of ABC's daytime serial, "One Life to Live," is Lisa Richards, who plays a nurse and who is a veteran of other video serials.

More dependable than a man.

Someday a handsome prince will ride up and carry you away.

Or maybe you don't see it that way.

Not that you've got anything against handsome princes. It's just that they're not very reliable.

That's why it's nice to know you've got some control over your future. Like being financially prepared for whatever lies ahead.

And one of the easiest ways to build future funds is with U.S. Savings Bonds. Buy them through your bank. Or join the Payroll Savings Plan where you work.

Bonds are steady, solid, dependable. Just the kind of security a girl needs.

Then if your handsome prince does come along, so much the better.

You can always buy him a castle.

Take stock in America.

(SEAL) Case No. 72438 Misc.
In Equity

To Norman Buchbinder of Newton, Middlesex County; Lenore Buchbinder of Brookline, Norfolk County, and both of said Commonwealth; Judith Goodkind of Westport, in the state of Connecticut; and to all persons entitled to the benefit of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended:

The First National Bank of Boston, Suffolk County, and said Commonwealth, claiming to be the holder of a mortgage covering real property in Newton, 64 Baldpate Hill Road, given by Norman Buchbinder and Lenore Buchbinder to Franklin Savings Bank of the City of Boston, dated August 21, 1956, registered as Document No. 309713, noted on Certificate of Title No. 89386, issued from Middlesex South Registry District of the Land Court, and now held by the plaintiff by assignment, has filed with said court a bill in equity for authority to foreclose said mortgage in the manner following: by entry and possession and exercise of power of sale.

If you are entitled to the benefits of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 as amended and you object to such foreclosure you or your attorney should file a written appearance and answer in said court at Boston on or before the nineteenth day of August 1974, or you may be forever barred from claiming that such foreclosure is invalid under said act.

Concannon signatures

Concannon was scheduled to appear Wednesday before the state Ballot Law Commission.

The hearing could go on for several days, especially if, as is likely, handwriting experts are called in to verify signatures.

In the event of an unfavorable decision by the Ballot Law Commission, appeal may be amde through the courts.

Buyer's 'billboard

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If you're thinking about buying an air conditioner before summer settles in, here's something to keep in mind.

Some manufacturers of room air conditioners are now placing tags on the units to tell you how efficient the machines are in terms of using energy. With electric bills going up in many parts of the country, that information may prove valuable in terms of your future utility bills.

Up to now, it's been hard to choose between two units with about the same cooling capacity but which require different wattage. One that uses more watts is usually cheaper than one that runs on less wattage — even though both might cool your room about the same.

To a degree the buyer still has a problem in making that choice. If you dont use the air conditioner very much, cyou may not save that much in electric bills by buying a more expensive, more energy-efficient air conditioner.

Formula Proposed

But in most cases efficiency is a good buy. And on May 1 of this year the government decided on a formula for manufacturers who want to may give efficiency information to the buyer in a standard formula on tags that will read the same throughout the industry.

The central feature of this tag is a number called an "energy efficiency ratio." The higher the number, the more efficient —and cheaper —the unit is to run.

The number is arrived at by dividing the unit's BTUs per hour (the cooling capacity) by the number of watts it uses. The tags not only will list that number, but also will show what the range of numbers is likely to be for other models with about the same cooling capacity. And the buyer is advised in writing on the tag that the higher numbers mean the unit will cost less to run over the yearsm

There are no firm figures available on how many of the 5.3 million window air conditioners turned out in the United States each year will be carrying the tags since cthe whole program is voluntary — although there are proposals pending in Congress to make it mandatory.

Helpful to Buyer

But there are indications some of the bigger companies are offering the information. Sears Roebuck & Co. tells us that energy efficiency ratio numbers are listed both in their catalog and on labels pasted on top of window units when they leave the factory.

General Electric reports GE and Hotpoint air conditioners have carried the efficiency numbers derived from the same formula for two years. The company plans to adopt the whole government formula tag for production starting this summer —meaning the tags will probably start showing up on their products later this year.

The Commerce Department now is working on a similar formula for refrigerators and freezers, but no firm date has been set on when it will be finished.

While the energy efficiency ratio number formula has been in use for some time, the fact that the information —and the explanation of what it is —will now be available on a standard tag should be a big help to the buyer.

Recent discussions in this column on how to avoid possible fire hazards with "instant on" television sets prompted yet another possible solution from a reader in Alexandria, Va., who writes:

"My husband purchased an 'AMF Nite-Owl TV Timer' and connected it to the wall plug. The TV plugs into it. The timer may be set for six hours or less, and to watch, one must turn on both the TV and timer. However, it is necessary to turn off the TV only. Although at this point the 'instant on' is still burning, the timer will automatically shut off everything shortly without further attention.

"As I have a small child I would not want her to fiddle with anything at the back of the set, and find that we do have much greater peace of mind now."

Thank you.

Previous suggestions, in case you missed them, involved turning off the "instant on" switch behind the set, or installing an extension cord with a line switch between the plug and the TV cord so the power can be shut off without pulling the plug.

We'll be happy to hear your suggestions or complaints. Write us care of Buyer's Billboard, UPI, 315 National Press Building, Washington D.C. 20004.

JAPAN'S CLERGY AIDED

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Board for World Ministries of the United Church of Christ has given a grant of $100,000 to a pension fund for ministers of the church in Japan.

In announcing the grant, the church said that because of the Japanese defeat in World War II and continuing inflation, the savings of many retired Japanese pastors had been wiped out.

OPPOSES AMENDMENT

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The head of the Relief Society of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) has broken with other women leaders over the need for the Equal Rights Amendment.

Mrs. Belle S. Spafford said she was not "in accord with those who believe that current problems and needs of women may best be answered, in the main, by adoption of a Constitutional Amendment of Equal Rights."

NEW YORK (UPI) — Dr. Bob Magoon, five time U.S. ocean racing champion, plans an assault on the 10-year-old Miami-New York power boat record in late June or early July.

The lanky Miami Beach eye surgeon says the exact takeoff date for the 1,257-mile dash depends on weather conditions at the time.

Magoon will be driving a new 40-foot Cigarette hull powered by a pair of 482 cubic inch MerCruiser sterndrive engines in his attempt to shatter the 31-hour, 32-minute elapsed time mark set in 1964 by boat builder-engine maker Charles Johnson.

Johnson drove a 41-foot Daytona Marine Special using four 427 cubic inch turbo-charged Daytona engines hooked in tandem pairs driving two props and averaged 39.86 miles per hour.

Magoon, a seven-year veteran of offshore power boat racing and king of the circuit for the past five years, plans to average 50 to 60 m.pmh. in his 80 m.p.h. boat, running in the open ocean all the way with rare exceptions. The finish line is 86th Street in New York City's Hudson River.

He will make one fuel stop—in North Carolina.

Magoon will retrace the historic route first established by the late Gar Wood, the legendary Gray Fox of power boat racing, who took 47 hours to make the dash to New York in 1927 in a race against time with a locomotive. Wood was at the wheel of his famed Miss America.

The late Sam Griffith broke the existing record in 1963 when he made it to New York in 36 hours in his 31-foot Blue Moppie, a Bertram hull powered by twin 310 horsepower engines. Johnson bettered this the following year and his record has stood since.

Summer in the city

First low income project underway

The Newton Housing Authority broke ground June 17, for the first low income family units in the history of the city amidst a large, happy, excited crowd. The homes, 20 duplexes, will be built on Beaconwood Road, Newton Highlands.

Chairman James Miller, speaking before the assemblage asserted that "much has been written about the city of Newton and its long-standing efforts aimed at providing housing for its low income families and elderly persons. Many have written the city off as a community that talks a good game, but which cannot produce when the chips are down . . . we are here today to take a modest step in the direction of dispelling that notion forever."

Miller's wife, Toni, was present at the ceremony saying, "I wouldn't have missed this for the world . . . we've had a long, hard winter and this is like having a new baby." Mrs. Miller was referring to the difficulties faced by the authority in passing the project through.

Mayor Mann began his address to the group stating that "it is better to light one candle than curse the darkness." The mayor's role in making possible the units on Beaconwood Road was praised by Miller and Sylvester Sylvia, a representative from the Department of Community Affairs. Sylvia said that Newton is the only other community in which "the mayor has come forth and stood up 1,000 per cent for low income housing . . . it takes courage politically."

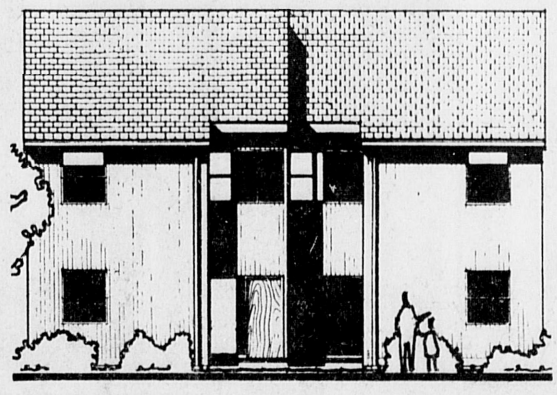

Sylvia joked that he didn't understand why there was "opposition" to the site. On the way to the groundbreaking ceremony, Sylvia got lost and asked "41 citizens and no one, not taxi drivers nor policemen knew where the site was."

The homes, which will cost an estimated $1,125,000, are funded under the State's "705 scatter site family housing" programs. The only two other projects funded under this 705 program are in New Bedford and Haverhill.

The duplexes, designed by Architect's Collaborative of Cambridge, will have 15 three-bedroom units and five four-bedroom units. In addition, there will be two units for the handicapped.

Almost suffering an early demise, the Newton remote from inflation?

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
Staff Correspondent

Inflation seems to be having some difficulty gaining access to Newton.

Out of 23 interviews conducted at Crystal Lake to determine whether the lake was being used more this year due to the gas shortage and inflation, one one person said that their summer life style was affected by inflation.

Mrs. Marie Clancy said that this was her first summer at Crystal Lake and that due to inflation her family was "going away for two weeks instead of four." She also pointed out that last year she didn't come to the lake at all.

Although Mrs. Suzanne Ross was not planning a vacation, she commented that "I think people are paying through the nose to live in Newton."

Vacations seem to be the last thing sacrificed, however, many complained about the high cost of food. And Mrs. Jean Holtey said she had "converted more of the front yard into a vegetable garden."

Food was also on Mrs. Marie Mahoney's mind when she stated that "this summer will be the proof . . . we'll see how much it will cost to eat when we are away." She and her family will vacation at a summer home which is "in the family."

Mrs. Connie Kant also said she was putting her "energy into a vegetable garden and cutting down on the food bill."

While some residents were going to the Cape, Canada and even exotic places such as Lapland, other Newton residents were making good use of the available facilities in both Boston and Newton.

Mrs. Joan Witt, one of these residents, said "we go to all the free plays and concerts on the river . . those are the things we like to do." Mrs. Witt added that "if we didn't live in Boston, perhaps we would be affected by inflation."

However, in at least one home, lifestyles were being seriously reconsidered. Mrs. Barbara Zolli said "we are getting rid of our car, taking fewer trips out of Newton and rediscovering public transportation."

One woman acidly said that "we have been living a bargain in America," indicating that inflation was righteously catching up with us at long last.

Could it be possible though, that inflation really skipped over Newton? Not so, claimed Mrs. Fran Putnoi who helps run the Peace Boutique on Washington Street and said that she feels "many people are living on credit."

"For the first time, I have had twenty requests for Master Charge, something that never happened before," said Mrs. Putnoi and adding that all transactions hitherto had been made in cash. Mrs. Kantar backed up that statement saying "we are borrowing more money from the bank and trying to buy things now." Doing just that is the essence of the Pan Am radio commercial indicating if you don't do it now, tomorrow it may be out of your reach.

Mrs. Putnoi theorized that "we may not see the results of inflation until after January." And if she's right, when the bills come due, it may a grim winter in Newton.

NRA close to settling with former landowner

The Newton Redevelopment Authority is reportedly "on the verge of a settlement" with Martin Roach, former owner of the commercial parcel to undergo redevelopment in Lower Falls, according to Edmund Mangini of the Department of Community Affairs.

The land dispute arose after the authority said the piece was "blighted" and took it by eminent domain in 1969. Roach vigorously fought the action charging that he was being "robbed." He felt that the amount that he was paid for the land, $191,000 or 51 cents a quare foot was $1 million less than he was entitled to. He then instituted a lawsuit against the NRA, however, the case has not been tried yet.

The amount awarded Roach was based on three appraisals ranging from less than $200,000 to over $600,000. According to Jeffrey Pollock, assistant secretary in the Executive Office of Communities and Development, the third and highest appraisal was based "on the assumption that the land was to be imminently rezoned." The other two were based on the land value at the time of the taking.

Pollock and sources close too the authority have indicated that as long as Roach owned the land, the city would never have granted a zoning change because they were concerned that Roach would "overdevelop" the parcel.

At the March 14 meeting of the authority, the subject was reopened by member Richard Clarey. In a follow-up letter, Mangini suggested the authority get a third appraisal and disregard the high appraisal. The NRA has referred the matter to its attorney, Robert Muldoon Jr. of Withington, Cross, Park and Groden, for consideration.

Mangini said he hopes this can be settled without going too court and that a third appraisal would provide "best justification" for a settlement.

NRA Executive Director, Gerald Early, stated that the authority will have to sit down "with its attorneys, Mangini and HUD to set up the ground rules to choose an appraiser who will be acceptable to everyone." HUD will be involved because a portion of the land is federally owned.

Roach says he has waited five years to sit down and negotiate and "at my age, I would very muck like too settle, but I will have to see what they offer as a settlement."

During the height of this argument, the authority had three members who were controversial in the community and have since resigned. They were Mario DiCarlo, Lawrence Sullivan and Robert Davidson. They were replaced by Margaret L. Smith, A. Morris Kobrick and Otis B. Robinson.

This dispute did not affect the July 11 signing of the land disposition agreement with commercial developer Spaulding and Slye which signaled the go-ahead for the redevelopment project.

However, there is one stumbling block. After the Board of Aldermen approved the subdivision of the lots on

Aldermen question 766 provisions

The implementation of Chapter 766, a law which shifts the responsibility for the education of mentally and physically handicapped children from the state to the cities and towns, has been questioned by the aldermanic Finance Committee.

Faced with a request from Health Commissioner, Dr. John Athans for almost $60,000 for Health Department screening of preschool children and provision of medical services for known handicapped children, the Finance Committee has suggested that the School Department assume the cost, which is reimbursable.

Health services to school children, other than those mandated through Chapter 766, are normally paid for out of the general city budget, then in part billed to the School Department.

Finance Committee Chairman Sidney Small would prefer to see the School Department spend its money and receive the reimbursement directly from the state.

When Chapter 766 first became law, no money was provided by the state for implementation, only the promise that the extra money spent by communities would be reimbursed.

Reimbursable money from the state often is delayed.

Recently, according to Comptroller Lawrence Marino, a bill providing "startup" money for the 766 program was passed, but Newton's expected amount, $162,000 has not been received.

Small and other committee members also questioned the $50 per hour fee charged by doctors participating in the screening program, but Athans called the cost "competitive" for specialists.

Ald. Ernest Dietz suggested that the screening and other health services under Chpater 766 be done by the Health Department's part-time staff of eight school physicians, some of whom are pediatricians.

These doctors are paid $2,800 per year for 210 hours of work, about $13 an hour, according to the Health Department.

Athans said Newton's handling of the program is important because "the country is looking at Massachusetts to see how it is going to handle Chapter 766, and Massachusetts is looking at Newton because we are one of the few communities with a head start on the program."

Newton has been working on integrating handicapped children into regular schools and providing special services to such children to a considerable extent of the past few years.

Tse request for the $60,000 has been held in the Finance Committee until the School Department has found out about the channels and mechanism of funding.

Small's parting shot was, "I don't expect the typical School Department pitch with 60 people telling us where we were wrong."

McDonald's to fight city on restaurant

By ELIZABETH McKINNON
Of The Graphic Staff

Revocation of a building permit issued to McDonald's Restaurants last week were part of a whirlwind of activity in city government to try to prevent McDonald's from going ahead with plans for a 148-seat restaurant in Newtonville.

In turn, McDonald's will "certainly go to court," Ben Mattingly of McDonald's said. Mattingly is the chain's real estate administrator.

McDonald's was granted a license to operate a restaurant on Walnut Street near Madison Avenue last March. The Licensing Board at that time claimed that a lack of parking in the immediate area was not sifficient grounds for denial.

Neighborhood and aldermanic opposition to the Newtonville location grew increasingly vehement after the issuance of the license.

The resurrection of a pending ordinance change requiring owners of properties whose use is being changed to provide off-street parking forestalled an application by McDonald's for a building permit for alteration of the building.

During the long Land Use Committee discussions of the ordinance change, McDonald's announced through Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce President Ald. Robert Tennant that it was no longer interested in the Newtonvill property as a location for a restaurant.

The ordinance change, which the Chamber and other businessmen in the city felt was unfair to business, was denied by the Board of Aldermen on June 18 to allow the Planning Department more time for work on the proposed changes.

After the denial of the proposed parking ordinance, McDonald's interest apparently revived suddenly, and they took steps to acquire the property and applied for a building permit on July 1.

Under the impression that the filing of an application for a building permit precluded any subsequent action by the city to change parking requirements, Building Commissioner Gene Larson issued the permit July 10.

Although Mayor Theodore Mann and several members of the Board of Aldermen were aware a week earlier that McDonald's had applied for the permit, at a special meeting of the Board last week. Several aldermen called Larson on the carpet for granting the permit.

Larson explained that there was no reason not to grant the permit and said he had not known until that moment, when City Solicitor Howard Levine so ruled, that the date of franting the permit, not the date of applying for the permit, would be the cutoff date for aldermanic action to prevent McDonald's from opening a restaurant.

Aldermanic response to the news that McDonal's has a building permit was a letter to the Licensing Board, requesting that it reconsider its vote to give McDonald's a license on the grounds that the license is not in the best interest of the city; a special meeting of the Land Use Committee tonight (Thursday) to "investigate" the circumstances surrounding the withdrawal of interest by McDonald's and the subsequent resubmission of a request for a building permit; and the scheduling of a public hearing on Sept. 9 on an ordinance based on a Cambridge ordinance to regulate "fast-order food establishments and automobile-oriented food service establishments."

Then late last Friday Larson notified McDonald's that the already-issued building permit was revoked because the application had been signed by the wrong person.

A meeting in the mayor's office with representatives of McDonald's on Monday did not accomplish a change of heart on the part of McDonald's, which indicated on Tuesday that it still intends to fight the city.

The adaptation of the Cambridge ordinance, on which Ald. Edward Richmond is basing his Newton version, allows a fast-food establishment to enter the city by special permit only, based on

Barbecue recipe winners named

By RUTH LENSEN

Transcript Newspapers, Inc. today announced the winners of its Barbecue Recipe Contest and, believe it or not, one of the winners receives a real, live cow.

The winner of the Colombo Yogurt cow is Mrs. Carole Kurker, 34 High View Ave., West Roxbury.

Mrs. Kurker along with members of her family will be guests at the Colombo plant in Methuen and will then proceed to the Colombo dairy farm in New Hampshire where she will have a cow named after her, milk her and have photographs taken. She will also receive three cases of yogurt to be used as needed. Mrs. Kurker's recipe was for a Barbecue Spareribs.

The next five winners will be awarded coupons entitling them to two free cases of Colombo yogurt: Mrs. Paul Krutt, West Newton, Mrs. Francis Chaison, Dedham, Mrs. William Moore, Roslindale, Mrs. Martha T. Taylor, Westwood, Mrs. Jacqueline Judith Bialow, Newton.

Winner of ten 4 pound Perdue roaster chickens is Mrs. Cher Kuback, Needham. Six runners up to receive colorful Perdue cookbooks are: Mrs. F. Sullivan, Norwood, Mrs. Joyce Janjigian, Roslindale, Mrs. Verna C. Thayer, South Walpole, Doris Creasi, Westwood, Mrs. Paul G. McGee, Westwood, Mrs. Roger Devereaux, Somerville, N.J.

Mrs. Haig Merian is the winner of the garden chair from the Unfinished Furniture House in Hanover.

The following five winners will receive six-month subscriptions to the Transcript of their choice. . . The Daily Transcript, the Norfolk County Press, the Parkway Transcript, the West Roxbury Transcript or the Newton

Candidates

IRVING FISHMAN

More legislation sponsored by State Senator Irving Fishman, Democratic candidate for reelection in the newly created Senate district that includes Newton and Brookline, has been signed into law.

Fishman bill requiring insurance companies to offer individual accident and sickness policies to blind persons and a county tax law changing distribution formulas were signed.

"Consumer protection and tax reform have been the areas of my greatest legislative concern," Fishman said. "I am pleased we are moving forward on both fronts.

Fishman's banking reform bill and his bill to require licensed insurance companies to report unsafe and dangerous products are also advancing in the legislature.

JACK BACKMAN

Legislation broadening the powers of mental health and retardation area boards and legislation which opens the state budget procedures to the public is being advocated by State Senator Jack Backman, Democratic candidate from Brookline in the new Newton-Brookline State Senate district.

Backman's legislative budget package would require area budget proposals to be published by the Dept. of Mental Health, public hearings on Welfare Dept. budgets and public hearings for capital outlay budgets.

LOIS PINES

State Representative Lois G. Pines, Democratic candidate for reelection in Newton's 19th Middlesex District, reported this week that her bill allowing citizens to go to court to enforce the anti-discrimination law has become law.

"Victims of discrimination previously had to file a complaint with the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination (MCAD) and wait for that agency to take action," she noted.

"This new law allows a complainant to file a lawsuit 90 days after he or she originally filed a complaint with the MCAD. This means that victims of discrimination can have their day in court or before the commission, whichever authority they feel will act sooner," Rep. Pines said.

DAVID MOFENSON

A legislative proposal to provide firefighters with added protection in the course of duty has passed the Massachusetts House of Representatives and is now before the State Senate.

State Rep. David J. Mofenson, Democratic candidate for reelection in the 18th Middlesex district, filed the measure. It authorizes a joint committee of the legislature to serve as a focal point for the latest developments in firefighting equipment and techniques.

"A better equipped firefighter will be better able to protect himself, and, in turn, to save lives and protect property," Mofenson commented.

PAUL GUZZI

Democratic candidate for secretary of state Paul H. Guzzi of Newton this week asked incumbent Democrat John F. X. Davoren and Republican nominee John Quinlan to join him in a series of regional debates. He asked the League of Women Voters to sponsor them.

Guzzi said he hopes to "reduce expenses while bringing the three candidates before the public."

CHRIS IANNELLA

Boston City Councillor Christopher A. Iannella, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor this week asked his opponents to set what he called "meaningful limits on campaign spending."

In a letter to all other candidates for lieutenant governor, Iannella asked candidates to agree to a $50,000 ceiling on expenditures, a $500 ceiling on out-of-state contributions, a ban on out-of-state public relations, consultant or agency expenditures; monitoring by an independent citizens organization, a means of challenging contributions, and a ban on house signs or banners on public property, abandoned buildings or utility poles or where prohibited by law.

Iannella has asked for a reply by July 26.

THOMAS O'NEILL III

Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill III, Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, Monday released a complete, certified statement of his net worth and financial income.

His net worth, as of July 1, was $59,950. For the five-year period of 1969-73, O'Neill and his wife Jacqueline earned an average income of $32,209 and paid an average of $6,559 in federal taxes and $1,381 in state taxes per year, the statement indicated.

"The voters of Mausachusetts can rightfully expect any candidate seeking public office to disclose his financial background," the candidate said.

CHARLES CABOT

Charles Cabot, Republican candidate for attorney general, this week challenged one of his opponents, Josiah Spaulding, to a debate.

Cabot said he had accepted an invitation from the Republican Club of Massachusetts to appear in a debate to be held Sept. 5 and that Spaulding had turned down the invitation stating he would not accept unless both GOP candidates for governor would also agree to debate at that time.

Cabot has urged reconsideration.

"Spaulding and I are running for attorney general, not governor," Cabot commented. "For a Republican candidate to win the attorney general's office in this state this year, he is going to have to stand up to the Democratic nominee after the primary.

"It seems to me that if a candidate is unwilling to even face a fellow Republican in a direct discussion of the issues, he will have no chance in November."

EDWARD HARRINGTON

Democratic candidate for attorney general Edward F. "Ted" Harrington will be the guest of honor at a party Sunday, July 21, at the home of Ted Gross, 181 Parker St., from 1 to 2 p.m. The public is invited.

Gross has been named assistant Newton coordinator in the campaign.

WILLIAM COWIN

Republican candidate for attorney general William I. Cowin of Newton this week said that he too has accepted an invitation from the Republican Club of Massachusetts to debate his GOP opponents.

He called the proposed debate "clearly the best method by which thoughtful people can choose among competing candidates" and was critical of Josiah Spaulding's rejection of the debate.

"Voters who care about the office (of attorney general)," Cowin said, "deserve a chance to see the competing candidates face to face."

"To face one's opponents squarely is a necessary quality for an attorney general," the candidate observed. "I do not shrink from confrontation or controversy."

FRANCIS X. BELLOTTI

Democratic candidate for attorney general Francis X. Bellotti this week called the excessive waiting periods for elderly housing units "an American tragedy."

Bellotti, a former lieutenant governor, said "it is inconceivable to me that the elderly spend a lifetime working and paying taxes only to find they must sell the family home and face, in many cases, a nine-year wait for adequate housing."

"It is the obligation of government to provide housing for the elderly. Excessive waiting periods or the need to know six or seven politicians should not be requirements for securing housing," he said.

"As attorney general, I would order an immediate probe into the administration of these programs."

Introduction

Mrs. June Goodman, dietitian for the Baptist Home and Newton Health Department, introduces Mrs. Albert Gordon, Traveling Meals of Newton Inc., coordinator, to student nurses at Newton–Wellesley Hospital. Traveling Meals is sponsored by six churches and three temples in Newton. Sixty-two volunteer drivers deliver two meals a day to people unable to prepare their own food. The student nurses are studying dietary problems of the elderly.

Tax deferral at age 65 lets elders keep homes

Legislation to lower the age of eligibility for real estate tax exemptions to 65 years of age has been signed into law by Governor Sargent.

The measure, co-sponsored by Rep. David J. Mofenson (D-Newton) and part of a large package of legislation for the elderly, goes into effect in September.

The bill applies to a person 65 or over occupying a home as his or her legal resident to a husband and wife owining a home jointly as their legal resident if eith of them is 65 or over, and to persons owning and occupying a home jointly or as a tenant in common with a person not his or her spouse.

The legislation requires that the person applying for the exemption has owned and occupied the home for five years and that the person so applying has had a legal residence for 10 years in the Commonwealth.

Any qualified person may, on or before October 1 of each year, apply to the Board of Assessors for an exemption. The board shall grant an exemption provided that the owner or owners enter into a tax deferral and recovery agreement on behalf of the town.

Under the agreement no sale or transfer may take place unless the taxes which would have otherwise been assessed are paid. The total amount of such taxes due, plus interest, for the current and prior years cannot exceed 50 per cent of the owner's share of the full and fair cash value of the property.

Upon the death of the owner any back taxes and interest due shall be recovered from the estate of the owner.

Rep. Mofenson says the bill will help relieve the financial pressure on many senior citizens who wish to keep their homes, but are living on fixed incomes in a time of steep inflation.

Quinn urges precaution to halt daytime breaks

Chief William F. Quinn reminds Newton residents to be extra vigilant during the warm summer months.

The chief stated, "Last year during the summer season, many of our residents were victims of daytime breaks that occurred while the householder was either enjoying his or her backyard, or was gardening or lawn cutting, as a burglar entered through an unlocked door and removed one or more valuables."

The Chief continued, "We are not trying to introduce fear, or advise our people against outside activity, but rather to use reasonable care about leaving all doors unlocked. If you are working in the backyard, be sure the front door is secured, if you cannot observe either door, secure both. Many of our people were victimized while using lawnmowers and their attention was on what they were doing.

Therefore we recommend a little forethought whenever a person is going to be out of the home."

The Chief added, "Our Operation Identification waiting list has been reduced and we are encouraging those who have not availed themselves of our offer of a loan of an engraver, to call 244-1212 and reserve an Operation Identification through the Office of Community Service.

Many vacancies in area colleges

Over 13,000 openings for college freshmen still remained as of July 9, 1974, according to the New England Board of Higher Education.

This total is based upon figures supplied by 152 colleges and universities in New England. In the first phase of its survey, issued in May 1974, the Board reported over 16,200 such vacancies.

In Massachusetts 65 schools reported approximately 4,645 vacancies, including the following two-year schools: Aquinas Junior College (Newton), Chamberlayne Junior College (Boston), Fisher Junior College (Boston), Franklin Institute of Boston, Garland Junior College (Boston), Grahm Junior College (Boston), Lasell Junior College (Newton), Massachusetts Bay Community College (Newton), Massachusetts Bay Community College (Wellesley), Mount Ida Junior College (Newton), Newton Junior College, Pine Manor Junior College (Brookline), Roxbury Community College and Wentworth Institute (Boston).

The four-year institutions in Massachusetts reporting vacancies include Bentley College (Waltham), Berklee College of Music (Boston), Boston Conservatory of Music, Boston University, Emerson College (Boston), Emmanuel College (Boston), Northeastern University (Boston), Suffolk University (Boston), U. Mass at Boston and Wheelock College (Boston).

Many opportunities still exist in New England for students who wish to enter college this fall. Detailed copies of the Board's survey can be obtained at the Board's office at 40 Grove Street, Wellesley, Ma. 02181.

These vacancies are filling rapidly, and students who have already been denied admission should not reapply to that institution.

Adolescent project given grant

The city of Newton has been awarded a grant of $21,490 from the State Department of Youth Services for the purpose of supporting the Newton Adolescent Project, sponsored by the Newton Community Service Centers. The grant is effective for fiscal 1975.

The new grant enables the project to continue the programs currently in operation which deal with referral, counseling and placement of delinquent or alienated youth.

The Newton Adolescent Project was initiated in 1968 after students at Newton senior high schools, the local courts and several social agencies voiced concern about the lack of a youth-oriented assistance project.

Since its inception, the Newton Adolescent Project, directed by Rick Williams, has expanded to include six major programs which help young people adjust to themselves, their peer group, and society.

Through the Job Bank, Newton youth are put in contact with possible employers.

The project also does liaison work with the courts and the Department of Youth Services to help in the return of young offenders to the community and to provide foster homes when necessary.

Other programs of the project are a group work-therapy program, workshops held in the Community Centers, a counseling and referral service, and an outreach worker, in addition to the operation of the six neighborhood youth centers.

In the workshops, participants have already compiled a booklet on drugs and are considering preparing a bimonthly newsletter telling about activities for youth available in the city.

The continued response to the project and its consequent growth attest to its acceptance. Last year, the Newton Adolescent Project filled 2,345 job openings with 2,307 Newton adolescents and placed 37 out of 45 referrals from the Department of Youth Services.

The project is affiliated with the Newton-Wellesley-Weston Multi-Service Drug Center Inc., Family Counseling Service Inc., and Freeport Inc., which serve as consultants and referral agencies. Volunteer help is also provided by 25 Newton high school students who man the 24-hour-a-day Hotline.

Anthony Bibbo, executive director of Community Service Centers Inc., stated: "We aim to have a constructive impact on the Newton community. Through youth helping youth, and youth following positive adult models, we feel we can best reduce anti-social behavior while integrating youth into a wider community. In our coordinated effort with local agencies, we hope to strengthen and extend the area's resources to benefit youth."

Four officers have joined scuba team

Newton Police Chief William F. Quinn has announced the addition of four police officers to the Police Department Scuba Team.

The team, under the supervision of Capt. John J. Bartinelli, is trained to participate in water rescues and underwater recoveries and has had training in each of the bodies of water in Newton.

Retired Officer Gilbert J. Champagne and Officer John J. Coffey supplied the instruction at the State Police Ada Academy pool and used Crystal Lake in Newton Centre for depth training.

At the conclusion of the course, each of the men, Paul F. Ginnetty, James I. Norcross, David T. Richard and Peter F. Hart, were certified as scuba divers by the New England Divers School. They round the Newton scuba team out to a total of 14.

The other officers on the team are: James P. Carter Jr., Francis M. Greeley, Daniel M. Donovan, Richard F. Forbes, David G. Hay, George S. Maxcey, Richard B. Hickson and Robert W. Whelan.

BERGE ASCHIAN of 32 Chandler Pl., was awarded a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering from Lowell Technological Institute recently. The son of Karlo Aschian, he served as an officer in the LTI Armenian Students Organization.

City wants building removed

The city has issued an order to Cumberland Farm Food Stores to remove a vacant and fire-damaged building in Auburndale. The company has seven days after receipt of the order in which to comply.

The wood-frame building at Prairie and Auburndale Avenues has not been used by Cumberland Farms since a year or so ago. and was gutted by fire in April of this year, according to Ald. Richard McGrath, who has been trying since then to have the building razed.

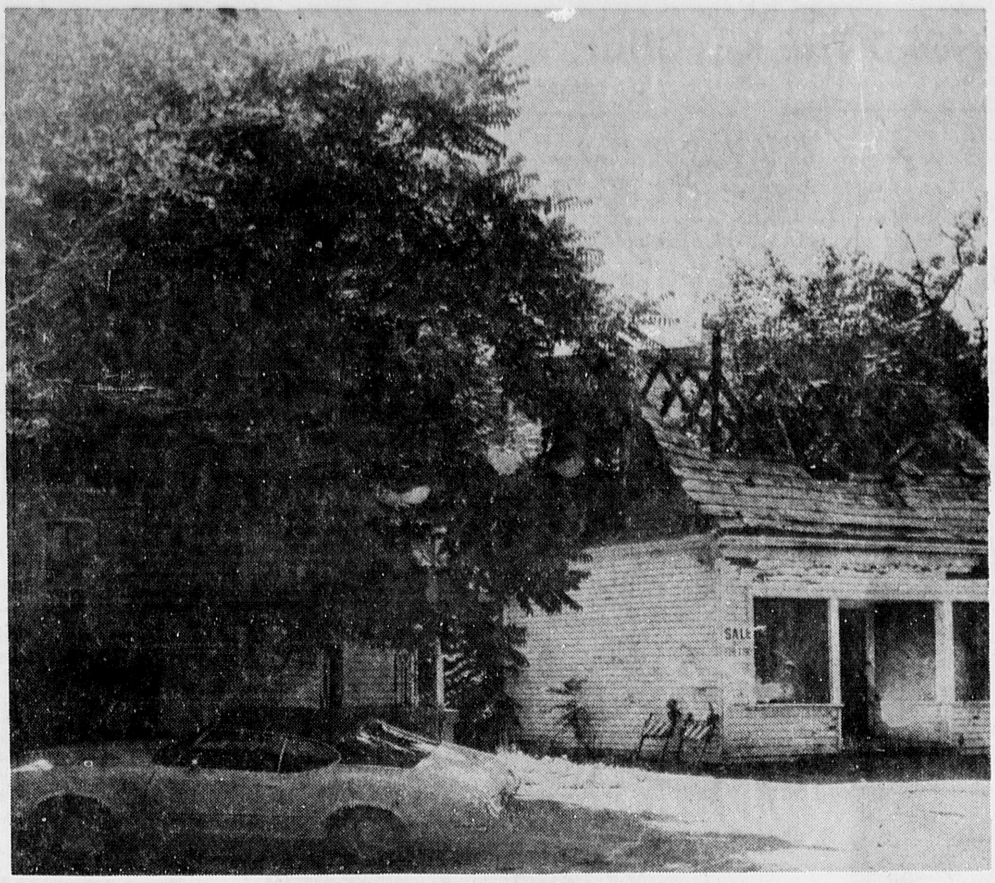

According to McGrath, the Newton Fire Department some time ago classified the building as hazardous and recommended that the former store be demolished, but he was unable to get action on the hazard from the city.

During the fire, a building next door "received a good scorching," McGrath said, and he is afraid that if another fire occurs the two abutting houses may be set afire.

The top floor of each house is occupied by elderly people, McGrath said, and the rest of the buildings house young couples with a total of five preschool children.

All McGrath's efforts with Cumberland Farms have been met with evidence that "they are only interested in protecting their financial interests and couldn't care less about the people who abut their property and suffer daily from the fear that the building will again be set on fire."

In a letter to Mayor Theodore Mann and local newspapers, McGrath asked why the city has been "hesitant to compel Cumberland Farms to make their property safe."

Bans on parking reviewed

Discussed at length with neighbors and held by the Street Traffic Committee were two more in a long series of parking problems in Newton, most recently the hardships imposed by the citywide all-night parking ban and a ban on parking on Chestnut Street south of Route 9.

At a public hearing last week, attended by all members of the committee, residents of Tremont Street and Playstead Road asked whether some provisions might be made for on-street parking at night, since driveway and garage space is insufficient for most of the cars in the area, especially if overnight guests have to be provided for.

There is a year-round ban on all-night parking in Newton but it is seldom enforced during the summer except on complaint, according to Newton police.

Street Traffic Committee Chairman David Cohen, in response to suggestions about sticker parking for residents, explained that such an ordinance changes requires the permission of the state legislature.

Another proposal — to use reflective "identification" stickers that would merely alert police to the fact that a car parked on a particular street was a local car — would be possible without legislative approval, Cohen said.

Part of the rationale behind the all-night ban is too make the presence of an out-of-town or out-of-state car obvious to patrolling police vehicles.

In another hearing held the same night, businessmen, primarily antique dealers operating a cluster of stores on Chestnut Street, Upper Falls, opposed the parking ban proposed by the Traffic Commission for safety reasons, while residents of the Upper Falls community generally favored either a total ban on parking on Chestnut Street or a compromise offered by the president of the Upper Falls Improvement Association Kenneth Newcomb.

There is no municipal off-street parking in Upper Falls now.

Several applications for licenses to operate antique and second-hand stores have been delayed by the Consumer Affairs & Licenses Committee until a solution is reached on the parking problem on Chestnut Street.

Elderly will receive discount on cab fares

The Newton taxi owners' association has agreed to give elderly citizens at 10 per cent discount on cab fares as a condition of a general fare increase approved last week by the aldermanic Consumer Affairs Licenses Committee.

The discount plan will be implemented by a ticket system. The Council on Aging will have books of 10 tickets printed and distributed to the cab companies, which will stamp their names on the tickets. Drivers will sell the ticket books at $9 for 10 tickets to persons over age 60 who can provide proof of age.

The state Department of Elder Affairs this week said that in several communities in the state, cab companies participate in such discount plans for the elderly.

The fare increase approved by the committee and recommended to the full Board of Aldermen does not affect the minimum cost of $1 for the first mile. Beyond the minimum, the fare will increase from 10 cents for each one-seventh of a mile to 20 cents for each additional one-fifth of a mile.

Waiting time will be increased from $6 to $9 an hour.

The discount plan is expected to be in operation by this fall.

Discrimination charges filed by former assistant city solicitor

A former assistant city solicitor in Newton has filed charges against the Law Department of sex discrimination in salary with the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination (MCAD) and similar charges with the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Mrs. Helen Murphy Doona, who was dismissed from her job by City Solicitor Howard Levine when she announced her intention to run for state representative, has also been in touch with the Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts about restriction of the right to run for office.

Mrs. Doona was fired on June 25 after she decided to go ahead with her candidacy. The city solicitor said at the time that her candidacy would constitute a conflict of interest and that no employees should engage in any political activity.

Mrs. Doona believes that being forced to choose between her job and running for office has no basis in law. She cites several instances in which policemen have run for state office and have either been granted a leave of absence or have not been required to take a leave.

She was refused permission to take a leave of absence, Mrs. Doona said. She also denied that Levine said none of the Law Department employees could run for office.

"I have the right, and I believe that right has been abused," Mrs. Doona said. "There is no city ordinance prohibiting my running, and the Hatch Act applied only to state employees."

"My primary concern is the constitutional issue," Mrs. Doona said emphatically.

Morris Robinson of MCAD confirmed this week that the commission has received the complaint. The Law Department has been notified and has been sent an interrogatory, he said, which must be answered in 20 days from its receipt.

After the interrogatory has been returned, Robinson said, an investigator will look into the substance of the complaint.

Possible remedies, if the city is found at fault, are restitution of Mrs. Doona's job, if the firing is found to be due to sex discrimination and forced payment of underpayment of salary.

The Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts said only that Mrs. Doona had contacted the group, but no decision had yet been made about whether to accept the case. They are waiting for a meeting with her.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission refused to comment on whether Mrs. Donna had filed a charge.

A person must be at least 30 years old to be eligible for the U.S. Senate.

Police report

Boston College priest robbed

A Boston College priest was reportedly robbed of money and a car Monday night by three men.

Three youths reportedly took $10 from the priest's wallet, $15 from his room, a television set, and the keys too his car.

The priest's hands and feet were reportedly tied. After he untied himself, he called Boston College security, and it in turn contacted the Newton Police.

A breaking and entering larceny was reported at 25 Westfield St., West Newton on Saturday. Ahouse sitter called Newton Police at 2:28 a.m.

Entrance was reportedly gained through an unlocked front door between 4:30 p.m. Friday and 2:28 a.m. Saturday. Missing items included a stereo set, a tapedeck, a television, and assorted medicine, police said.

Boston Police reported on Sunday that property belonging to the home had been recovered. Costume jewelry, photos, credit cards, etc. were reportedly fished out of Chandler Pond on Lake Shore Dr. by youths.

A breaking and entering at 12 Nathan Rd., Newton Centre, was reported on Saturday. Entrance was gained by ripping a screen and pushing up an unlocked inner window. Reported missing were $45 in cash, candy, and screwdrivers.

A break at 15 Victoria Cir., Newton Centre was reported on Monday. Entrance was gained through a cellar window. Missing were two stereo speakers.

A 22-year old Newton Highlands man was charged with disorderly conduct on Sunday.

Charles H. Lewis III, 101 Upland Ave., was reportedly arrested after being handed a citation for speeding and driving as to endanger.

Concannon can't run for DA

The candidacy of Ward 2 Alderman Thomas B. Concannon for Middlesex County District Attorney is apparently over.

The state Ballot Law Commission has ruled that the insertion in a different handwriting of the word "same" following names and addresses on Concannon's nomination papers have invalidated those signatures.

The invalidation of some 400 signatures left Concannon short of the required number of signatures.

There is an appeals procedure, which Concannon said this week would be very expensive and time-consuming. He doubts that he will take it on.

Concannon says candidly that he had very little chance against an entrenched politician like Droney, whose conservative views probably represent the feelings of most of Middlesex County except Newton, Lexington and a couple of other towns.

Block party for Drinan

On Sunday, July 21, from 5-8 p.m., a block party for Congressman Robert F. Drinan will be held outside his campaign headquarters at 80 Rowe St., Auburndale.

There will be square dancing, free refreshments and a chance to meet Drinan.

New Bus Service

During the remaining weeks of reconstruction on the Riverside Line, a new rush hour express bus service will operate between the Woodland Station in Newton, and Chauncy Street in downtown Boston. The fare is 75 cents and buses run every 20 minutes during rush hours. Passengers who "double back" to Woodland on the Riverside trolley can reach downtown Boston via the new bus for 75 cents too . . . no extra fare.

We hope this will provide yet another alternative to passengers who have been inconvenienced by modernization work on the Riverside Line. Also keep in mind: rush hour express buses to Chauncy Street and Copley Square from Riverside Terminal.

Illegal polliticing

A number of persons high in the organization of Senator Edward W. Brooke are convinced that Brooke's political interests would best be served if Governor Francis W. Sargent is defeated for reelection next November.

Brooke himself has declared that he is neutral in the fight between Governor Sargent and former State Commerce Commissioner Carroll Sheehan for the Republican nomination for Governor.

He has asserted that he will support the primary winner in the final election.

That in itself is a rather unusual attitude for a Republican U.S. Senator to take toward a Republican Governor in his home state.

When Governor Endicott Peabody was challenged by the then Lieutenant Governor Francis X. Bellotti in the 1964 Democratic primary, Senator Edward M. Kennedy publicly supported Peabody and urged his nomination even though Ted was hospitalized with a broken back at the time.

Some people close to Brooke point out privately that if Sargent were defeated for reelection next autumn, Brooke would be the undisputed leader of the Massachusetts delegation to the 1976 Republican national convention, and his only Bay State adversary for a place on the GOP national ticket would be former U.S. Attorney General Elliot Richardson.

But they have been clumsy in manifesting their hostility to Sargent, and they are taking a gamble that the resentment, which is certain to flare up against Brooke in the Republican party if Sarge is defeated, will be forgotten by 1976.

Subject of much discussion in GOP circles is the fact that Albert A. Gammal, Jr., for years one of Brooke's top political lieutenants and now the regional head of the federal government's General Services Administration, is supporting Carroll Sheehan against Governor Sargent.

Brooke, of course, got Gammal the job. In case you are wondering, Brooke has been able to work both sides of the political street. He has done very well at getting patronage from the Nixon administration while at the same time blasting Nixon and calling for his resignation.

Actually, Gammal is violating the law when he involves himself in a contest for the Governorship. As a federal employee, he is prohibited by the Hatch Act from participating in a partisan election campaign. But with the protection and support of Brooke, Gammal apparently doesn't have to worry about the Hatch Act.

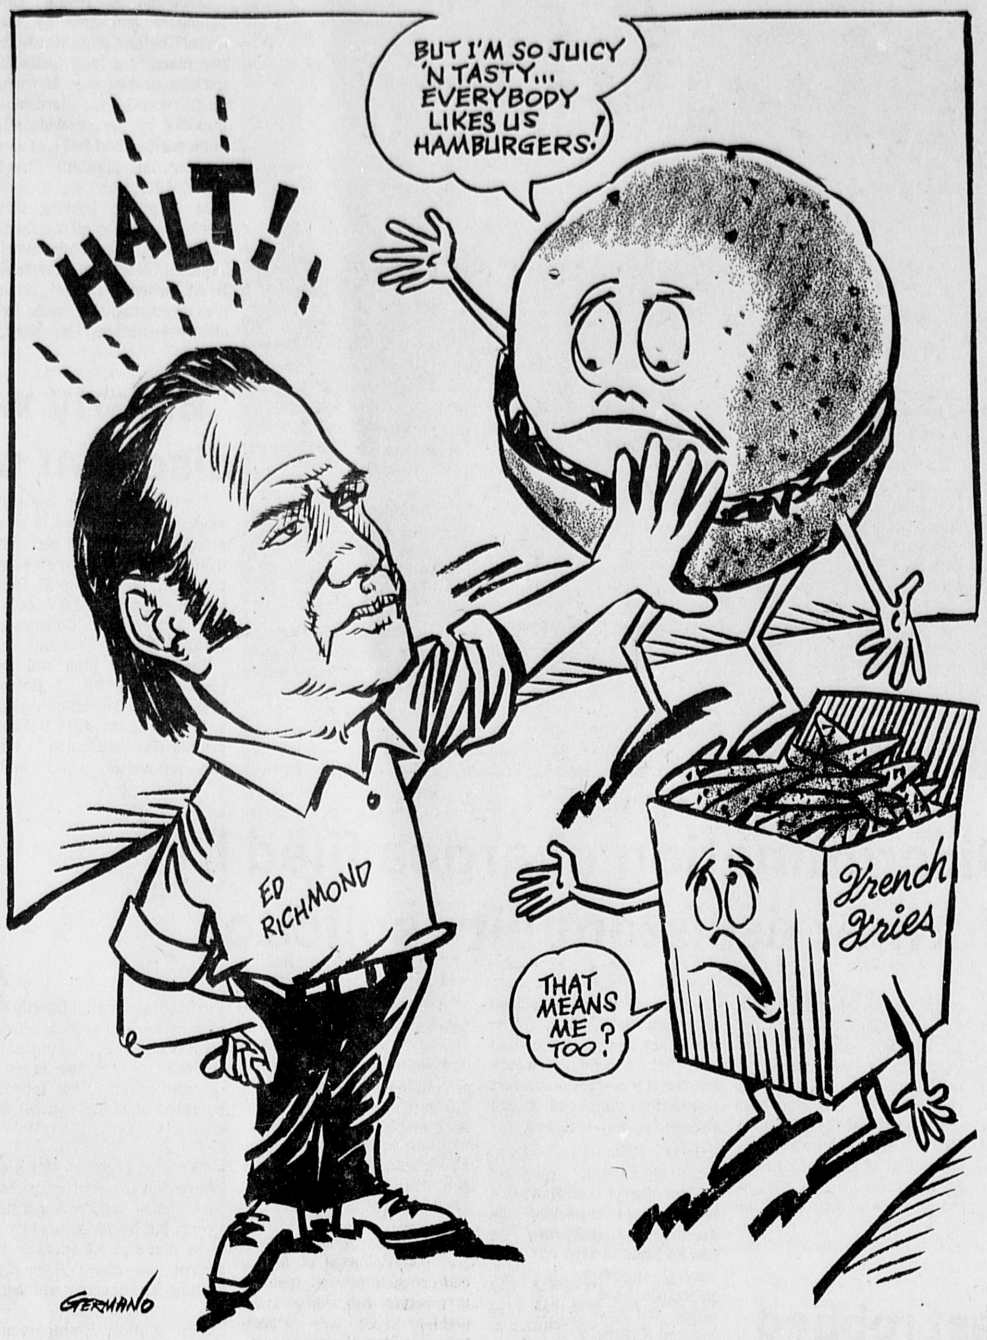

In fact, it seems that the only persons who have to concern themselves about the law are those close to President Nixon. Senator Hubert H. Humphry and Congressman Wilbur Mills recently were requested to appear before the Watergate Committee for questioning concerning alleged illegal campaign contributions. They ended that probe by flatly refusing to submit to interrogation.

When Edward W. Brooke was elected U.S. Senator, he pledged that he would represent all the people in Massachusetts. He could start doing that by instructing his friend, Albert Gammal, to cooperate with either the State or the City of Boston by turning over the Boston Naval Shipyard at no cost.

After all, we are supposed to be friends, not enemies. Gammal could be thrown out on his ear a little more than two years from now, and possibly sooner. Meanwhile, some of the people in the Sargent camp might blow the whistle on him for his illegal politicing.

On Safari: II

By CYNTHIA BLACK

When I commented two weeks ago that we could probably all call to mind a spot in Newton where the grass appears to be in charge of its own destiny (namely to keep right on growing), someone suggested I take a look at that idyllic little corner of green space called Crystal Lake Park on Lake Avenue in Newton Highlands.

And the charming scene below demonstrates that the cool shade of the trees is on the verge of being eclipsed by the even shadier grass.

The person I spoke to recalled that in years past, Crystal Lake Park, which really is a delightful place to spend a quiet afternoon, was indeed regularly maintained. This is hardly this case now.

Completely Black

Unless you're at least four feet tall, I would not recommend you take it into your head to sit on the placid banks of Crystal Lake. If you have hay fever, you'd better avoid this place completely.

We're going to continue our "safari" until we are assured that a citywide timetable has been established for maintenance of these areas.

I invite you to call me if you are aware of an area like this elsewhere in the city. We'll be there to take a picture and will keep it up until the embarrassment gets to City Hall.

Political Highlights

By JAMES G. COLBERT

State GOP managed in very sloppy fashion

It is absolutely incredible that the Republican party in Massachusetts is managed so sloppily that no one obtained the necessary nomination signatures to place on the Sept. 10 prijary ballot the names of the persons who had been drafted to stand as candidates for State Treasurer and State Auditor

This indicates the state of confusion and disorganization into which the GOP in Massachusetts has sunk. It also points up one of the reasons Governor Francis W. Sargent may be unable to gain sufficient new support to escape defeat next November.

If Sarge should be toppled by a narrow margin in the final election, the cause of his downfall may well be traced to his failure to have a complete supporting cast behind him.

Ms. Erna Ballentine of Roxbury and Charles Geer of Cambridge certainly are no powerhouse vote-getters. But their names on the ballot might just draw out some people who otherwise wouldn't bother to go to their polling places.

It will be the first time in all the years this writer has been covering politics that one of the two major parties failed to field a complete state ticket.

Theoretically, Ms. Balantine and Mr. Geer could get their names on the November ballot by polling 10,000 "sticker" or write-in votes apiece in the September primary.

But that is a difficult undertaking, and Governor Sargent's office obviously is not well enough organized to excute it. Geer, clearly disgusted with the bungling by the GOP high command, pointed out there was no way he could collect 10,000 valid signatures in the short period available to him and added he will not run as a write-in candidate in the primary.

Ordinarily, the task of collecting nomination signatures for a candidate endorsed by the unofficial Republican State Convention might br performed by the Republican State Committee.

But relations between the Governor and the official GOP state organization aren't all that good. Ten State Committee members didn't even bother to show up for the unofficial convention which the State Committee itself ordered and scheduled.

Sombody undoubtedly would be fired if this happened in the administration of almost any other Governor than Francis Sargent. But the evidence is that Sarge himself was at least partly responsible for the blunder of monumental proportions.

Governor Sargent has been immersed in his political problems since the polls showed him trailing both Attorney General Quinn and former State Representative Michael Dukakis, and he has not been an effective leader.

Political observers expected that Sarge would launch a campaign to raise his fallen political fortunes and boost his political stock, but he hasn't done that. He certainly does not act like the Francis Sargent of four years ago.

Persons in the Governor's office, in their efforts to explain away the failure to obtain nomination signatures for Erna Ballantine and Charles Geer have offered a number of reasons and alibis for the unbelievable bungle.

One explanation was that for the last 20 years the names of candidates endorsed by the Republican State Convention automatically went on the primary ballot with no signatures required. The trouble with that excuse is that they didn't forget to collect signatures for Sarge.

The truth seems to be that Governor Sargent and his aides and advisers have been in almost a state of shock as a result of recent developments, have been concentrating almost entirely on what to do about Sarge's problems and have neglected other matters. This has placed them in even deeper political trouble and made them look somewhat silly. So far they aave defeated their own purposes.

Drinan facing tough final election fight

Democratic politicians in the fourth congressional district were preparing for a knock-down, brusing primary battle between Congressman Robert F. Drinan of Newton and State Representative Jon Totenberg of Brookline wheniRotenberg suddenly changed his mind and decided to stand against Father Drinan as an independent candidate in the final November election.

That gives Congressman Drinan a free ride in the Sept. 10 primary because other Democrats who expected Rotenberg would challenge Drinan remained out of the contest.

But it sets up a tough final election fight for Congressman Drinan who will be opposed in a three-way clash by a strong independent in Rotenberg and a sturdy Republican in former Congressman Laurence Curtis of Brookline.

Drinan and Rotenberg are both liberal Democrats. Rotenberg up to now has centered most of his fire on Father Drinan, describing him as a "one-issue Congressman," (impeachment being Drinan's sole issue) and charging that Father Drinan has been an ineffective Congressman who has done practically nothing for his district during his four years on Capitol Hill.

Rotenberg charges that Drinan has done nothing in a four-year span to bring any new industries into his district or to help protect those it already has. By contrast he points to his own record of accomplishment on Beacon Hill for his legislative district and its residents.

Congressman Drinan and Representative Rotenberg are both Democrats. If they cut up the Democratic vote in the final election, as they almost certainly will, former Congressman Curtis, a tested veteran of the political wars, might just slip in between them.

Drinan, Rotenberg and Curtis presumably will coast through the warm summer weeks, when it is difficult to arouse the interest or attract the attention of the voters, and take to the hustings immediately after the Sept. 10 primary.

Congressman Drinan is a member of the House Judiciary Committee which has been hearing evidence on the impeachment of President Nixon.

He has been called upon to disqualify himself from voting on impeachment because he filed a resolution seeking the impeachment of Nixon more than a year ago, and he was demanding that Nixon resign before any evidence was submitted to the Judiciary Committee.

One of those who claimed Father Drinan has prejudged the impeachment case was a fellow Jesuit priest, Father John McLaughlin, who works as a speech-writer for President Nixon.

During a speech while on a visit to Boston, Father McLaughlin, who is as colorful and political as Father Drinan, told an audience that if President Nixon walked on water, as Christ did,iTime and Newsweek magazines would headline the story on the feat: "Nixon Can't Swim."

Newton and Brookline will be two of the political battlefields in the three-way fight shaping up between Drinan, Rotenberg and Curtis. Both Republican communities only a few years ago.

Political analysts believe Rotenberg may be able to carry Brookline but that Father Drinan probably can hold Newton. Curtis for 10 years represented both Newton and Brookline in Congress. He provided outstanding service for his district and still has a substantial following in both communities.

Their battle could develop into one of the most interesting contests in Massachusetts for a seat in Congress. It will be waged in a sprawling district which extends from Newton and Brookline out toward central Massachusetts and takes in communities where there still is some public resentment against Congressman Drinan because he toppled the late Congressman Philip J. Philbin in the Democratic primary four years ago.

Margaret M. Heckler's position on abortion

Congresswoman Margaret M. Heckler of Wellesley, one of the nation's leaders in the fight for equal rights and recognition for women, is opposed to abortions under most circumstances.

A Catholic, Mrs. Heckler would allow abortions only in cases of rape or physical or mental illness.

A law now in effect, which resulted from a bill she sponsored, gives hospital employees the right to refuse to participate in abortions and allows hospitals to decline to perform abortions for religious reasons.

This is how Congresswoman Heckler states her position on the abortion issue:

"Based on my philosophy, my religion and my personal conviction, I am a firm believer in the right to life. Fgr this reason, last year I authored legislation to protect the right of the individual not to participate in an abortion, and the right of hospitals and other health care institutions to refuse to perform an abortion for religious reasons.

"I received great support in Congress for this measure, and am pleased to report that this is now enacted into law.

"I feel abortion procedures would be justified only in cases of rape or physical or mental illness. I will continue to vote on this issue according to my stated philosophical position."

Swimming tests

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to Kermit Cole's letter about Crystal Lake.

I agree with everything he said. I am 12 and have been passing the "tests" since I was 10, yet this year I took the test and didn't make it. I took the test again with a different person and made it. This proves that each person does it differently which doesn't seem fair.

I also resent the fact that we have to take the "test" every day we go there.

What Kermit said about them not watching is true. I went with some friends and the "lifeguard" talked while they took the "test" and then said they didn't pass.

Once I did it three times in a row since the "lifeguard" wasn't looking and then she said I wasn't strong enough. I told her I don't see why I shouldn't make it since I did before and she said "okay."

I also agree that it is impossible to swim in the "shallow end" because it is up to my knees.

One thing I suggest is that they give cards with your name and permit number that say you passed the test in 1974 and you can swim that year and not need to take the test until 1975.

Well-kept secret

To the editor:

One of the best kept secrets in Newton this summer has been the non-lighting of the Newton South tennis courts on weekends.

There was much ado over fees, family memberships, guests, etc., but no one even mentioned evening tennis in Newton was only Monday through Friday.

My husband, because of the nature of his work, frequently finds it impossible to play tennis on week nights. Sin e we have a family membership, why can't we play Saturday and-or Sunday nights? We did at the high school this past winter.

There are many others who feel as we do. I suggest the lights go on again—seven nights a week.

Urge land acquisition

(Editor's note: This letter was sent to the mayor, three Ward 4 aldermen, conservation officials and this newspaper.)

Dear Mayor Mann:

At its meeting this week, the Auburndale Community Association (ACA) executive board reviewed the status of the open land at Norumbega and on Staniford Street and the report of the Newton Conservators, "Recommendations for Open Space in Newton—A Report to Our City from the Open Space Committee of the Newton Conservators, June, 1974."

We noted that the Conservators' report recommends that both the Staniford Street land and the Norumbega parcel (all 17 acres) be given status for priority acquisition by the city.

Specifically, the report ranked Norumbega as Number 1 for acquisition under "conservation lands."

Clearly, the Newton Conservators feel that it is very important for the city to acquire both of these parcels and the ACA Board voted unanimously to endorse the Conservators' recommendations. We hope you will do what you can to have the city take action in these areas.

Allyson Edmonston,
Corresponding Secretary
Auburndale Community Assn.

A walk in the woods

To the Editor:

On my walking trips through Newton woods, I have used the trails mentioned in your article for bicyclists.

But not all trails are equally accessible to pedestrians as they are to bicyclists. One such being the lengthy stretch of woods between Newton Centre and Chestnut Hill MBTA stations on both sides of the Riverside line tracks.

I've not been able to locate any such trails. Such a trail would afford much pleasure to nature lovers and is worth serious consideration.

Incidentally, the installations of the new fences add another deterrent to such a trail, especially if it prevents gates from passing over from one side to the other.

Kelley on campaigning

Dear Editor:

It has been reported that I am a candidate for the Democratic nomination for state representative from the Nineteenth Middlesex District.

I personally did collect over 200 valid signatures allowing my name to be placed on the ballot. I took the opportunity of collecting signatures to talk with the people of the district and find out what they thought and felt.

I believe that political campaigns are a healthy part of the Democratic process. They serve to bring elected officials back to the people, where they can explain, defend, or advocate the positions they have taken while in office. Regardless of the philosophical or idealogical position of the elected official, they must remember that the office belongs to the people, not its temporary occupants.

There is danger to our system of government which transcends liberal or conservative beliefs. It is when elected officials go unchecked or unchallenged and no longer feel responsible to the people. Richard Nixon has demonstrated the danger present when an elected official attempts to deny the legitimacy of an opponent.

A challenge for our political parties is their ability to draw talented, concerned young people back into politics. The scars of Watergate and the Vietnam War have left many with deep misgivings and suspicions over the ability of the system to respond effectively to the will of the people.

Only when the young are attracted to work within that system will politics become a respected and honorable profession. The deep emotions of the demonstrations against the war must be translated into political advocacy.

I am pleased to say that in my brief campaigning I found the people of the district responsive and encouraging to my candidacy. It was better that I showed ambition rather than apathy. However, at this time the demands of a campaign were greater than what I could meet on limited resources. I therefore did not file my nomination papers with the Secretary of State and my name will not appear on the September ballot. I wish to thank everyone who signed my nomination papers and those who promised support. I look forward to continue working to make the Commonwealth of Massachusetts a better place in which to live.

Levine explains

To the Editor:

After two postponements by Alderman David W. Jackson, the Recreation Commission was happy to finally have a meeting with the City Planning Committees.

It wasn't until Tuesday, June 25, that the members of the Commission and Commissioner Penney, who were at the Capital Improvement hearing, learned of the meeting with the City Planning Committee on June 27.

When the Recreation Commission members were called on the 26th and informed of the meeting on the 27th, it was found that only two members could go. The others had prior committments and were unable to attend on one day notice.

The Recreation Commissioner then informed the members of the Commission that he was cancelling the meeting and, informed the Clerk of the Board.

Of the two members who attended, one was asked to come by Ald. Susan Schur, and the other didn't learn of the cancellation as it was impossible to reach that person by telephone.

I have tried, since March, to arrange the combined meeting as the Recreation Commission was most desirious of holding this meeting. At no time did the clerk's office, inform the Recreation Commission of the meeting on the 27th, only the one on the 25th.

The Recreation Commission is holding a special public meeting the week of July 22nd, at which time, budgetary matters and Capital Improvements will be discussed.

The Recreation Commission feels that it is unjust to publicly censure them for not attending a meeting that they knew nothing about until a day before and which was subsequently called off.

Dr. Burton D. Levine,
Chairman
Newton Recreation Commission

Applauds Housing Authority

To the Editor:

Congratulations to the community and the Newton Housing Authority on Wednesday's ground breaking for its first 20 units of low income family housing. The city benefits because of the superb teamwork that makes this possible.

As Housing Authority Chairman James A. Miller put it: "The Beaconwood Development is the result of a truly cooperative and participatory process in the City of Newton, and would not have been possible without the active commitment and support of Mayor Mann, the Newton Board of Aldermen and private groups . . ."

Let's hope we see more of such productive teamwork!

US grant to senior center

Mayor Theodore D. Mann and Undersecretary Richard Rogers of the Commonwealth's Department of Elder Affairs have announced that the city of Newton has received a $14,650 grant from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

These funds, allocated under Title III of the Older Americans Act, will be used to staff and maintain the Newtonville Senior Citizen Drop-In Center, which was opened last week, and provide for the opening of another center in the course of the year.

"These funds comprise 75 percent of the center's operating budget," Mayor Mann said. "The city of Newton has matched the federal grant with $7,350 of municipal funds. This worthwhile commitment will provide invaluable services for the senior citizens of Newton."

In awarding the grant, Undersecretary Rogers said, "This beautiful project will serve as a model for the rest of the state. I am extremely pleased that the department was able to facilitate the awarding of these funds."

Ms. Becker graduates

Sandra Ann Becker, daughter of Joseph Becker of Newton and Mrs. Pauline Hesdoerffer of Framingham, has graduated from the University fo Massachusetts in Amherst.

An honor student for four years, she graduated magna cum laude, Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Kappa Phi.

She intends to pursue a literary career.

KENNIE Y. KWONG of 1022 Boylston St., Newton Highlands, has received his bachelor's degree from the Lowell Institute of Technology College of Engineering.

Aug. 13 last day to register

Unregistered citizens are reminded by State Secretary John F.X. Davoren, chief election officer of the Commonwealth, that they have less than one month in which to get their names on the voting rolls, if they wish to participate in the Sept. 10 state primary.

Tuesday, Aug. 13, is the final day for all eligible Massachusetts residents to sign up as voters in their respective communities.

In order to help citizens become better acquainted with changes in the voting laws, the Elections Division has published a number of pamphlets on registration, voting and absentee balloting. Free copies of this voter information are available in the State Elections Division by appearing in person or writing for a copy.

The latest available figures for Massachusetts show a total of 2,961,423 voters on the rolls in the 351 cities and towns. Of this number, there are 1,296,952 Democrats, 508,505 Republicans and 1,155,966 not enrolled in either major party.

BONOS BEGIN PROCEED-INGS

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) — Divorce proceedings began in Superior Court Tuesday for entertainers Sonny and Cher Bono.

The singing and comedy team separated earlier this year, ending a successful television and record partnership.

Lawyers for Bono, 39, and Cher, 28, argued before Judge Goscoe Farley over division of their property, including their Holmby Hills, Calif., mansion, and custody of their daughter, Chastity, 4. Cher asked for sole custody, Sonny for joint custody.

GRIFFIN GOING HOME

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Television talk show host Merv Griffin, 49, hospitalized six days ago with mild pneumonia blamed on exhaustion, plans to go home today and start work again on Monday.

Griffin's hospitalization coincided with the temporary absence of another TV talk show host, Johnny Carson of "The Tonight Show." Carson, a physical fitness devotee, fell off a slantboard while exercising at home Monday and hurt his head and back.

Books

The Snake on the Grave, by George Beare. (Houghton, Mifflin. $5.95) A book stuffed with the usual ingredients of a thriller but set forth in such lively fashion the plot is like a string of exploding firecrackers. An ex-convict, out of jail after stealing paintings, is threatened with tte death of his family unless he reveals their location. A friend comes to the rescue in a town in the south of France. Highly enjoyable mystery.

Captain, by Peter Brent. (Saturday Review, $12.50) Here is an adventure the texture of which is so removed from today's electronic-plastic world it's like a breath of cool, country air. Robert Scott had successfully explored the Antarctic in 1902-04 and then returned to fulfill his dream — to reach the South Pole. He was beaten by a Norwegian team and died 11 miles from a food depot. A romantic zinger. Profusely illustrated.

Nature's Ways

By WAYNE HANLEY
Mass. Audubon Society

The current famine in Africa will hit U.S. Birds rather hard next winter.

It's the old story about any single thing on earth being attached to everything else. John Muir generally is credited with expressing that entanglement theory. But Adam must have been the first to notice it.

At this point in summer, it would appear that wild bird feed mixtures will cost about 50 percent more next winter than they did last winter.

A few specialty seeds may be unobtainable. Thistle seed, for instance, will be scarce. The thistle seed available next winter already is in the United States. Ethiopia which produces the seed has placed an embargo on all shipments. The seed is being pressed for edible oils, needed to combat famine in that nation.

Indeed, bird feed buyers will be competing against the same economic forces which have boosted the price of premium margarines almost to butter prices.

Sunflower seeds, for instance, are pressed for margarine. With a reduced African crop on the market, manufacturers will bid up the price on domestic sunflower seeds in buying to fill their needs.

Peanut hearts, which several years ago were thrown away but later became an ingredient of wild bird feed mixtures, will be difficlut to obtain. Much of the peanut-based cooking oils now come from peanut hearts.

That old standby, millet - the little round seeds in most bird feed mixtures - seems to be in good supply. The main domestic millet source is the Dakotas and the crop appears to be good. A little more expensive, of course, but ample.

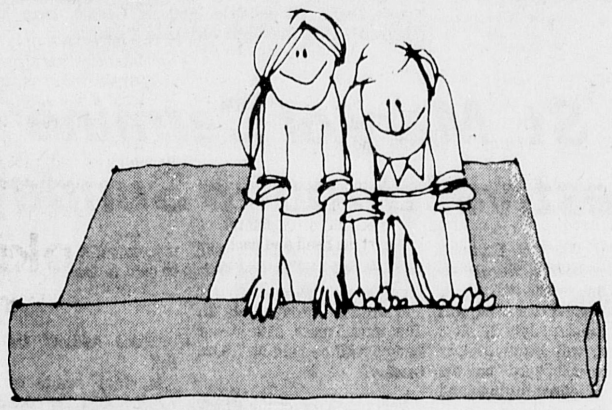

Hemp seed has tripled in price. Buckwheat, that favorite of mourning doves, also has tripled. The buckwheat price has been affected by the floods last year in the Mississippi Valley which wiped out much of the crop.

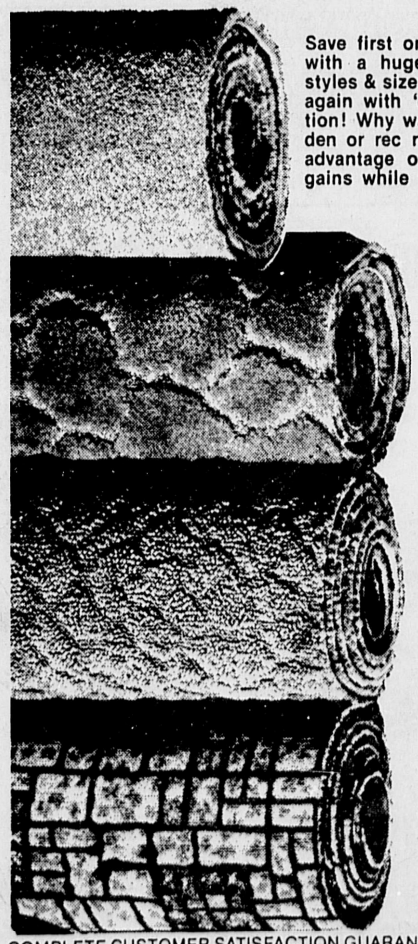

But there's good news, too. Cracked corn should be in good supply and its price has remained comparatively stable. In the search in recent years for more exotic bird food, birders generally have overlooked the value of plebian corn. Cracked corn not only serves the needs of most seed-eating birds but also is the favored food for many, including blue jays and cardinals.

In addition to the scarcity of some seeds, the general economic situation has affected bird feed prices. Inflation, of course, catches grower and buyer alike. At the same time, freight rates and surcharges are rising, and the ingredients of bird feed mixtures usually make the long trip from west to east in carload lots.

a determination by the Board of Aldermen that the establishment is appropriate in a given location and on other considerations.

The ordinance is up for a vote by the Cambridge City Council later this month. The ordinance arose when a group of citizens fought McDonald's entry into Central Square and lost.

At tonight's meeting of the Land Use Committee the former owner of the building, Philip Bram, is expected to appear, as well as a representative of McDonald's.

the parcel as requested by the developer to aid in financing the project, it was discovered that the parking setback does not conform to the zoning code.

Now the plans must go before the planning board and the zoning board for approval.

On a positive note, it now appears that the Lower Falls Post Office will be able to remain in its present location and not suffer eviction.

According to Donald Budge, president of the Lower Falls Improvement Association, the post office's landlord, the Lower Falls Wine Company "acceded to pressure by the residents to let the post office stay."

Housing project

project had been twice rejected by the Department of Community Affairs because the per unit cost was too high. However, intervention on the part of Mayor Mann, Chairman James Miller and former chairman, Anthony Medaglia kept it alive. The three took their case to Governor Sargent.

As a result, the DCA came up with a compromise plan asking Newton to pay up to $150,000 for site development while it absorbed the cost of the land, estimated at $87,000. The land was formerly owned by the Ciccone Brothers and taken by the NHA by eminent domain.

The Board of Aldermen akayed the money according to Eliot Cohen to "show good faith in wanting low income housing built in Newton." Cohen who also spoke at the groundbreaking said that the construction on Beaconwood Road put "all on record to reflect the fulfillment of our commitment to low income housing."

Miller praised the efforts of "the Newton Board of Aldermen, the League of Women Voters and the Newton Committee for Fair Housing and Equal Rights.

Also attending the groundbreaking were authority members, Donna Berman, vice chairman; Donald Ferrari, Leo Karas and Henry Wilson. Also in attendance were former alderwoman Adelaide Ball, Alderman Robert Tennant, Alderman Michael Lipoff, Alderwoman Susan Schur, City Planning Director Charles Thomas and Assistant City Solicitor Jason Rosenberg.

Union Power Making Itself Felt in East Europe

The proletariat isn't supposed to strike in Communist-ruled countries, but workers are beginning to get the idea of union power.

Anti-freeze in short supply

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Antifreeze may be in short supply this winter, and you and your Beau Brummell friends are to blame.

The problem is that ethylene glycol used in making antifreeze also is used in making polyester fabrics, such as the popular double-knits.

And right now the ethylene glycol industry finds it more profitable to channel available supplies into wearing apparel. Here's a quote that sums up the situation beautifully.

"It's really a consumer decision...The consumer decides whether he wants to wear the ethylene glycol on his back or pour it into his car radiator."

That quote, incidentally, did not come from Herbert Stein, President Nixon's economic adviser, who recently blamed inflation on the public's unwillingness to accept tax increases.

It came from a spokesman from a large chemical corporation, who explained that in opting for the higher profits in polyesters "the company is just responding to consumer demands."

It does no good to protest that you didn't know that buying a new blue double-knit blazer would cause your car to freeze up this winter.

You should have been listening closer when the salesman sold you the garment.

Like the other day I went into a clothing store to try on a pair of plaid slacks that were on sale for $11.90.

I had a tough time choosing between the slacks and the antifreeze. What I did finally was take the slacks and also buy a wool blanket which I plan to wrap around my car's engine on cold nights this winter.

It's all a part of better living through chemistry.

Festival

The annual St. Mary of Carmine Society festival is being held this week. Pictured here with the statue that is carried in the procession are (from left): Naz Gentile, a missionary priest; Nunzio Leone, Nino Leone, Anthony Gentile, Dom Messina (kneeling), Dom Macgrillo and Andrew Magni.

St. Mary of Carmine festival through Sunday

The St. Mary of Carmine Society is holding its annual festival this week.

The annual procession will be held Sunday, July 21, at 2 p.m. and will begin in Our Lady's school yard on the corner of Washington and Adams streets.

The procession, which is approximately two hours long, will wind its way through the streets of Nonantum and end at Hawthorne Park. The Italian Colonial Band of Lawrence, the Napoli Band of Boston, and many societies and fraternal organizations.

The annual Tridium will begin at 7:30 p.m. tonight, July 18, in Our Lady's upper church and will run through July 21. The annual mass, also at Our Lady's, will be held at 7 a.m. Sunday.

This year, through the efforts of the festival committee, a five-day carnival, which began last night, July 17, is being held. On Sunday night, the Napoli Band will give concerts starting at 8 and 10:30 p.m. There will also be a candlelight procession from the park to Our Lady's and after the procession, a benediction will be said in the upper church.

Rock'n Suzi

If you like rock 'n' roll, you'll love Suzi Quatro.

She realizes the recurring nightmare of every suburban mother with a tomboy daughter. Suzi comes out on stage in black leather with an enormous Les Paul Gibson bass slung on her hip, plants her feet wide apart and rips into a song with the kind of violence traditional to Detroit rock 'n' rollers.

Born and raised in the Motor City, Suzi headed an all-girl rock band called The Pleasure Seekers in 1965, when she was just 15. The band evolved into Cradle and for a while included Jerry Nolan (now of the New York Dolls) on drums.

In 1971, she moved to London and—like so many American musicians—finally made it in Britain and Europe, before most folks on this side of the Atlantic had even heard of her.

Though her first U.S. tour is now history, that situation hasn't changed much; Suzi is still a far bigger star in Europe than in her homeland. But there is a legitimate and growing "cult" interest in her music.

Suzi's band looks like a gang of drunken English street hoods and Suzi tries (rather less successfully) to look like one of them. Faced with an unresponsive audience, her Roller Derby Queen image tends to crumble a bit around the edges, the lowlevel acrobatics seeming a little forced.

The band is raw and raunchy, Suzi's voice and bass lines perfect. Her music is the most basic, direct kind of rock, with a healthy shot of "what's it to ya" enthusiasm. She can make you laugh at yourself, just by noticing how much you're enjoying it.

Suzi's debut American album, appropriately titled "Suzi Quatro" (Bell 1302), is for folks who like to roll up the rug at parties—non-stop boogie, starting with her big European hi, "48 Crash," and finishing with the classic "Shakin' All Over." It's a lot of fun, which is as much as you can ask of rock 'n' roll anyway.

—— David Bowie returns for another U.S. tour starting in June. Billed as "an extensive series of theatrical presentations," the tour coincides with release of Bowie's upcoming LP, "Diamond Dogs"...Genesis, in New York for two nights at the Academy of Music, had their guitars stolen sometime between the first night's performance and the second. The thieves contacted the band and demanded a big "ransom" for the instruments, which included a special custom double-necked bass. So they rented some new guitars and went on for the show, one day late...the American Red Cross surveyed high school students and decided Grand Funk Railroad is the nation's most influential band, so they got the all-American boys to roll up their sleeves and give some blood in hopes of attracting more young donors.

Recreation notes

Children's concert slated for Mason-Rice July 23

ARTS IN THE PARKS

The Newton Recreation Department's summer Arts in the Parks Program is reportedly being well accepted with good attendance at many varied events.

A special children's concert by a string quartet has been scheduled for the Mason-Rice School at 10 a.m. on Tuesday, July 23. The concert is sponsored by the Newton Recreation Department in conjunction with the creative arts program of the Newton School department. The program will be an educational experience for children. String instruments will be demonstrated in solo playing as well as in ensemble work. Audience participation will be encouraged in a question and answer period.

Selections will include music from "Fiddler on the Roof," "Hair," and other current popular pieces. Students from creative arts classes will participate. The program is for elementary school children six to 12 years of age.

PRINTMAKING CLASSES

There are still a few openings in the printmaking classes held at the Hyde School, Tuesday mornings at 9:30. Any interested citizens should contact the instructor, Maxine Sorokin, at 965-0661.

CHILDREN'S DANCE CLASS

A children's dance class is being formed. It will be held at the Williams School, Mondays, at 9:30 a.m. The class is geared to children seven to 12. People may contact instructor Amy Morris at 244-6229 for registration information.

NEEDLEPOINT CLINIC

A needlepoint clinic being conducted at Cabot Park on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. will continue through Aug. 1. Interested Newton residents may contact the Recreation Department at 969-3171, or go directly to the class at Cabot Park.

FUTURE PROGRAMS

On July 30, at 2 p.m., Eleanor Boyland will present a demonstration and puppet show at the Emerson School.

The Garden City Squares, led by Irving Park, will present a square dance program at the Auburndale Playground on July 28, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The National Children's Theatre of Boston will present the first of two performances of "Mirror Man" at Burr Park on July 24. Curtain time is 1 p.m. The second performance will be at Newton Centre Playground on Aug. 7 at the same time.

The Children's Illustrations Workshop, conducted by David White, will be held at the Franklin SchoolJuly 25, at 10 a.m. Over 50 children attended the first workshop held at Newton Centre last week.

The summer film program will continue July 24th with "Classics Nights" at the Memorial School. This program will be held in the school and will begin at 7:30 p.m. The films will be "The Railroader" and "Orphans of the Storm."

PLAYGROUND TENNIS TOURNEY

Plans are being completed for the Recreation Department's annual Playground Tennis Tournament. It will be held at the Newton North High School courts on Wednesday, Aug. 7, beginning at 9:30 a.m.

There will be two divisions, Midgets, 10, 11 and 12 year olds, and Juniors, 13, 14 and 15 year olds. The tourney is open to boys and girls.

No player holding a New England Lawn Tennis Association ranking or has won any of their sanctioned tournaments will be eligible. Any boy or girl, except for those to whom the restriction applies, may sign up with tennis instructors Leon Geller of Steve Freeman on days lessons are given at their playground, or with their playground leader, or they may report at the North High courts on the morning of the tournament. Trophies will be awarded the winners and runners-up.

ADULT TENNIS TOURNEY

A tennis tournament for men and women is being planned for the first part of August. The NELTA restriction also applies to the adults. These tournaments are held for the benefit of Newton residents only.

SOFTBALL LEAGUE

Current standings in the Newton Recreation Department's Softball League are: American "A", Silver Lake Dodge, 31-2; Troubadour, Bryant Club and Art Carroll, all 11-5. American "B", Elks, 12-2; Oak Hill, 12-4; Post 24, 11-4 and Tenneco, 10-6. American "C", St. Regis, last year's champions, 13-3; Newton Centre Playground, 11-4; Heshal Club, 10-4 and the Stones, 10-5.

HULA HOOP AND FRISBEE

The city championships for hula hoop and frisbee competition will be held at Dickinson Stadium, Newtonville, Thursday, July 18. The hula hoop champions from Newton's playgrounds will begin their competition at 10 a.m. and the frisbee championships will get underway at 2 p.m.

Playground leaders will submit the names of their champions by Tuesday, July 16. These winners will report to Newton North High School on July 18.

Backman cited for community health service

The Metropolitan Boston Consumer Health Council has honored Sen. Jack H. Backman (D. Brookline), chairman of the Joint Committee on Social Welfare, "for outstanding service in community health" at their annual awards banquet.

In presenting the award, the council said, "Sen. Backman's involvement in human needs and community services is well known. He has continually sponsored progressive legislation that has shown sincere concern for the right to human dignity of all people.

"Some efforts directed to this cause are his legislation leadership in authoring and sponsiring the statute which created a minimum adequate income for the blind, elderly and disabled; his actions as the prime archietct of the "Office for Children" statute to provide day care and early development opportunities for children; and his legislation to reform the penal laws of Massachusetts and legislation to reduce MBTA fares for the elderly.

Cole P. Dodge with Ethopian children

Oxfam director visits famine zone

Cole P. Dodge, projects director of Oxfam-America, the international development agency with headquarters in Newton, returned last week from an intensive tour of the famine zone of Ethopia with the nes that the rains fave finally come to the provinces of Tigre and Wollo.

"The worst of the famine is probably over," Dodge said, "but the continuing poverty of the people of Ethiopia remains a disaster of even larger proportions."

A veteran of both the Biafran conflict in Nigeria, where he headed up a Quaker Relief team, and three years as a Peace Corps Volunteer in India, Dodge was appalled by the extent of poverty and the extreme need of the people living in northern Ethiopua.

Rain fell during most of the time he and Peter Oakley, Oxfam Field director, made their way by land rover through the rugged and raodless disaster area. Following relatively good "short rains" this spring, the moisture has generated a feeling of confidence and hope among the people they encountered. In the highland regions, teff (a sorghum of high proteim value unique to Ethiopia) looked good, and even on the arid plains of the eastern slope, agricultural plots have been planted in anticipation of the "long rains" which, it is hoped, will continue during the coming six weeks.

Asked about the effect of the current military take-over of Emperor Haile Selassie's troubled country and how the change in government may affect relief for famine victims and future development efforts, Dodge pointed out that communications are so limited and distances and terrain so formidable that "what happens in Addis Ababa means little too a destitute Afar nomad or a peasant farming on a terraced hillside."

The military take-over was, in fact, at least partially generated by the central government's lack of response and failure to alert the international community to the widespread starvation caused by the long drought in the northern provinces. The arrival of food, medical supplies and transport vehicles to the famine areas has added to the political unrest by placing unprecedented administrative burdens on the provincial governments, already besieged by an influx of starving refugees, Dodge pointed out.

He visited a program funded by Oxfam-America to provide gasoline and out-of-station allowances to drivers of emergency vehicles in a remote area of the drought zone. Food coming from the port of Aseb is now stored here, close to need, rather than in the capital city of Dessie.

This program is in line with Oxfam's goal, and one shared by provincial officials, to provide food to people in their villages, rather than in central feeding stations where problems are compounded by the necessity to furnish housing and medical care, plus the health and social problems arising from crowding and displacement. Getting the people back to the land where they can plant and care for crops and be provided with the seeds and draft animals being distributed by a number of internaotional agencies, is a priority.

Oxfam-America, an organization more interested in preventing famine than in sending relief after a disaster occurs, is now seeking continuing projects in the drought zone which will alleviate the compounding of circumstances which led to the deaths of an estimated 100,000 people (mostly children) in this area during the past year. Currently under study for possible funding is an integrated development program for Wollo and Tigre provinces being researched by a water resource engineer, an agriculturalist and a maternal-child health specialist.

Support for such long-term, comprehensive projects requires financial commitment well beyond the present capacities of Oxfam-America, whose headquarters at 474 Centre St. in Newton, field the four-year-old American version of the internationally respected British Oxfam organization.

"Such programs require serious financial commitment that goes beyond contributing after a disaster has already taken 100,000 lives," Dodge commented. "Oxfam's approach is to make grants before a disaster occurs. The sad thing about very poor people in developing countries is that every misfortune becomes a disaster. When you're malnourished to start with, further deprivation can easily mean death."

Travel

NEW YORK (UPI) — In the old days, he would have been called a courier. Now he is known as a tour escort.

The title may have changed but the basic duties have not, according to Jean Cheller.

"My primary assignment is to assure that every member of my tour group enjoys a worry-free vacation," said the Senior Tour Escort for American Express in an interview. s l

"And that means taking care of transportation, accommodations, sightseeing, luggage and any problems which may crop up." l sI know from personal experience how well he carries out his duties. He was the tour escort for our group of American travel writers visiting Thailand, Singapore and Indonesia as official guests.

Flies Around World

Cheller did admit there was one problem—a personal one—that he he has not been able to solve yet—"the clothing situad tionm"

"I have to travel light when I start out so I usually end up buying clothes I don't need when I get back," he said. "As a result, I have extra wardrobes stored in Paris, London and San Francisco."

Cheller spends nine months a year traveling with American Express escorted tour groups— "in peak seasons I may guide three or four tours in a row, flying around the world to meet each new group."

Does he do any traveling during his three-month holiday? Enjoys Cooking

"Not much," he said. "I like to spend my time off relaxing at home and visiting with friends."

"Home" to Cheller is Paris. London and San Francisco, in addition to being convenient storage points for his personal effects, are also his favorite foreign cities.

He enjoys swimming and cooking. s l

"I collect recipes from all over the world and write my own, too. One of the nice things about my job is that I have made friends in many countries and they're usually willing to lend their kitchens for culinary experiments."

Cheller already speaks French, German, English, Spanish and Italian, has learned some Arabic and is studying Japanese.

"When I can dream in a language—or grumble in it—I know I've learned it," he said.

Cheller's linguistic ability was put to use during World War II when he enlisted in the U. S. Army Air Corps Transport Command as a translator. After service in French Africa and Sicily, he went into the hotel business in Egypt. s

h Favors Prepaid Tours h

"I had wanderlust, and a friend suggested the travel field might be better for me," he said. "Ive been with American Express for 17 years."

Cheller said that the average escorted tour group ranges from 30 to 40 persons. However, he said he has on occasions guided groups as small as 10.

"Paradoxically, the larger groups are actually easier to deal with because people will often try to resolve their own problems," he said. "The smaller a groupn the more demanding it can be."

sCheller said he believed prepaid group tours could be the answer to Americans worried about the possible effects on the U.S. travel dollar by devaluation and inflation. He noted American Express guarantees the land prices on all its European programs.

There are about 600 men and women working as tour escorts around the world for the company, he said. Their ages, backgrounds and nationalities may vary but the basic qualifications are the same, he said.

What are the prime requisid tes?

"People will grumble at times, especially if the weather is bad, but you have to be patient and remember that they may be on a once-in-a-lifetime vacation and expect everything to be perfect. You have to deal with their problems tactfully," he said.

"But the best thing a tour guide can have is a keen sense of humor."

Teaching

Diane Palmeri (right), a registered nurse, instructs Vietnamese women in basic child care and hygiene at the Saigon nutrition center of My Friends' House Inc. Diane and her administrator husband, Tom, direct a Vietnamese staff in providing care to Vietnamese-American orphans and neighborhood children.

Newton-based agency aids Vietnamese orphans

My Friends' House, Inc., a world foundation for children based in Newton, is expanding its Saigon-based program of care for Vietnamese-American orphans, according too MFH Executive Director Sally Darby.

Operating a nutrition center for badly malnourished and diseased children, the foundation has begun proceedings to double its capacity in the fall to 100 with a second center.

The Vietnamese staff of the My Friends' House center were trained in child care, nutrition, and hygiene by an American nurse. The center takes in critically ill infants from nearby institutions and families, administers intensive medical and nutritional care, and returns them.

The nutrition center is one of only three such establishments in South Vietnam. It was established in response to the need for adequate child care facilities in that country.

The first response in South Vietnam had been the founding of more than 130 orphanages. The next step, according to Wells Kline, advisor to Senator Edward Kennedy, is for the American people to turn their concern too other child welfare programs like the MFH center.

The function of My Friends' House is to support the services of other agencies, and to provide care where none is available. Its staff has trained personnel in several orphanges, and it has restructured the diet of one orphange to include fruits, eggs, and meat.

MFH has recently initiated a daily feeding program for neighborhood children, and is oerating a weekly medical clinic on an outpatient basis.

"Disease is often rampant in South Vietnam," Mrs. Darby said. "People don't even get enough decent food to maintain a basic level of health. The children are highly susceptible to such diseases as whooping cough, hepatitis, typhoid, polio, and intestinal parasites. We hardly hear about such diseases in our own country anymore."

Estimates on the number of orphaned children in South Vietnam run as high as 700,000, with a possible 200,000 fathered by Americans. "We're talking about almost 5 per cent of the population of the entire country," Mrs. Darby noted. "That's the equivalent of more than 10 million such youngsters in our own country.

"The real tragedy is when we realize that half of the kids under five may die within a year," she said, quoting figures from the U.S. Walter Reed Army Research Institute. The death rate for the young is so high because of the lack of child care services. Can you imagine half the pre-schoolers in our community dying as horribly as most of these kids are?"

The need for the nutrition center of My Friends' House is underscored by the fact that orphanages are usually understaffed, sometimes with one nurse-aid to care for 100 small children. Since government support amounts to only pennies a day per child, most of the facilities can prepare only watery soups to feed the children. Toddlers are often roped together to keep them from wandering, and infants are continously left in their cribs.

In some orphanges, the death rate is as high as 80 per cent.

"Our short range goals are to save the lives of some of these young children," Mrs. Darby remarked. "By training people in caring for the types of nutritional and medical problems prevalent in South Vietnam, we exercise our long-range goals of extending our skills into the Saigon community."

Mrs. Darby heads an American staff of eight, only tow of whom are salaried. "It's heartwarming too see what people will do when they want too express their love in a concrete way."

She noted that most of their funds come from volunteer fund raising done by church, civic, and youth groups, and through donations from individuals.

She said that the organization welcomes volunteer work on any scale, and that it presently needs someone with typing skills to volunteer in the Newton office.

Mrs. Darby invites inquiries about the foundation to My Friends' House, 161 Auburn Street, Newton, Massachusetts, 02166. The telephone number is 965-2320.

Feds hike smuggling crackdown

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — The federal government has stepped up its offshore surveillance of the New England coast in a crackdown on smuggling of contraband ranging from drugs to frozen bull semen.

A U. S. Customs Patrol spokesman said Tuesday the effort involves boat patrols checking remote inlets, coves and lagoons from the Connecticut-New York line to the Maine-Canadian border. Maine alone has 3,500 miles of jagged shoreline.

"We'll patrol some areas never checked before," Regional Customs Patrol Director Robert E. Carroll said in a telephone interview from his Boston office.

Carroll said drugs make up the bulk of the illegal goods smuggled into New England, but the contraband includes gold coins, swordfish from Canada and bull semen for artifically inseminating cows.

"There are some wild things being smuggled these days," he said. "It can be anything that there are restrictions on, or that is produced in a foreign country that people don't want to pay customs duty on."

Limited customs patrol searches off New England have been under way for some time. The patrol said it would use two outboard motorboats and a 30-foot cruiser under the expanded program.

Carroll's assistant, Charles Hitchcock, said smuggling along New England waters appears to be increasing.

"We aren't able to tell at this point whether the dramatic increase is an actual occurance or is in part caused by the increased effort we're now putting into our research."

Across the Kitchen Counter

By RUTH LENSON

Thirsty? If there's one way to take the sizzle out of summer, it's with a tinkling tumbler filled to the brim with a thirst-quenching beverage.

About the most refreshing cooler you could conjure up is iced tea which never teases the parched palate. Did you know that tea as a beverage was discovered in the year 2737 B.C. Legend has it that the Chinese emperor, Shen N'ung, known throughout his land as "The Healer" for his discovery that by boiling water it could be made safe to drink, was strolling through his forest. Resting a moment, the emperor began to boil some water when a great puff of wind blew some leaves into the pot. The boiling leaves gave off such a delightful aroma that the emperor tasted the amber brew with the result that it pleased him so much that he christened the brew "tea" and issued an edict that everyone in the kingdom must drink the beverage.

There are some 3,000 varieties of tea which take their names from the districts where they grow. According to the process used, they are converted into one of three major types of tea: black, green or oolong.

Following are some unusual ways to quench that summer desire for a long cool drink. You'll find that summer refreshers take on a new flavor and interest when they begin with a base of pureed frozen fruit. Simply whirl the frozen fruit of your choice (strawberries, raspberries, blueberries, melon balls) with a complementary frozen juice concentrate, add plain or sparkling water and ice cubes, stir to blend and you have a cool refresher. For example:

RASPBERRY LEMONADE

1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen raspberries with syrup, partially thawed
2 cans (6 oz. ea.) frozen lemonade concentrate, thawed and undiluted
1 qt. plain or sparkling water
Ice cubes
Fresh mint

Combine raspberries and lemonade concentrate in a blender and whirl until smooth. Pour mixture through a strainer to remove seeds. Transfer to a 2½ qt. pitcher; add water and a few ice cubes; stir to blend. Serve over additional ice cubes in tall glasses. Garnish each with a sprig of fresh mint. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

NOTE: Iced tea or coffee will cloud up if stored in the refrigerator. To prepare good chilled tea or coffee, prepare it stronger than usual; cool to room temperature and pour over ice cubes. Any left over can be frozen in ice cube trays for use with more iced tea or coffee.

For perfect iced tea use 50 per cent more tea than used for making hot tea. For example: you would use 4 teabags to make 4 cups of hot tea; for 4 glasses of iced tea, you use 6 teabags. Here's an easy way to make 2 quarts, about 10 servings: 1. Bring 1 qt. freshly drawn cold water to a full rolling boil in a saucepan. 2. Remove from heat and immediately add one-third measuring cup loose tea or 15 teabags. 3. Stir, cover and let stand for 5 minutes. 4. Stir again and strain into a pitcher holding an additional quart of freshly drawn cold water. (If tea should "cloud," restore its amber-clear color by adding a little boiling water. Pour into ice-filled glasses and serve with lemon and sugar.

SPICED TEA CUBES IN LEMONADE

10 whole cloves
2 sticks cinnamon
1½ cups boiling water
4 tea bags or 4 tsps. loose tea
1½ cups cold water
fresh or frozen lemonade
Lemon slices

Combine cloves, cinnamon and boiling water. Reduce heat and simmer, covered for 5 minutes. Add tea. Steep 5 minutes. Strain. Add cold water. Pour into ice cube tray. Freeze until firm. To serve, put several ice tea cubes in tall glasses and add lemonade. Stir briskly. Garnish with fresh lemon slice. FRESH LEMONADE: For each serving, squeeze the juice from one lemon; add one to three tablespoons honey or sugar and ½ to ¾ cup cold water. Stir until well blended.

COLD BREAKFAST IN A GLASS: COFFEE CACKLE

1 cup milk, chilled
1 egg
1 teaspoon instant coffee
1 tablespoon maple flavored syrup

Combine all ingredients in shaker, glass jar, blender, or mixing bowl. Shake or beat to a froth or blend well at low speed. Pour into tall glass. Serve immediately. Serves 1.

PINEAPPLE SANGRIA

1 can (1 lb. 4 oz.) pineapple chunks in juice
1 cup sliced fresh strawberries
1 lemon, thinly sliced
1 bottle (4-5 quart) rose wine, chilled
2 bottles (12 oz. ea.) club soda, chilled
Mint leaves

In a large pitcher or punch bowl, combine pineapple chunks and all of the juice, strawberries and lemon. Add rose wine and soda. Garnish with mint leaves. Add ice cubes if desired. Makes 8-10 servings.

FRESH MELON PUNCH

1 medium sized honeydew melon
1 medium sized cantaloupe
½ cup fresh lemon juice
½ cup fresh lime juice
1 quart ginger ale

Peel, seed and finely dice melons. Puree melons by beating a small amount at a time in electric mixer or by blending in an electric blender. (Makes about 4 cups honeydew puree and 2½ cups cantaloupe puree). Stir in lemon and lime juices. Just before serving, add gingerale. Sweeten to taste. Serve in tall glass over ice cubes. Makes about 3 quarts punch.

FOUR WAYS FOR MAKING ICED COFFEE

QUICK: Make your coffee extra strength, using 1 coffee measure of coffee to 4 ounces of fresh cold water. Pour over ice cubes. The extra strength hot coffee compensates for the melting ice. PRECOOLED: Brew your coffee the regular way using 1 coffee measure of coffee to each 6 oz. cup of cold water. Cool no more than 3 hours in a tightly covered non-metal container. Pour over ice cubes. COFFEE CUBES: Make coffee cubes in the ice tray by freezing freshly brewed, regular strength coffee instead of water. Use instead of plain ice cubes, pouring hot, freshly brewed regular coffee over them. This gives the extra strength brew necessary for best results. INSTANT Mix about twice the usual amount of instant coffee, according to taste, with a little water in each tall glass (based on 12 oz. cooler-type glasses). Add ice cubes and fill with cold water.

CHOCOLATE FROST

2½ cups cold extra-strength coffee
5 tablespoons chocolate syrup
1 pint vanilla ice cream

Combine ingredients; blend with rotary beater or blender until smooth. Serve in tall glasses. Serves 4.

The following recipes were prize-winners in Transcript Newspaper's Barbecue Recipe Contest:

Mrs. Kurker's Barbecue Spareribs

Cut ribs in pieces. Arrange on shallow pan and cover with foil. Bake for 1 hour in a 375 degree oven and drain.
1 cup brown sugar
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1 teaspoon
1 teaspoon ginger
¼ cup soy sauce
½ cup water
1 can (8 oz.) crushed pineapple, undrained
¼ cup minced onions
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
one-third cup wine vinegar
1 tablespoon shredded orange peel
4 dashes Tobasco Sauce
Few drops red food coloring

Mix ingredients and cook over low heat. Stir constantly until mixture thickens slightly. Place ribs over coals and brush until well coated. Cook only until tender and brown. Delicious! Hint: Do not have coals too hot.

Mrs. Haig Merian's Shish-Kebab

1 leg of lamb
3 large onions, sliced lenthwise
1 clove garlic, crushed
½ cup red wine or wine vinegar
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 teaspoons crushed oregano

Bone and cube the lamb in 1-½ pieces, removing all the gristle and most of the fat. Add all the other ingredients and mix well. Marinate in the refrigerator overnight or at least four hours. Season the meat with salt and pepper just before cooking. Place meat on skewers and broil over a charcoal fire. Serve with the following:

Vegetable Side Dish

4 tomatoes
4 green peppers, quartered
1 eggplant

Place vegetables on separate skewers and broil over charcoal. Eggplant should be in chunks and brushed with oil or butter before cooking to prevent burning. Combine vegetables. Serve with rice pilaf for a delicious dinner.

Mrs. Cher Kuback's Barbecue Chicken Dinner

Sauce: ¼ cup honey
2 teaspoons salt
2 beef bouillon cubes
¾ cup water
¼ cup soy sauce
¼ cup catsup
Dash garlic salt
Chicken pieces (breasts, drumsticks, wings)

Combine all ingredients in a saucepan. Let boil one minute. Pour over chicken and let marinate at least 3 hours or overnight. Cook chicken over coals and baste with marinade.

Serve with: Curried Artichoke and Rice Salad and Onion Potatoes (recipes given).

Question: I recently bought a wok and have been doing quite a lot of Chinese cooking. I would like to make Chicken with Mushrooms (Mou Goo Gai Peen) and would appreciate the recipe if possible. Thank you very much.

Mrs. E.E., West Newton

Answer: The following recipe is quite good, serves two and may be doubled. I am quite sure you will enjoy it—from "The Easy Way to Chinese Cooking" by Beverly Lee.

CHICKEN WITH MUSHROOMS (MOU GOO GAI PEEN)

½ pound boned chicken breast
¾ cup Chinese cabbage
¼ cup bamboo shoots
5 water chestnuts
½ cup canned or fresh mushrooms
12 snow peas
1 wedge ginger size of quarter
2 teaspoons cornstarch mixed with 2 teaspoons water
Dash pepper
½ teaspoon monosodium glutamate
¼ teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup chicken stock or water
1 tablespoon sherry

Preparation: Bone breast and divide into thin uniform slices. Slice Chinese cabbage, bamboo shoots, water chestnuts and mushrooms if fresh ones are used. String snow peas and if very large cut in half, using a diagonal cut. Smash ginger. Mix cornstarch solution and add pepper, monosodium and sugar. Set beside pan.

Cooking: Using a high flame, heat pan and add 1 tablespoon of oil, ½ teaspoon of salt and ginger. Add Chinese cabbage, mushrooms, bamboo shoots, and water chestnuts. Stir for 30 seconds. Next add stock and cover for 2 minutes. Remove and set aside. Reheat pan and add remainder of oil and salt. Add chicken and flatten against sides of pan. Add sherry and cook for 1 minute or until color changes from pink to white. Turn over and cook other side until nearly done, add vegetables and snow peas. When stock reaches boil, add cornstarch solution and stir until thick. Serves 2.

Question: Oftentimes I am stuck with leftover chicken or turkey and though my family loves to pick away at the carcass, I would like to be able to get another meal out of the leftovers. Can you suggest an easy meal with leftovers the main attraction?

Mrs. G.P., Walpole

Answer: Left over chicken or turkey can indeed be made into a memorable main dish and the surprise in both the Chicken Fricassee recipe, as well as the baked bean recipe I am including, is canned applesauce! Enjoy:

SUPER CHICKEN FRICASSEE

Sliced, leftover chicken or turkey
2 cans (10½ oz. ea.) chicken gravy
1 can (16 oz.) applesauce
1 can (3 oz.) chopped broiled mushrooms drained
Hot baking powder biscuits (from the refrigerator case in supermarket)

Heat slices of chicken or turkey, wrapped in foil, at 350 degrees. Meanwhile, combine gravy, applesauce and mushrooms; heat to serving temperature. Arrange chicken slices on platter, top with some of the gravy; surround with hot biscuits made with a mix. Serve remainder of gravy separately. Makes 6 servings.

APPLESAUCE BAKED BEANS

1 large can oven-baked Boston style baked beans
1 can (1 lb.) applesauce
¼ lb. salt pork

Arrange layers of beans and applesauce in 4 or 6 individual bean pots or casseroles depending on size. Remove rind from salt pork, score surface; cut into chunks. Bury 1 chunk in each casserole, leaving only the scored rind exposed. Bake at 350 degrees about ½ hour or until pork is golden brown and beans are bubbling hot. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Question: Though my family is not on a rigid diet of any kind, we are all a little overweight and so I would like some tempting low calorie dishes for use during the summer.

Mrs. W.T., Dedham

Answer: The following three dishes are tasty and with great eye appeal—watch the family's pleasure as they enjoy: Stuffed Cherry Tomatoes, Lowcalorie Vegetable Dip and Chicken Wing Nibbles!

STUFFED CHERRY TOMATOES

25 cherry tomatoes
1 can (3½ or 3¾ oz.) tuna
2 teaspoons cider vinegar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
1 tablespoon finely minced onion
¼ teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce

Cut thin slice from top of cherry tomatoes. Scoop out center of tomatoes, removing all pulp and seeds. In small bowl flake tuna and mix with remaining ingredients. Fill each tomato with 1 teaspoon filling. Yield: 25 tomatoes, 13 calories each.

LOW-CALORIE VEGETABLE DIP

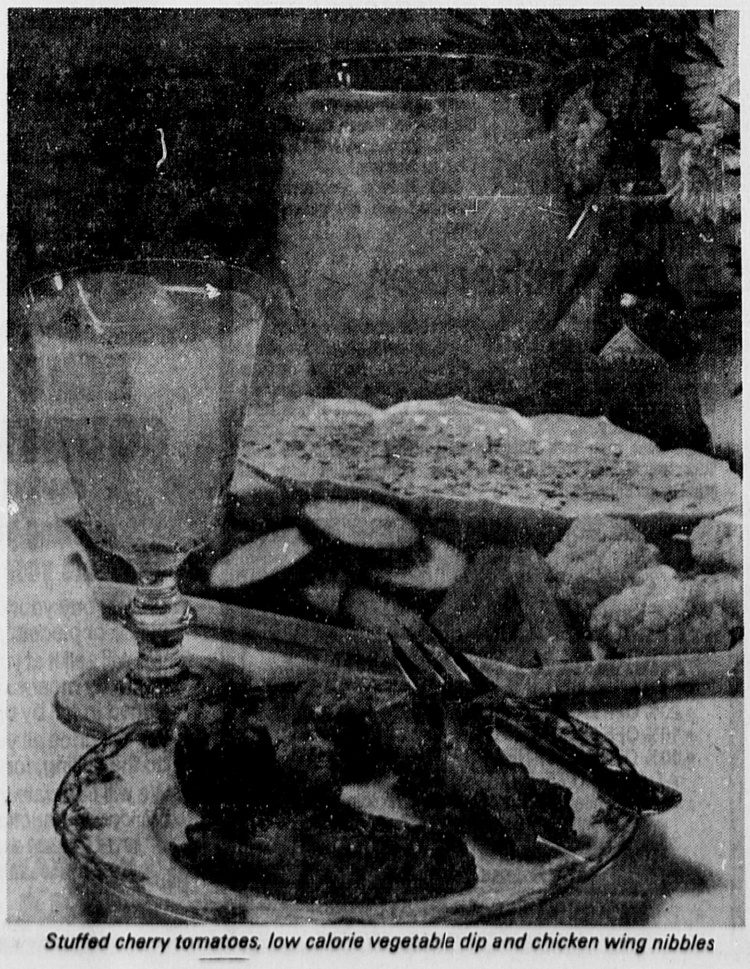

2 cups (1 lb.) creamed cottage cheese
1 cup finely chopped pared and seeded cucumber
1 small tomato, peeled and seeded and chopped
½ teaspoon dried dill weed
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce

Mix all ingredients in bowl. Cover and chill. Serve with crisp fresh vegetables such as carrot and celery sticks, raw zucchini slices and cauliflowerets. Yield: 2½ cups; 13 calories per tablespoons.

CHICKEN WING NIBBLES

8 chicken wings
2 tablespoons honey
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
2 tablespoons water
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon Tabasco pepper sauce

Cut chicken wings in half at joint. Mix remaining ingredients in small bowl. Dip pieces of chicken into sauce and place on shallow baking pan. Broil 6 inches from heat for 10 minutes on one side, turn and broil for 5 minutes on second side. Wings may be sprinkled with additional salt before serving. Yield: 16 pieces, about 30 calories each.

Stuffed cherry tomatoes, low calorie vegetable dip and chicken wing nibbles

Telly Savalas

Prime time

"He bent over and kissed my hand and WOW!" she laughed nervously. "He makes Paul Newman look like a boy scout!"

Some young ingenue speaking? No. She was a seasoned newspaper woman excited as a schoolgirl because TV and motion picture celebrity Telly Savalas had greeted her in the continental manner at a recent Men's Fashion Association luncheon.

A certain magnetism seems to draw men as well as women of all ages to this tall, completely bald, imperfectly featured man. Typifying the well dressed, intelligent police detective in the CBS hit series "Kojak", Savalas in person comes off like the kid at the merry-go-round who has caught the brass ring. He's bent on enjoying all that life has to offer.

His frankness is disarming. Still in awe at his own success, he shrugs and says, "To be working at all as an actor remains a surprise to me. Twelve years ago I was far removed from this thing called 'Show Business'.

"For example. I would pursue people just to talk to them. I'd go up to a pretty girl and say, 'Hello, I'm Telly Savalas', and she'd keep walking. Ah, but things have changed. All of a sudden people are interested in what I wear, what I say and what I think."

Born Aristotle Savalas in Garden City, New York, he grew up in a lively family of four brothers and a sister. Following high school he interrupted his education to enlist in the Army when the United States entered World War II. After three years of military service, Savalas resumed his schooling at Columbia University, majoring in psychology. He graduated with honors and a Bachelor of Science degree.

Disillusioned with his initial entry into the field of psychology, he joined the Information Services of the State Department where he moved quickly through the ranks to become Senior Director of News and Special Events for the American Broadcasting Company. He created the "Your Voice of America" series which won both a Freedom Foundation and a Peabody Award for the network.

Telly credits pure neglect on his part with bringing about his acting career. "When I was with the government as Executive Director, I traveled all over the world and got to know many foreign personalities. One day I received a call from a director's agent who said he needed someone to play an old European judge on television, and the accent had to be genuine. I promised to help and then forgot about it until he called a few days later.

"I quickly figured out a way to get him off the hook—I told him I found just the man (and of course that man was me). I had been curious for a long time about the acting profession and this was a good opportunity to find out what it was all about.

"So I went for the audition. They gave me a script and I read it with a heavy accent. The director said that I looked young for the part but he would use me. I went home and told my mother who, by the way, is one of the loveliest chicks—the greatest broad in the world (I call all women 'broads' and I use that term with love and respect). She said, 'Telly, you'll do beautifully!' So I did the show and I've never looked back since."

Very much today's woman, his mother was Miss Greece and is an American writer as well as artist. Her son marvels at her capacity, "She is a magnificent human being . . talented . . beautiful . . . and you say to yourself, 'So where did this gorilla come from?' "

At one time Telly Savalas considered that wearing a shirt and tie was "dressing up." He now explains that he is largely responsible for the dress and dignity evident in his portrayal of Theo Kojak on the television series. His love of clothes and proper accessories stems back to a childhood when, as he put it, "In our house all my parents cared about was that we were clean. With four brothers to contend with, the first boy up in the morning was the best dressed.

When asked about his clean shaven head (which he admits to shaving every time he shaves his beard), he pauses for a moment and then launches into an explanation.

"When I did the picture "The Greatest Story Ever Told," the director felt that since I was playing the role of Pontius Pilate it would give the role extra dimension if I shaved my head. I kinda worried about it since I had little kids at home and they wouldn't want to see poppa so drastically changed. To my surprise, the director suggested we bring the children onto the set and allow them to see the change take place. Production for the day was cancelled to the cost of fifty or sixty thousand dollars and the next day the kids were there observing everything. You know what—they never noticed! I've shaved my head since!"

"Oh, by the way, when I called my mother and told her that I was being cast in "The Greatest Story Ever Told," she said, 'Telly, you'll make a great Jesus. And I said, 'No, Ma, I'll be playing Pontius Pilate.' She said, 'Alright Telly, without rewriting history, play him sympathetically.' "

Telly Savalas enjoys life the way it is right now. There's unabashed wonder in his voice as he says, "It seems as though it was just yesterday when I worked in the government where conversations with Andre Gromeko and other heads of state were routine. But when I went to Cannes for a film festival and saw Burt Lancaster in person . . . I was so in awe I couldn't catch my breath!

"I used to dream about the time I would be able to make twenty to thirty thousand dollars a year, and quite suddenly I find myself in a profession where they are paying me at least that weekly! People come up to you and tell you how wonderful you are . . . believe me, it's not hard to take as long as you've reached your maturity. I consider myself a pretty lucky guy!"

TV Profile

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ja'net DuBois is beautiful, black and plays Willona, the happy-go-lucky neighbor on the "Good Times" series.

She is also single, bright and ambitious.

Ja'net is a writer as well as an actress. She was nominated for an Emmy as a writer for "Maybe It's All In My Mind," a television drama-musical for a local Hollywood Show.

A native of Philadelphia who was reared in Babylon, N.Y., Ja'net lives alone in a Hollywood apartment and likes it.

She has furnished her one-bedroom dwelling with an array of colorful furniture highlighted by clusters of bright pillows. The walls are covered with large oil paintings.

Wants to Write

But she is looking for a house in hopes her mother will move west to live with her. Ja'net came to Hollywood a year and a half ago, fleeing the soap opera, "Love of Life," in which she played a nurse.

Her principal purpose in coming west was to write. The den of her apartment has been converted into an office, complete with desk, typewriter and file cabinets.

Her dream is to write "The Billie Holliday Story" for movies, despite the fact the legendary singer's life has already been done for the big screen.

Cooks Creole Dishes

She arises bright and early and throws some fruit juice, an egg and instant protein in a blender. That and a vitamin pill comprise breakfast. Lunch is a salad or light soup. For dinner she stops at restaurants, often by herself but occasionally with a date.

She works five days at week at CBS-TV, three days of rehearsal and two days of shooting the all-black comedy series.

When Ja'net does have friends in for dinner more often than not she prepares fancy French and Creole dishes. Her father is Haitian, and taught her mother the recipes of his native island.

As Willona, Ja'net's wardrobe is somewhat tacky on the show. The actress makes up for this in private life with dozens of beautiful, flowing gowns. She seldom wears pants —a standby of her professional wardrobe.

Her current beau is not in show business. He's athletic and enjoys horseback riding. Naturally, Ja'net has taken up horseback riding, heading for Malibu on weekends to ride in the mountains.

Highly Disciplined

Ja'net enjoys solitude, however. And a great deal of her spare time is devoted to reading books at home, sitting by a flickering fire in the hearth and listening to classical music on her expensive stereo rig.

She is highly disciplined and makes a point of devoting a set number of hours a week to working at the typewriter.

Because most of the parts she has had on television lack real dimension and opportunity for drama, she is convinced the best solution is to write a good play and then star in it herself.

Her proudest performance so far was a richly dramatic role in an episode of the "shaft" series this past season.

Ja'net keeps herself physically trim by attending dance classes and playing tennis, both of which she does well.

Willona's characterization is not difficult for Ja'net who says she has an aunt who reminds her of the cheerful extrovert — and Ja'net herself is a happy young woman with a dream to become a big star.

Announce Civil Service examinations

The following Civil Service examinations are announced by Edward W. Powers, director:

Assistant civil engineer (park engineering) Metropolitan District Commission — minimum salary is $224.05 a week and the maximum is $282.55. Exam to be given Sept. 14, last date for filing is Aug. 26.

Superintendent of standards laboratory, State Division of Standards — minimum salary is $197.15 a week and the maximum is $246.95. Exam to be given Sept. 21, last date for filing is Sept. 3.

Senior accountant, State Department of Education — minimum salary is $209.50 a week and the maximum is $265.30. Exam to be given Sept. 14, last date for filing is Aug. 26.

Chief of test development and validation, State Division of Civil Service — minimum salary is $346.90 a week and the maximum is $439.90. Date of exam not listed, but last date for filing is Aug. 27.

Application blanks may be obtained in person or by writing to: Division of Civil Service, 294 Washington street, Boston, Ma. 02108.

Six doctors get research grants

The American Cance Soxiety has announced grants to six Newton doctors as part of a research support package that will channel $1.3 Million to Boston area hospitals, universities and laboratories beginning this month.

The American Caner Society grants will underwrite cancer related research programs.

Dr. Samuel A. Latt of Newton Highlands, assistan professor of pediatrics at Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston, was awarded a clinical investigation grant to study how the body manufactures and repairs genetic material.

A technique has recently been developed a tChildren's that permits scientists to observe chromosmoe activity by flourescene microscopy. Dr. Latt will use this technique to study cell processes in normal individuals and in individuals with cancer andother diseases involving abnormal tissue growth.

Dr. Stephen H. Robinson of Newton Highlands was awarded a clinical investigation grant for his work at Beth Israel Hospital's Department of Medicine.

An associate professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School and chief of the Hematology Unit at Beth Israel Hospital, Robinson is studying abnormalties in cellular differentiation that may present new approaches to the treatment of malignant disorders of the blood, such as leukemia.

Having already developed metheods for studying normal blood cell development, Robinson will now apply the same techniques to a study of leukemic cells. By defining differences in the behavior of normal and leukemic blood cells, he hopes to gain insight into the mechanisms that control malignant cell growth.

Dr. Phyllis R. Strauss of Newton, assistant professor of biology at Northeastern Universtiy, has been awarded a project grant to investigate cell surfaces.

Recent experiments have led researchers to believe that the surfaces of cancer cells differ from those of normal cells and that the differences may be causally related to the cancerous state. Dr. Starauss and her co-researcher, Dr. Eva R. Kashket of Newton, a senior research associate at Harvard Medical School and a visiting assistant professor of biology at Northeastern witll use the American Cancer Society grant to examine an important everday function of cell surfaces, that of transporting necessary nutrients in and out.

Dr.s Strauss and Kashket will observe the membrane function of normal and leukimic white blood cells whcin may be of significance in the regulation of cellular growth and function.

Dr. Charles C. Richardson of Newton, a Professor of Biological Chemistry at Harvard Medical School, was awarded a clinical investigation grant to study DNA, the genetic substance.

Richardson's research is focused on the mechanisms which set into motion the body's ability to manufacture, control and repair damage in DNA– processes whcih may well play a role in thec ancerous transformation of cells.

Dr. Gerald D. Fasman of Auburndale, a member of the Brandeis Uneversity Graduate Department of Biochemistry, will use the Amercan Cancer Society clinical investigation grant to study the interaction of nucleic acids and proteins.

Nucleic acids, which contain the biological cell's hereditary information, carry out the function of cell replication. Proteins vary gratly in their biological function, and there is very limited understanding of why and how certain proteins perform certain functions Fasman's project will examin e the functions of both substances; knowledge of how their functions are controlled will increase understanding of the normal cell, and hopefully, the avnormal cell, such s those affected by cancer.

Western classic slated for showing at library

"Stagecoach" the classic western directed by John Ford, is the Newton Free Library's second feature film in a Summer Film Festival Series scheduled for viewing Thursday , July 18 at 7:15 p.m. at the Main Library, Chaffin Hall, 414 Centre Street, Newton Corner.

Based on "Stage to Lordsburg" by Ernest Haycox, "Stagecoach," produced in 1939 , set the pattern for countless Westerns ever since.

The story concerns six passengers brought together ona stagecoach trip to Lordsburg: a drunken doctor (Thomas Mitchell, who won a n Oscar for his perfomance); an evicted prostitute (Claire Trevor); a chivalrous gambler (John Carradine); an Army officer's pregnant wife; an absconding banker; and a timid whiskey salesman.

Outside of town, the Ringo Kid (John Wayne) joins them, making one of the most dramatic entrances in screen history.

The group is united by the birth of a baby and is then attcacked by Indians, in what is still probably the greatest western chase ever.

The chase is a triumph of editing and high-speed camera movement and is just one of the elements along with the acting and scernery that makes this film the forerunner of the modern western.

The free Feature Film Series concludes on August 22 with, Mr. Hulot,sand is just one of the elements along with the acting and scenery that makes this film the forerunner of the modern western.

The free Feature Film Series concludes on August 22 with, Mr. Hulot's Holiday a modern masterpiece of slapstick, directed by Jacques Tati and Starring Jacques Tati and Nathalie Pascaud.

Prize Winner at the Cannes Film Festival, the film recreates the visual satire of Chaplin and the Marx Brothers in a series of comic Mix-ups and caricatures of people vacationing at a seaside resort.

Food stamp availability increasing

Another Newton bank has indicated its intention to participate in the new food stamp program.

Mrs. Margaret Hunt, vice-treasurer of the Newton Savings Bank, said this week that the bank "hopes to begin selling food stamps by the middle of August in at least two of the Newton Savings Bank's five Newton offices."

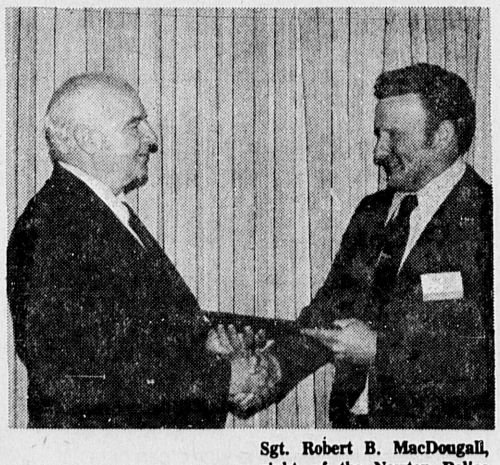

The Newton-Waltham Bank & Trust Co., according to Vice-President Richard Southwick, has no plans at the present to sell stamps at branches other than the Newton Corner branch.

Southwick said, "Until the situation becomes clearer and we find out what needs to be done, we will continue with Newton Corner. To do things properly is our main concern."

There has been noticeably more activity at the Newton Corner branch, Southwick said, and clients have seemed satisfied with that location.

The only involvement of the banks is the sale of food stamps, which give the buyer greater purchasing power at a store than the actual value of the money spent on the stamps.

Low-income persons, welfare recipients, and unemployed persons are eligible for authorizations to buy stamps, but must apply at the Welfare Department office serving Newton - 320 Washington St., Brookline.

GUIDELINES ON ALCOHOL PROBLEMS

MIX WATER SPORTS & DRINKING "SPORTS" VERY CAREFULLY

Just as with auto deaths, a big proportion of summer drownings are alcohol-related. Mixing too much alcohol with small boats, canoes, swimming, diving, and waterskiing should be avoided. Otherwise, the resulting devil-may-care attitude, the poor coordination, and the reduced physical stamina may be fatal . . . and, too often is.

Frank Waldorf to be rabbi at Temple Sinai

A new rabbi has been appointed to serve at Tample Sinai, Brookline. Rabbi Frank M. Waldorf, currently spiritual leader at congregation Beth El in Winchester, Virginia, was unanimously elected rabbi at Temple Sinai at a special meeting of the congregation on June 2.

The appointment becomes effective Aug. 1, 1974.

Rabbi Frank Waldorf

The selection of a new rabbi came after intensive investigation into leadership for the congregation, according to Temple President Benjamin Goldfarb of Newton.

In a statement to the membership, the president said "a throough and diligent search had been made by the rabinnical committee and it was its unanimous decision to recommend to the Board of Trustess, Rabbi Frank M. Waldorf."

"It is a great pleasure for me to become associated with a congregation that has the fine tradition of Temple Sinai," Rabbi Waldorf commented in response to the appointment. He said he "looked forward eagerly" to assuming his duties as spiritual leader of the congregationa.

A native of Baltimore, Maryland, Rabbi Waldorf previously served as assistant rabbi at Temple Israel, Boston from 1968 to 1971. He was a U.S. Army chaplain in West Germany for three years.

An honor graduate of Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati, Ohio, Rabbi Waldorf received an engineering degree from Johns Hopkins University where he is currently pursing a doctoral degree in social relations.

He is active in many community organizations and has published several articles on various subjects.

Rabbi Waldorf is married and the father of three children, ages ten, eight, and six.

The Rabbi and Mrs. Waldorf will reside in Chestnut Hill in Newton.

Backpacking, canoeing taught at Boston Center

There is still time to gain skill and confidence in the woods this summer.

The Boston Center for Adult Education, 5 Commonwealth Ave., will offer three late-starting courses teaching the techniques of backpacking and canoeing. They will be led by Paul Dumas, professional guide and outfitter.

"Wilderness Experience," beginning July 25, will let you experience the satisfaction of competence in the wilderness. The course teaches mapreading, trail cooking, emergency procedures, and the specific demands of the season.

If your interest is canoeing, "Waterways," beginning July 24, learn techniques, selection criteria, packing, route planning, safety, and other essentials of canoe touring and camping. Three meetings will be at the center and three at local lakes and rivers, using canoes.

"Wilderness Workshop," beginning Aug. 20, prepares you for a full week in the woods with two two-hour meetings at the center. Spend four days backpacking in the White Mountain National Forest, finishing off with three days of canoeing in Maine.

For registration information and a free catalog, call the Boston Center at 267-4430.

Listing of environment groups free from EPA

The Regional Office of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has published its 1974-75 Directory of Environmental Groups in New England.

The directory focuses upon private groups operating in the states of Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, and Vermont. State State agencies and national groups dealing with the environment are included. There are more than 400 listings.

John A. S. McGlennon, regional EPA administrator, noted that environmental organizations in New England vary in size and range of activity. Some emply professional staffs; some operate with volunteers; some are concerned with a single issue; some with any and all environmental problems.

"Some are primarily educational groups. Others engage in legislative activities, stimulating their members and the public to make their pro-environmental views known to elected and appointed public officials. Directly or indirectly, they bring pressure on government at all levels to enact and implement environmental protection laws and regulations," McGlennon said.

Copies of the directory are available free of charge by writing EPA, Public Affairs Division, J.F.K. Federal Building, Boston, MA 02203.

Dystrophy camp named, in firefighters' honor

Camp Florian, a summer camping program for young adult victims of mucular dystrophy and related neuromuscular diseases, was officially dedicated in ceremonies held at the camp site, the Sisters of Saint Joseph Farm in Haverhill.

Camp Florian is names in recognition of the support that Muscular Dystrophy Assns. of America has received from fire fighters. Saint Florian is the fire fighters' patron saint. In opening remarks, Michael P. Baldino, MDAA regional director said, "Firefighters have substantially increased public awareness of muscular dystrophy and have demonstrated a profound compassion for those who are less fortunate." He continued, "Through camister distribution, tag days, residential appeals and similar activities, they have been instrumental in raising funds to finance the camping program which is offered free to patients."

Camp Florian's aim is toward a normal camping experience. The program itself involves daily activities in four major fields. There are water activities, arts & crafts, adaptive outdoor sports and educational seminars to help those afflicted with neuromuscular disease cope with the challenges in their pursuit of higher education, occupational training and employment.

The campers are young adults, both male and female, and their ages range from 17 to 21. Some are ambulatory, however, the majority are in wheelchairs with very limited muscular abilities. Certain modifications of recreational programs are necessary but playing such games as baseball from a wheelchair is not only possible, it's also great fun.

WOMAN'S WORLD

NEW YORK (UPI) — Warren Farrell, a young egghead with a nifty black beard, intends to liberate the men of America.

Over chicken with walnuts in an Oriental eatery he told how the Men's Liberation Movement he heads will make life happier for men, women and children.

Farrell, of Arlington, Va., was in town to run a two-day meeting of the National Organization for Women (NOW) Task Force on the Masculine Mystique. He is national coordinator of that group.

The Men's Liberation Movement was spawned at that conference.

The spirit of it all in many ways runs on tracks put down by the Women's Liberation Movement. Lib and let Lib seems the thrust in each movement.

"We want to give every person the freedom to get into any area and pursue it," Farrell said. "Regardless of sex."

Farrell's wife, Ursula, is a mathematician and White House Fellow. She is executive assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury.

Farrell lectures on the movement and leads consciousness raising groups —the latter being key to the male liberation movement. He also writes and will tell all about the movement in a book that's to come out in the fall. It's called "The Liberated Man" (Random House).

Farrell, who will be getting a Ph.D. from New York University soon, said on the male problem about 300 consciousness-raising groups are functioning in the nation —on the male problem.

The participants include males, females, and groups consisting of males and females —coed groups.

Problems of masculinity are considered at the meetings. Men meet alone, women meet alone, then they meet together to discuss the problems. Then they go back to several meetings of the single sex format. The meetings last about four hours and span several months' of weekly sessions.

The Consciousness-Raising groups are mostly composed of single and married middle-age persons.

"Middle-age is when men realize how the male mystique has been hurting them," Farrell said.

"They're on the corporate ladder and know they aren't going to make it to the top in middle-age—or else they may even fall off. They think they've been working all their lives as a way of showing love for their families.

In middle age they find they don't know how to express love to wife or children."

At this stage the men find some time to spend with the children —something they have been promising for many years. They make the time only to find the children are grown and they don't really have the time to spend with a dad who's just discovered them.

Farrell said a society that makes "success objects" out of men keeps the men in the rat race. This success object —win the game, bring home the bacon —role is just as unfair to men as is the sex object role thrust on women.

"The key to masculine liberation is giving every man a chance to ask —'What do I want to do with my life; How do I make a living doing it?'" Farrell said.

"Most of the world's money has men's faces on it, but women are quite happy to just get their hands on it."

"Good sports" run and throw for fun and glory

By TOM GRAVES

Forty-four athletes of varied ages and abilities become track stars for a day when the first annual "Good Sports Competition" was held Saturday at Newton North High School.

The nine-event competition, sponsored by WBZ and the Massachusetts Jaycees, was the first step toward determining the best male and female athletes in Massachusetts.

The top stars of the day were a 28-year old Newton North physical education teacher and an 18-year old Connecticut college student.

Fred Yaitanes of Waltham edged out John Bonistalli for first place honors in the men's division. Yaitanes, a teacher at Newton North since 1969, scored points in seven of nine events. He finished with 68.83 points while Bonstallie had 67 points.

Mimi Clarke of North Haven, Conn., had four first place finishes and tied for first in another event to top Diane Fidurko of Needham in the women's division. Ms. Clarke will be a second semester freshman at Franklin College in Lugano, Switzerland.

Thirty-eight males and six females competed in Newton. Newton Jaycees President Bob Alkon reported that this was the biggest burnout in Newton's district.

The top five males and females from Newton will advance to district competition on July 27. Newton North is a possible site for the district meet.

The top scorers in six district meets will compete in the final at Boston College on Aug. 3.

Nick Pasquarosa, Barry Harsip, and James Blackburn of Newton will join Yaitaines and Bonistalli at the district meet. Other woman qualifiers were Jeanne Pasquarosa, Kathy Tippo, Jane Cedrone and Dorothy Guinan.

Yaitaines said after the local competition that he had thought he had a "pretty good shot" to do well. Yaitanes' top finishes included a first in the obstacle course, a second in the shot put, and fourth places in street-hockey shooting, the 880, and the long jump. Points were awarded to the top 12 finishers in each event.

Yaitanes noted that he had "pretty good knowledge" of the events through coaching. He said that he did some running beforehand and that it "paid off." He intends to train "in all events" for the district competition. Yaitanes pointed out that there was "tough competition" in the local meet.

Yaitanes graduated from Stoughton High in 1968 and Northeastern University in 1969. He is working as a tennis instructor at the Waltham YMCA this summer.

Ms. Clarke said that she found out about the competition from a friend in Boston three or four days before it was going to be held. She remarked that it was "a lot of fun" and that the people were enthusiastic. She said that she "entered for fun."

Ms. Clarke reported that she planned to start running. "The 880 might kill me if I don't."

Ms. Clarke ran track and did gymnastics in high school. She taught gymnastics at Wheaton College, where she was a first semester freshman.

Bonistalli, 24, is a third-year law student at Suffolk University. He graduated from Boston College in 1971 after playing four years of football as a split end.

Bonistalli said that he "wasn't sure what kind of competition there would be." He added that "I'm not really in great shape; I figured I'd do my best."

Bonistalli had a first place in the long jump and tied for first in the 100. He was second in the 880, fourth in the shot put, tied for fourth in the obstacle course, and eighth in the baseball throwing.

Bonistalli ran track in high school on Long Island and presently plays BNBL basketball and tennis. He also jogs.

The oldest competitor at the Newton meet was Abraham Jaffe, a 42-year old accountant from Brookline. The youngest competitor was 18, the minimum age.

Alkon said after the meet that he wished to thank the Newton Recreation Department for its help in organizing the event and for providing equipment. He expressed special appreciation for the help of Fran Towle and Carol Stapleton.

"Because it was the first year, it took a lot of work," Alkon commented.

It had been hoped that there would be a larger turnout in Newton. Of those who showed up, Alkon said, "I don't think I talked to anyone in the sports part who had a bad time."

Alkon also wanted to thank the Newton American Red Cross which had a first aid tent at the field. There were 34 officials, including Jaycees and local sports coaches.

In several events there was little disparity between the results of the top male and the top female. In the 100-yard obstacle course, Ms. Clarke finished in 18.8 seconds while Yaitanes led the men with a time of 16.4 seconds. Ms. Clarke ran the 100 in 12.6 seconds while the top male time was 11.0 seconds.

In the shot put, basketball shooting, baseball throwing, and 880, the top males showed great superiority over the top females. Warren Pitts of Newtonville threw the shot 47'4" while the best throw by a woman was 25'10".

In the baseball throwing, the top male threw eight times into a tire while no woman had even one successful toss in 20 attempts. Five males also failed to throw into the tire.

In the free throw shooting, the top males had 17 baskets in 20 attempts, while the best female score was nine. In the 880, Harsip finished in 2:15.2 while Ms. Clarke's 3:10.5 was the best female time.

Street-hockey shooting produced more even results. Newton firefighter Jim Boudreau had 17 goals in 20 attempts while Ms. Pasquarosa led the women with 15 goals.

In the long jump, Bonistalli led the men with a leap of 18'4" while Ms. Clarke topped the women with a jump of 13'.

The meet began around 9 a.m. and continued until early afternoon. Credit must be given to the Newton Jaycees for a well-organized effort.

One of the only delays of the day came when the competitors were waiting for the final results. One athlete shouted up to Alkon, a C.P.A., that it took less time for Alkon to prepare his taxes.

The retort from the officials was that this was because of how much money the athlete earned last year.

Tales of a journalist turned athlete

By TOM GRAVES

On Saturday, I pretended I was George Plimpton.

I competed in the "Good Sports Competition" at Newton North High School. When the events were over, Norm Walker, football coach at Newton North, looked over my 205-pound bulk and said, "It's good to see guys like you out for this." Thanks, Norm.

My day included one moment of triumph, several failures, and a lot of mediocrity. But it was all fun.

My first event was one you do not normally find in a decathlon: street-hockey shooting. We traveled to the tennis courts and lined up 60 feet away from a goal we were supposed to shoot tennis balls into.

My practice shots were all failures, but in the stress of competition I managed to send 10 of 20 balls rolling into the net.

I then moved on to baseball throwing. Our objective was to toss balls from 60 feet away into a tire hanging on a fence. Having had a tendency to either walk or hit batters as a Little League pitcher when I was young, I did not expect to do well.

I attempted to sacrifice speed for accuracy on my first 19 throws, but was credited with only two strikes. Before my 20th throw, I warned the official to move well out of the way, and wound up for a fastball. This, too, was no good, as I missed several inches wide of the strike zone.

Next was my moment of glory. I crossed the field to punt footballs. On my final attempt I achieved the physical coordination which is usually limited to ping-pong backhands, and I booted the ball slightly more than 46 years. This was good enough for second place in the competition. The winner, possibly one of Eddie Andelman's "super foots," had a punt of 55 yards.

On the way to free-throw shooting in the gym, I stopped to throw the shotput. Having never done this before, I had to get instructions from a friend on how to do it.

My best throw was about 30 feet, but I forgot the most important part of shot-putting: the grunt. At the moment of release, a shotputter should convince the audience of his effort with a loud expression of strain and pain.

I had not shot a basketball since a friend of mine broke one of my fingers in a pick-up game several months ago. I surprised myself by making my first five warm-up attempts. Realizing that I was wasting shots when they did not count, I threw my next shot off the backboard and waited for the real test.

My feeling proved correct, as I made maybe six of my first 10 shots in the competition. I finished strong, however, using a shot which would hit two sides of the rim and then drop in, to end with 15 baskets in 20 attempts. This, and my punt, gave me my only points of the day.

My last four events were not to be my strong ones; they involved running. After what must of looked like trotting to a 13.0 in the 100-yeard dash, I moved on to the long jump.

This was another event in which I lacked much experience. Three times I loped down the runway, placed one foot on the board, and sort of took one long step forward. My best "jump" was about 13 feet.

It was the obstacle course that made me really feel silly. I held up the line for about five minutes before finally finishing the 100-yard-long course.

On my first attempt, my departure failed to coincide with the firing of the gun. The next time they tried to send me off the gun did not go off. On the third try, I finally got out of the starting area, but my feet went out from under me as I approached the first set of tires I was supposed to step through.

A friendly official gave me one more chance after this, and I eventually negotiated numerous tires and hurdles en route to an undistinguished time of around 21 seconds.

All that was left after this was the grueling 880. I had several goals for this event: to not vomit, to finishe the race, and to not die. My priorities were not set before the race began.

After about 100 yeards it looked as if I were about 100 yards behind. I had company until the far straightaway in the first lap, but I was soon left alone as my running partner raced by me.

I had noted earlier that the runners who got the most applause in the 880 were those who finished first and last in each heat. I hoped to be able to savor the latter, but after about 350 yards, I decided that I did not want to die. On the turn before the grandstands at the end of the first lap., I slipped to the sidelines and became a spectator.

The 880 was the day's last event, and we sat on the grass waiting for the final results. After applauding the winners and acting like a journalist for a couple of minutes, I went home and took a well-deserved shower.

Survey provides data on athletic injuries

A statewide survey of athletic injuries has revealed a total of 19 goal post injuries in hockey, football and soccer, it has been reported by the Massachusetts Chiropractice Society (MCS) which sent a questionnaire to 347 athletic directors in April.

The survey also revealed a need for more full-time trainers, better coaching supervision, more conditioning and calisthenics, a greater responsibility on the part of athletes, proper equipment and better maintained playing surfaces.

Hockey players reportedly sufferd the most goal post injuries with 16, followed by football with two and one in soccer.

One of the recommendations received was to make it mandatory that hockey posts not be anchored to the ice during contests, thus making them movable when players skate into them. It was pointed out that this can be accomplished by rule of the Headmasters' Association.

Lack of goal post padding was a finding in the survey. In only 46 instances were they padded in football, hockey and soccer whereas in 241 other cases they were not.

Several of the athletic directors (20) expressed a need for better care and conditioning of playing field surfaces while many others suggested more experienced trainer personnel were necessary.

The lack of proper equipment when school budgets are cut. This forces the athletic director to buy less costly equipment in the hope it will do the job.

Some of the officials stressed the need for immediate access to doctors and hospital facilities in case of injury, especially when playing away from home.

Football was listed as the sport with the highest incidence of injury by 145 of the officials, followed by soccer, 18; hockey, 7; basketball, 4 and baseball, 1.

Sprains were listed by 120 as occuring the most, followed by strains, 46; fractures and dislocations, two each, and contusion just once.

The ankle was reported by 134 as the area most frequently injured, followed by the knee, 33; foot, six and hip, low back and neck, two each.

In answer to the query on the frequency of checking of equipment, more than half (109) said it is only checked annually while 25 said it is checked daily and 23 on a weekly basis.

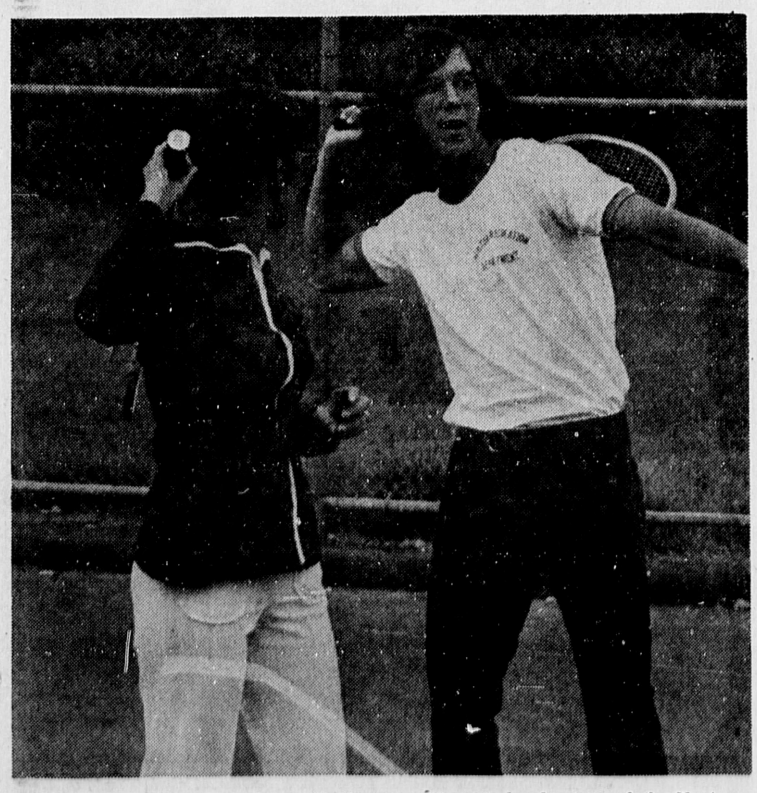

The survey was initiated because of the number of injuries reported to MCS by its member doctors over the past several years.

More than 52 per cent of the officials replied and the data and recommendations will be most helpful to the society in pursuing further action to correct serious situations such as lack of padded goal posts.

The athletic directors displayed a genuine interest in the survey and expressed appreciation too the MCS for initiating it.

As a result of the publicity at the time of the mailing of the questionnaire, the Massachusetts Teachers Association and others have expressed a willingness to aid in the achievement of the survey goals.

Dr. Paul M. Hamilton of Salem and Dr. William H. McKinley of Framingham are the co-chairmen of the committee which is part of the Public Information and Education Program of the MCS.

Tennis lesson

Some 100 Newton residents took advantage of the Newton Recreation Department's tennis lesson program at the Newton Highlands courts during May and June. Here, instructor Leon Geller demonstrates an overhand shot for one of the members of an adult beginners class.

Simon gains tennis victory

John Simon, a 12-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Simon, 11 Hammonswood Rd., Chestnut Hill, recently won the Boys' 12-and-under LTA Augusta Open.

Simon, who has been a quarter-finalist and semi-finalist in other LTA tournaments, finally achieved his first victory. He won his first 36 games straight, and defeated a ranked Maine player in the final, 6-2, 6-2.

Simon is spending the summer at Camp Powhatan in Oxford, Me.

International standings

Following are the standings of the Newton Recreation Department's Twilight League International Division through July 13:

Totem Pole Braves, 10-0-1-21; Boys' Club, 9-2-1-19; St. Bernard's, 9-3-0-18; Upper Falls Lions, 8-4-0-16; Post No. 440 A.L., 7-4-0-14; Carson Post A.L., 5-7-0-10; Waban Chiefs, 5-8-0-10; Our Lady's, 4-8-0-8; Highlanders, 3-8-0-6; Elks Red Sox, 3-9-0-6; Oak Hill Cubs, 1-11-0-2.

Newton Football Club improved

The Newton Football Club has shown great improvement since suffering three shutout losses at the beginning of its season.

Newton, which plays in the Eastern Mass. Twilight Soccer League, has rebounded with 3-2 victories over Acton. Belmont, and Needham. The win over Needham was unofficial because a referee failed to show up.

Player-soach Skip Stearns had two goals against Acton. George Collins scored the other Newton goal.

Alf Wilson, a teacher at Meadowbrook Junior High School, had a pair of goals against Belmont. Peter Mancini also scored.

The highlight of Newton's win over Needham was a Collins tap-in of a lovely hitch-kick pass from Sid Mazzola. Stearns and Mazzola had the other Newton goals.

A feature of the game was the presence of Rob Ftorek on the Needham team. Ftorek was a soccer and hockey standout for Needham High and is now a professional hockey player.

Newton's next home game will be against Concord on Monday at Allison Field off of California Street. The game is scheduled to start around 6 p.m.

Newton lost its opening game to Concord, 1-0.

Woodland holds member-guest

Ninety-six teams competed in the annual Woodland Golf Club Member-Guest tournament last weekend.

John Bradley of Ponkapoag and William Petralia Jr. defeated Tom Swan of Charles River and Bill Daley one-up in the final of th championship flight.

Bill Courville of Sunnyvale, Conn. and Dr. Warren Courville defeated Jim Logue of Andover and Tom Martin one-up in the first flight.

The winners in the second flight were Bill Kickham of Charles River and Paul Riordan. They defeated Norm Jamieson of Framingham and Bill Drowne, three and two.

Dan Dorian of Oakley and John Simourian gained a one-up victory over Harry McCracken and George Bero in the third flight.

In the fourth flight, Robert Cleary of Brae Burn and Joseph Tellier defeated J. McGourty of Putterham Meadows and Bob Owens, three and two.

There were 12 flights with eight teams in each flight.

A pop-off at world sports figures

If you ask me Carlton Fisk, Dwight Evans, Darrell Johnson and Reggie Cleveland sound like a Grambling secondary, or at least an Aiken polo team.

Now that they're in Hartford, the Whalers will be easier to miss.

Its no wonder that Charlie Finley named a mule after himself.

The Yankees are giving pin stripes a bad name.

Whoever wrote "Take me out to the ball game" hadn't eaten at Fenway Park.

Don Zimmer is worth 7 games a year at third base. So was Popowski, but for the other team.

I can't wait for Brad Park's next book.

Rosco Pondexter has got to go. And he hasn't even arrived yet.

Phil Esposito? Somebody has to be kidding.

Who let Steve Fredericks off his leash? And if we catch him, it's the muzzle for Manilla. With Johnny Pesky keeper of the pound.

I liked Reggie Jackson until I found out George Scott is his idol. Which reminds me, Cement Head looks like he's been given a season pass to a pasta plant.

The only thing that would interest me about the American Sportsman would be if they hooked Lloyd Bridges. But make sure there's enough room in the cooler for Jeff and Beau.

Gunter Gerbel-Williams is my idea of "Athlete of the Year."

Funny, there weren't any golfers in the Super Stars.

What is it about beer company owners that seems so cheap?

Boston Garden may be bush but then again so are the owners.

Joe Garagiola can make baseball twice as enjoyable.

If Curt Gowdy doesn't keep still, I'm going to cut off his Alpo.

This year, instead of throwing out the first ball, let's throw out Richard Nixon.

Our leader functions like he was made in Haiti, too.

Wouldn't a National League team be nice in Boston.

It's about time Oscar Robertson was put out to pasture. And he can take Walt Bellamy with him.

575 fans just got season's tickets refunded from the transplanted Golden Blades. What they should have gotten is 2-5 in the slammer for stupidity.

Talk about culturally deprived, a city that gets a WHA expansion team.

If I shut my eyes and count to 10, maybe Andy Granatelli will go away. With a side car for Dolly, of course.

World Team Tennis has got to go. If it hasn't already. Just make sure Billy Jean takes little Larry with her.

I give Reggie Smith about another month. As they say, "form will tell."

Suffolk Downs is a disgrace, but if you love punishment try Wonderland.

Is Peter Puck really necessary? Or for that matter is hockey?

Free rides on the Nantasket roller coaster if you like Bud Collins as a sportscaster.

But its an unlimited charge account at Louie's unless you think Len Berman is strictly Dayton.

Jerry Quarry may not be a good fighter, but he certainly is uninteresting.

Has anyone stopped to consider that Howard Cosell might be right?

Mike Burke move over, here comes Chuck Conners, "one of America's greatest baseball players!"

Name me two better basketball and baseball writers than Bob Ryan and Peter Gammons.

How can a news sportscaster omit Wimbledon results.

Just imagine if Bowie Kuhn wore double knits.

Whatever happened to Sonny Gibbs?

I'm afraid Jim Bouten is taking himself seriously.

Be sure to miss "The Wit and Wisdom of Yogi Berra," by Phil Pepe. Talk about pamphlet form.

Anyone whose ides of "Funday" is the New England dragway is definately in trouble.

Although it's my favorite radio commercial.

Ah, a Red Sox-Dodgers World Series.

Ben Jipco is my kind of man. But as far as I'm concerned you can leave Kip Keino at the far turn.

Today's SPORTS Parade

By MILTON RICHMAN UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — All his life, which really comes to only 14 years, Jorge Lebron has been praying, dreaming and waiting for this day.

Today is the day he becomes a professional baseball player in the truest sense of the word.

It is the day Jorge Lebron, 14, Patillas, P.R., reports to the Philadelphia Phillies' Auburn, N.Y., farm club in the New York-Penn League and puts on a uniform as possibly the youngest player ever to sign a professional baseball contract.

Ruben Amaro, the former major league infielder and now chief scout for the Phillies in the Caribbean area, originally signed the boy, who came up to Philadelphia from Puerto Rico Monday.

Rather than have him stay in a hotel all by himself, Amaro put Jorge up in his own home in Philadelphia the past few days and will make the 278-mile trip to Auburn with him today.

"You're going to be gone from home a month and a half," Amaro said to the kid shortstop before they took off. "Do you think your mother and father will be worried about you?"

"No," replied Jorge Lebron firmly. "I think I have a job to do. "My father trusts people in baseball, especially you, and all the others with Philadelphia. Everybody has to leave home sometime. My time has come now."

All this conversation was in Spanish.

Ruben Amaro is of Mexican-Cuban ancestry, has spent half his life in this country and speaks excellent English. Jorge Lebron has never been out of Puerto Rico before and is getting his first real exposure to the English language now.

He is quiet and rather reserved, yet friendly with it all.

Whenever he's introduced to someone, the Phils' 5-foot-10, 152-pound prodigy says "hi!" He picked that one up from some of his buddies back home. Jorge's English also includes the word "yes," after which the water sometimes gets a little deep for him.

The Phillies did considerable soul-searching before signing Jorge, a high school freshman.

They knew under baseball rules, boys in the United States may not be signed until they are graduated from high school, but that the rule doesn't apply to territories outside the continental limits.

Ruben Amaro tells how the youth was found.

"Luis Peraza, who scouts for us in Puerto Rico, looked over the boy first," he says. "A good friend of his...told Luis about seeing Jorge play in Guayamo, and Peraza went there and followed the kid for three months or so.

"Peraza told me about the boy before I came to Puerto Rico to see him. He said the boy's age was correct. You know in Latin-American countries, people sometimes think they impress you more by telling you a prospect is two, three years younger than he actually is.

"He may be 19, and they'll tell you he's 17. But with Jorge you can see for yourself. There is no mistake about his face. It's a very, very young face.

"Still, I had an awful lot of doubts when I first saw him because of his age, but he was easily the best of all the boys at this tryout. He looked polished, outstandingly so. Good hands, good arm. Ran very well. All the tools we look for.

Union Market National Bank would like to offer you a bribe.

1/2% off on loans plus a free radio or cooler or outing set.

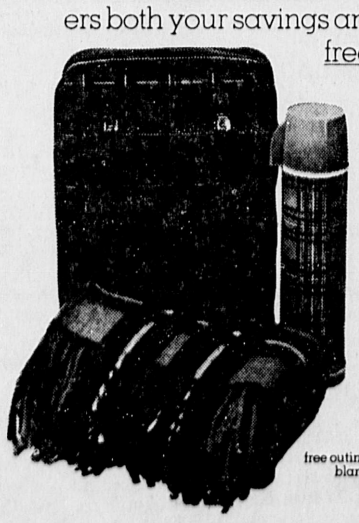

We want all your business.

So we're ready to make it worth your while.

The deal is this: If you open a single statement account with us, (that's one monthly statement called the Work Statement, that covers both your savings and free checking accounts), we'll give you a 1/2% discount on any loan of $2000 or more.

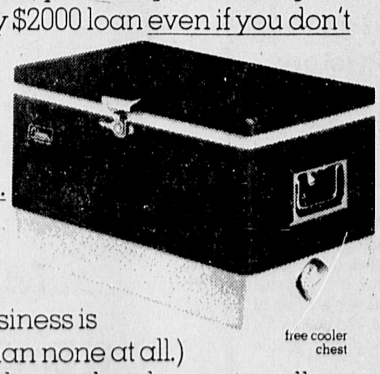

free portable AM/FM radio

free outing set with picnic blanket and thermos

And when you take the loan we'll sweeten the deal with your choice of a free RCA Portable AM/FM Radio, a Coleman Snow-Lite Low Boy Cooler Chest or a Thermo Serv Outing Set with picnic blanket and thermos.

In fact, you can get the free goods with any $2000 loan even if you don't open a single statement account. (We figure some of your business is better than none at all.)

free cooler chest

But hurry, drop by our installment loan department now. This offer is good only while the supply lasts.

After all, how long can a bank offer a bribe like this.

We work as hard for your money as you do.

Posner assistant for labor relations

Secretary of Administration David M. Marchand recently designated Alan K. Posner to serve as his special assistant for the coordination of labor relations pending the permanent appointment of a director of labor relations.

In that capacity, Posner will oversee all executive agency policy relating to collective bargaining. Acting as Administration and Finance's liaison with the other secretariats he will articulate the administration's labor-management posture established by Secretary Marchand.

Until a permanent director of labor relations is chosen, Posner will advise the secretary on collective bargaining affairs. In addition, he will direct the efforts of A & F's Employee Relations Unit supervised by Edward Kuypers.

A graduate of Colgate University and Boston College Law School, Posner, 29, is currently assistant to the Secretary of Administration.

Prior to joining the Executive Office of Administration and Finance as staff assistant to former Secretary William I. Cowin, Posner had served as legal counsel in the Department of Mental Health. He resides at 21 Palmer Rd., Waban with his wife Suzanne and their daughter Elizabeth.

The bank has transferred $500,000 from undivided profits to surplus, making total capital, surplus, undivided profits and reserve accounts of $12,893,875.

Planning Project selects director

The governing board of the Metropolitan Planning Project recently appointed Marcia Marker Feld executive director of the project which is developing educational programs for the reduction of minority student isolation in teh Boston Metropolitan area.

The new director, previously coordinator of support research and planning for MPP, was recommended by a multi-racial committee of the governing board and received its unanimous approval.

Ms. Feld is one of the first women to hold a Ph.D. in urban planning from Harvard University. She is a member of the American Institute of Planners and was assistant professor of community development at Rutgers University, Department of Urban Planning and Policy Development. She is a pioneer in applying technical urban planning skills to education systems and her background reflects involvement in community development and integration efforts.

During the Lindsay administration in New York, she worked for the Mayor's Office of Education Affairs developing community input into the decentralization legislation.

Earlier, Ms. Feld participated in an evaluation of an Education Parks Proposal in New York City. The study led to the development of the "Linear City" concept as an alternative to meet the community need for quality integrated eduçation.

After returning to Boston, Ms. Feld was coordinator of planning and assessment for the Institute of Learning and Teaching at the University of Massachusetts before assuming responsibilities at the Metropolitan Planning Project.

Ms. Feld said "This fall, we will complete the feasibility study which was begun last September with research efforts, test pilot projects and community meetings.

"We will be working with school districts and community groups in the development of voluntary, integrated educational programs which will be metropolitan in scope. These program alternatives will be presented to the Metropolitan Project governing board, school committees, school groups, community people, students and teachers throughout the standard metropolitan statistical area for their review.

"Once we have developed an operational plan, we will begin to pilot programs which will lead to the reduction of minority group student isolation."

Ms. Feld is married and a mother of three. Her husband Alan is a professor at Boston University Law School. They live in Newton.

Among Ms. Feld's publications are the following: "Impact of a New School on an Aging Community: Integrating the Changes into Neighborhood Planning," "Funding Educational Parks," and "School Politics." Her thesis chronicled the New York City decentralization movement from 1967 to 1969 through an analysis of citizen participation into the municipal decision making process.

Donna Zaremba named assistant to Mayor Mann

Donna M. Zaremba has recently been appointed administrative assistant to Mayor Theodore Mann.

Ms. Zaremba has served as a legislative aide to State Rep. Lois Pines, handling constituent inquiries and serving as legislative liaison and researcher.

Previously Ms. Zaremba served as project coordinator for an educational research program conducted by the Massachusetts Internship Office.

Ms. Zaremba is a graduate of Simmons College with a bachelor of arts degree.

Ms. Zaremba plans to move to Newton soon because, she said, "I feel that living in the community in which I work will help me be sensistive to the city's needs and allow me to experience firsthand the effects of City Hall's decisions on the citizens."

Panel to discuss residences for discharged mental patients

The Newton Mental Health Association will be represented on a panel television program sponsored by the Massachusetts Association of Mental Health entitled "Community Caring: The Pros and Cons of Communityy Resdiences for discharged mental patients" to be aired on Channel 2 on Tuesday, July 23 at 9 p.m.

Ben Lipson, a member of the board of directors will present a viewpoint of the citizen; the fears and anxieties, real and imagined, that are conjured up when people think about living in a neighborhood with discharged mental health patients.

Appearing on the panel wil be: Mrs. Ella Everett, president of Co-op Apartment Association, who owns, lives in and oversees a cooperative apartment house for discharged patients; Dr. Phelps Robinson, director, Massachusetts Residence Programs; and Gerald Wright, director, Dare House, Jamaica Plain, which houses adolescents who have been referred by the Court or are unable to live at home for some reason. Robert McCormick, vice president of the Massachusetts Association for Mental Health, will moderate the program.

Alice Nastri appointed Allstate sales representative

Alice P. Nastri of Newton has been appointed sales representative for the Allstate Insurance Companies.

Her office is located at the Sears, Roebuck and Company store at 280 Veterans of Foreign War Parkway in Dedham.

Mrs. Nastri recently completed an intensive professional training course at the Companies' Eastern Zone Training School in Morristown, New Jersey. She will be selling auto, homeowners, fire, life and health, and other lines of insurance.

Mrs. Nastri resides with her two daughters at 1667 Centre St.

Alice P. Nastri

Notaries public reappointed

State Secretary John F. X. Davoren has announced the reappointment of the following to seven-year terms as notaries public:

William Carmen, 10 Dartmouth St., West Newton; Thomas Gallinelli, Jr., 28 Surrey Rd., Newton; Michael J. Grealy, 475 Brookline St., Newton Centre and Louis Wolfson, 25 Andrew St., Newton Highlands.

Heads committee

Lewis M. Sherer Jr. of the Marriott Motor Hotel in Newton has been named chairman of the telephone committee of the Massachusetts Hotel-Motel Association. He will also serve on the executive committee.

Expos 8, Dodgers 7

The Expos nipped the Dodgers as they scored twice in the ninth. By losing for the fourth time in five games, the Dodgers saw their once comfortable lead in the National League West over Cincinnati trimmed to 6½ games.

Padres 5, Phillies 4

Bobby Tolan singled in Dave Roberts from third with two out in the ninth inning after Nate Colbert, Willie McCovey and Dave Winfield hit successive solo homers earlier in the inning to help the Padres down the Phils and up San Diego's record in one-run games to 22-7.

"A Bird's World" now ready at Franklin Zoo

For three years the Metropolitan District Commission, in conjunction with the Boston Zoological Society, has been transforming the Bird House and Aviary at the Franklin Park Zoo into "A Bird's World," and now they are ready to show it off to the people of the Commonwealth.

Where there was once a small duck-pond there is now a series of graceful waterways and falls that wander through and around thousands of new plants and trees. The main pond is filled with ducks, geese and swans from around the world. At the upper most pool a flock of gentle flamingos wade in the shallow water. Visitors may walk through the waterfowl area and watch as colorful birds glide silently by on the clear water.

From the waterfowl pond you walk up a wide set of steps to the plaza level where new benches under giant oak trees invite you to pause and enjoy a broad overlook across the flamingos to the pond beyond. Across the plaza you walk through a set of double doors and into a Bird's World. You are inside the enormous flight cage where flying free about you are maribou storks, huge hornbills, toucans, saurus cranes, and many other exotic birds from the four corners of the world. As you move down the elevated walkway you see above you a pair of brilliant macaws, below in the meadow a pair of rare NeNe geese from Hawaii are eating grass. From the center of the area a beautiful waterfall tumbles down to a short section of rapids that pass under the walkway and spill into the waterway that flows through the cage. All around you there are plants and shrubs and trees which, combined with the water, blend together in a fresh clean atmosphere that almost makes you feel like an intruder in this quiet world.

The quiet is broken with the call of the laughing gull who lives at the seashore end of the enclosure. There are a dozen or so of these tiny gulls along with the two endangered brown pelicans, the rare Aleutian geese and the other birds who live in and near the water. The Flight Cage is over one hundred feet long and the visitor walkway takes you from one end to the other. As you pass through the set of double doors at the far end you are given a fairwell salute by a bright hornbill as he swoops low over your head.

Around the outside walls of the old bird house are three exhibits filled with birds from New England. The red-headed woodpecker and the blue jay announce your arrival, each in his own way. The quail and grouse trot through the ivy and ferns on the exhibit floor. The birds fly about in the exhibit landing first in a small birch tree and then on to a pine branch. Each fall these birds will be returned to the wild and another group will replace them. A BIRD'S WORLD, from the waterfowl on the pond to the storks in the flight cage to the woodpecker and jay, is truly an experience that cannot be enjoyed anywhere else in New England.

Inside the Bird House the four exhibits designed by Jerry Johnson are nearing completion and will open on the first of September. The educational exhibits that help you understand more about the millions of birds that fly, swim, walk and hop about this planet were designed by Michael Sand And Associates of Cambridge. There is an exhibit that lets you compare a bird's heart rate to your own. There is a bird call jukebox that lets you dial a bird call, and there are over a dozen other exhibits that explain how a bird survives.

A Bird's World was financed through an M.D.C. bond issue and private contributions to the Boston Zoological Society. Richard Naegeli, Director and Curator of Zoos for the M.D.C. said, "This new complex is just the first step toward making the Franklin Park Zoo one of the most outstanding zoological facilities in the world."

The public will now be able to see what we have been talking about for the last three years. With the combined talents of Jerry Johnson and Michael Sand and the input from the Boston Zoological Society, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts can look forward to zoological gardens that provides an unparalleled recreational experience coupled with creative and imaginative educational opportunities and a deep commitment to preserving the environment that will be a hallmark the world over," said Naegeli.

A Bird's World will open on July 15th. Plan to be there.

Buyers Billboard

A recent column, and news stories, on the potential fire problems associated with "instant on" television sets, failed to mention one possible solution to the problem, which a reader in Huntingdon, Pa., passes on:

"In October, 1970, I bought an Admiral TV for just under $500. The light bill was more than ever for a year with it. I had to take the set in two times to a repair store for new tubes where I found out the constant burning of the tubes made them burn out much faster.

"Then a friend of mine told me about someone who would help me...He said look in back of the set and showed me an instant on and off switch. They are there on most all sets. Don't get me wrong, I think our set is great, except it's not impossible for one to start a fire...Turn off the instant-on button in back and be safe..."

Thanks for the tip.

Boston State plans forum for elderly

The Division of Continuing Education at Boston State College announces a forum program entitled "Educational Opportunity and the Elderly: Promises, Programs or Promotion" to be held at the college, 625 Huntington avenue, on July 25 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The advisory group for the program includes: Sr. Eileen Driscoll, Executive Office of Elder Affairs; Lillian Glickman, Mass. Legislative Council of Older Americans; Myra Herrick, NRTA-AARP; Dr. Anita Martin, Boston University and Don Strong, Administration on Aging.

The moderator will be Robert Charney, instructor of programs on the elderly and forum organizer, Boston State College.

Speakers will include William Neth, regional aging services program specialist, Administration on Aging; Harold McNulty, director of the Bureau of Adult Services, State Department of Education and Frederic Viaux, associate dean for Community Service and Program Development, Middlesex Community College.

Local speakers will include Bernadette Lieber, teacher, Hennigan School, Jamaica Plain; Eloise Levitt, teacher, Weeks Junior High School, Newton; Deborah Insel, teacher, South Boston and Jack McGrail, senior citizen.

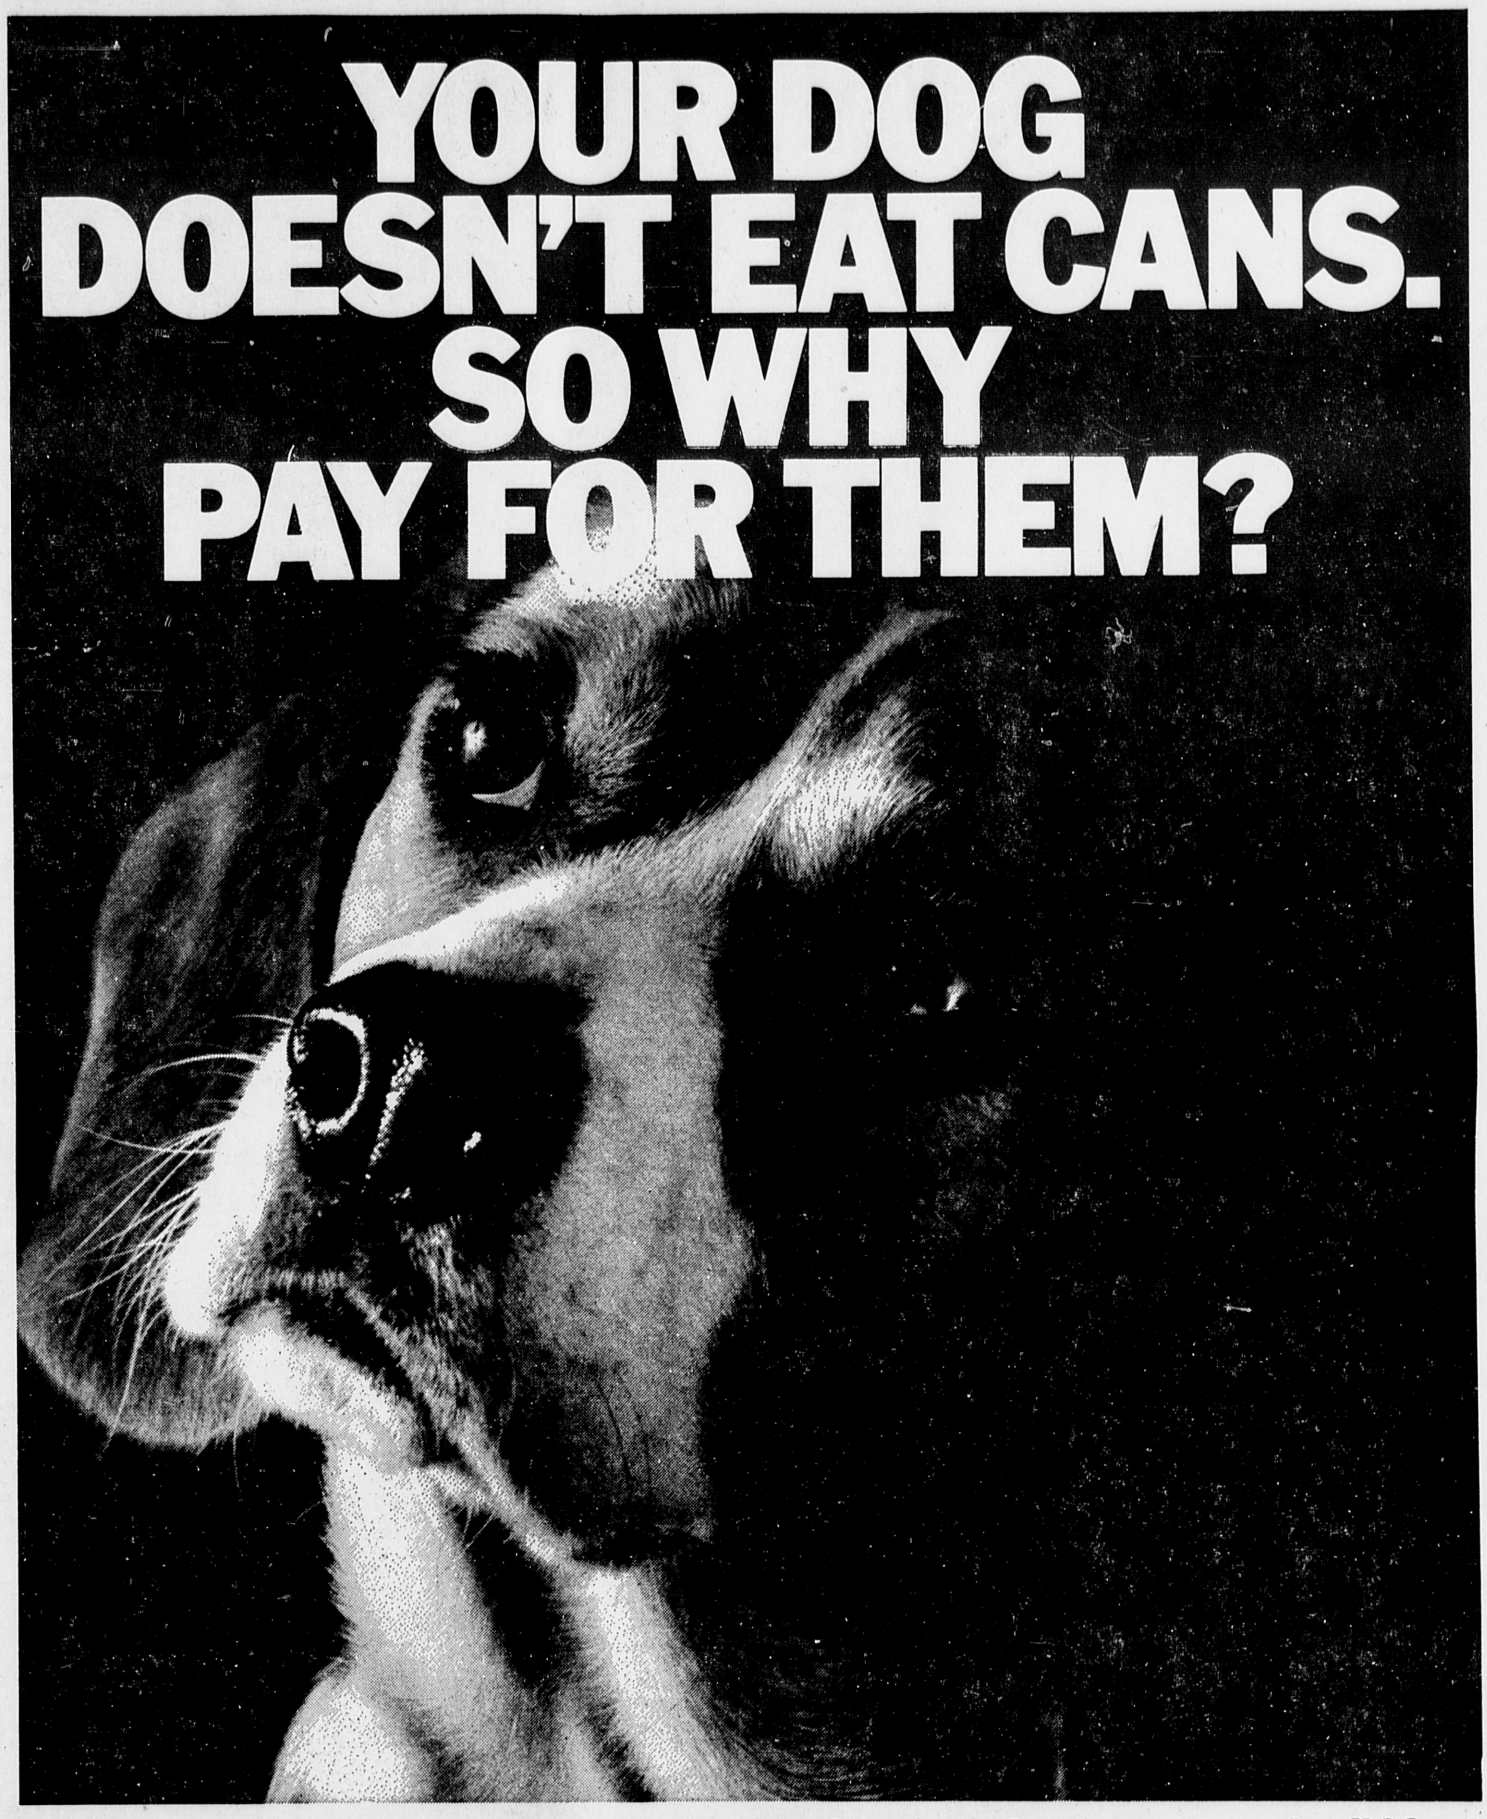

For further information and registration call Miss Sullivan at 731-3300, ext. 353.

YOUR DOG DOESN'T EAT CANS. SO WHY PAY FOR THEM?

Meal for meal, meaty Gaines·burgers® give your dog as much great taste and solid food as the leading national canned dog food. And Gaines·burgers cost less, too.

Instead of spending extra to get canned food, spend less and get Gaines·burgers.®

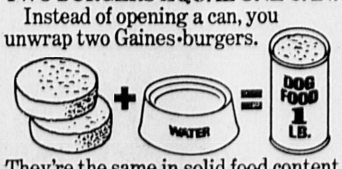

Gaines·burgers have as much complete balanced nourishment as canned food.

Equally important, Gaines·burgers taste as good as canned food. (Our tests show dogs like Gaines·burgers as much as or more than the leading canned food.)

What Gaines·burgers don't have is a can. Which is one of the reasons they're less expensive.

TWO BURGERS EQUAL ONE CAN.

Instead of opening a can, you unwrap two Gaines·burgers.

They're the same in solid food content as a 15½-oz. can of dog food—without the water. (Canned food is up to 74% water.)

And one box of Gaines·burgers gives your dog six meaty meals—or as much as six cans. Yet 12 Gaines·burger patties cost less than six cans of the leading dog food.* Compare prices for yourself in your own supermarket, and you'll see.

So when you buy Gaines·burgers, you buy your dog food by the week, instead of the can—and save.

WE'LL PAY YOU TO PROVE YOUR DOG WILL LIKE THEM.

You may have seen our TV commercials where we show that dogs who eat canned food love Gaines·burgers. Most dogs do.

But the only way to prove your dog will love them is to have your dog try them. Which is why we've provided the coupon below.

Take it to the supermarket tomorrow. It's good for 10¢ toward a box of Gaines·burgers.

Polarized glasses and foreign cars don't mix

NEW YORK (UPI) — So you own a foreign car and wear polarized sugnlasses.

You may need to give up one or the other, according to the American Optometric Association (AOA).

The problem, says the AOA, is that studies show that polarizing lenses expose stress patterns in the windows of some foreign-made cars, and some drivers find this distracting. It adds up to a potential safety hazard on the road.

Now if you are a head-tilter, to boot —forget it. Polarizing lenses just aren't your thing. Studies also show that while such lenses are effective in reducing glare, head-tilting cuts this effectiveness.

So you expect to keep the car and discard the glasses. Then comes this problem: protecting your eyes from the sun.

For real eye protection —not just sunglasses —optometric studies now clearly favor grey tinted lenses, in medium or dark densities.

This tint offers maximum protection without distorting color perception. Green is a second choice but does affect color vision slightly. All other colors, including formerly recommended smoke, haze and brown, and lightly tinted fashion glasses are strictly for funwear and should not be used as sunglasses, says the AOA.

What about those new photochromatic lenses that adjust automatically to changing light? They do indeed change density, going from light to dark and vice versa, indoors as well as outdoors. However, yyour optometrist will point out these reservations:

—Photochromatic lenses do not absorb all the harmful light rays and are not the best choice for consistent exposure to bright sunlight outdoors.

—Photochromatic lenses require a breaking-in period. They must be subjected to a number of lightening-darkening cycles before maximum change can be achieved with relative ease.

—An automobile windshield can interfere with the photochromatic darkening process by blocking out ultra-violet rays neeed to trigger the process.

If you wear glasses, your lens prescription can be ground into photochromatic, tinted or polarizing sunlenses and usually are a oetter choice than clip-n sunglasses.

Plastic lenses are lighter and more impact-resistant but are more easily scratched than is glass. Your choice may depend on how active you are outdoors.

A note to contact lens wearers: the new soft contact lenses do not increase senstivity to light, as hard lenses do.

Your eye doctor is the best guide for your specific sun vision needs. He may even make an offer for your foreign car if you decide to keep those sexy-looking polarized shades.

Catalytic converter EPA's answer to pollution

DETROIT (UPI) — Like the seat belt-ignition interlock on this year's cars, the catalytic converter is almost sure to be the most talked-about and leastliked feature of the 1975 models.

It's an emission control device that will be on about 80 per cent of next year's cars, will add about $150 to the price of the car and will send motorists searching for unleaded gasoline.

The catalytic converter is the auto industry's answer to the government's orders in 1970 to take the automobile out of the pollution picture by 1975. Many industry executives admit it's not the best answer.

But the mufflerlike device treats the exhaust after combustion and will allow automakers to retune their engines and take off some of the emissioncontrol equipment that has cut into both mileage and performance. Various estimates place the fuel economy improvement between 3 and 13 per cent.

Basically, the catalytic converter is like a little chemical plant furnace mounted beneath the floorboard of the car.

The hot exhaust gases containing noxious carbon monoxide and unburned hydrocarbons are passed through the device containing two noble metal catalysts —platinum and palladium —available only from South Africa and the Soviet Union.

In the presence of heat and oxygen, the two gases are changed into harmless caroon dioxide and water. The catalyst metals only hasten the reaction. They are not affected by it and should last 50,000 miles with no significant deterioration.

That, at least, is what the industry now claims for the device which the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) says must last 50,000 miles.

Along with the catalytic converter, automakers will offer an emission control package consisting of improved carburetors, early fuel evaporation system, exhaust gas recirculation, air injection pump, an evaporative control system, positive crankcase ventilation and a high energy ignition.

All those devices may not be present on every car, but most will and the entire cost for 1975 should average between $130 and $155 a car. In California, where the requirements are even stiffer, there could be an additional cost of between $35 and $45.

According to EPA standards set for 1975 cars, hydrocarbon emissions in California will be reduced by at least 94 per cent from the uncontrolled cars of the 1960's and 90 per cent in the other 49 states. Carbon monoxide 0 per cent in California and 8 per cent elsewhere.

Those levels aren't as strict as the government originally wanted. They are interim standards set for 1975 and even more stringent levels are in store for 1976 unless Congress, as expected, pushes back the original standards even further.

One industry scientist has raised the question of whether it's necessary to get the lead out of gasoline.

Dr. D. Maxwell Teague, chief research scientists at Chrysler which has fought the catalytic converters but will use them, says laboratory tests indicate it's not the lead additive that contaminates the converter.

Teague identified the culprit as ethylene dibromide, one of two "scavengers" added to gasoline to pull unburned lead out of the engine, minimixing the accumulation of lead on spark plugs, exhaust valves and combustion chamber walls.

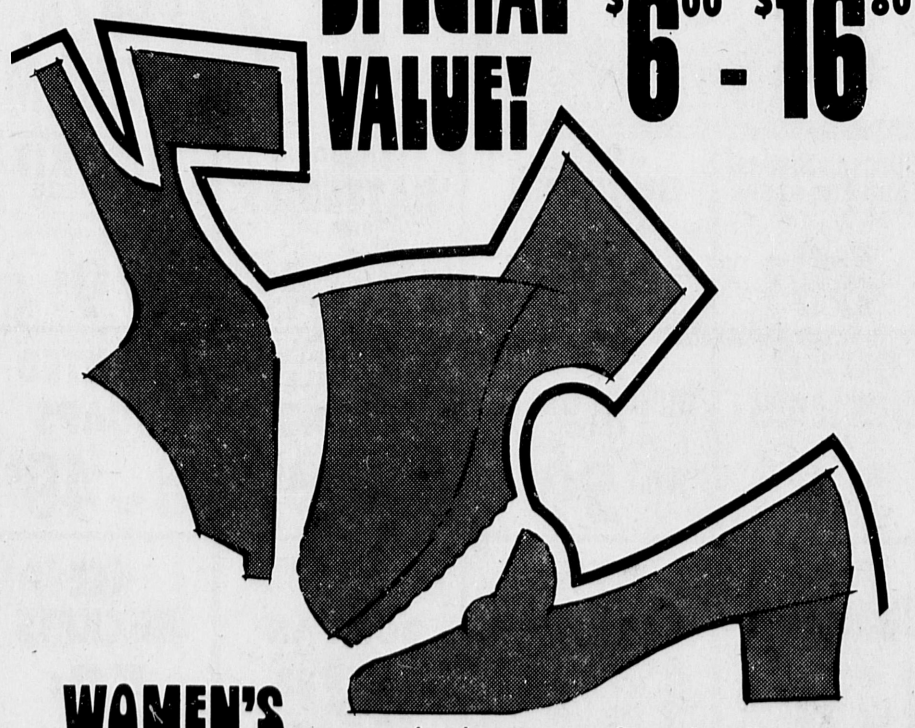

While admitting his findings are preliminary because there has been no "on-the-road" testing, Teague did hold out the possibility that leaded fuel may be used if the ethylene dibromide is removed.

Whether the catalystic converter will bring fuel economy won't be known until the EPA begins its new mileage tests this summer. If it doesn't materialize, many American motorists will question the extra cost of cleaning up the air.

Mary Louise Edwards

Mary Louise (Wheeler) Edwards, 96, of the Walker Missionary Home, Auburndale, died Thursday (July 11) at Wellesley Manor.

A memorial service was held for her Wednesday (July 17) in Centenary Methodist Church, Auburndale.

Mrs. Edwards graduated from Columbia University Teacher's College in 1900 and taught kindergarten in the Montclair, N.J., public schools for 11 years. From 1911 to 1930, she was an educational missionary in the Marathi Mission, Sholapur, India.

After learning the Marathi language, she served as a teacher for seven years in the Mary B. Harding Kindergarten Training School and was the school's principal from 1919 to 1930.

On Dec. 23, 1930, she married Rev. James F. Edwards, an English Wesleyan Methodist minister assigned to the Marathi Mission. Rev. Edwards was appointed principal of the United Theological College of Western India and Mrs. Edwards became its dean of women. They continued their work in India until 1945.

In 1947, they came to the Walker Missionary Home. Both were active in Centenary Methodist Church until Rev. Edwards died in 1951. Mrs. Edwards had been at Wellesley Manor Nursing Home since 1964.

Wins title

BOSTON (UPI) — New England junior welterweight champion Tony Petronelli, 139 pounds, of Bridgwater, Mass., won the U. S. junior welterweight title in a 12-round split decision over Hector Matta, 140, of San Juan, P. R., Tuesday night.

"His father was there also and I asked him what was the main reason he was at the tryout. Did he have any thoughts about his boy playing professionally some day or did he simply want us to take a look at him?

"The father was emphatic on one point. He wanted his boy to continue in school. 'But,' he said, 'I also want the people in baseball to see him.' Truthfully, the kid has been bugging me to let him play professional baseball."

Works of Chelsea painter on exhibit at Fine Arts Museum

Arthur Clifton Goodwin - called the Beau Brummel of Chelsea, a dandy, a forgotten man - was, above all else, an artist with an exuberance for life that overflowed into his oils and pastels. A.C. Goodwin is the largest exhibition of works by this little-known Bostonian ever presented. Ninety oil paintings and pastels will be on view at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, through August 25.

Goodwin, a self-taught painter, began his career in Boston around 1900. His personal interpretations of city streets and parks invite the viewer into an intimate, poetic scene. From the Boston Common to Beacon Hill, and on to snow-dusted Copley Square, Goodwin's paintings mirror his indirect influence by American impressionists. His delicate perceptions of the relations between light and color and his habit of improvising contribute to the easy spontaneity of Goodwin's style.

In the 1920's Goodwin moved to New York where he focused on the monumental and majestic, bringing his subject matter to the foreground. Central Park and the Hudson River countryside were natural subjects for this outdoorsman. Eight years later when he returned to Boston, his preoccupation with volume added a boldness and grandeur to his style.

Throughout his career, Goodwin's work displayed a distinctly American character - natural, and full of simple grace. His impressions - parks in Boston or New York, hills and trees in Massachusetts and New York State - are among the significant achievements of the American impressionists.

An illustrated catalogue compiled by the Painting Department and printed in conjunction with this exhibition is available for $2.00 at the Museum Shop.

Special summer activities at Old Sturbridge Village

STURBRIDGE, Mass — Summer is alive at Old Sturbridge Village, vibrating with a range of demonstrations and activities illustrating life in rural New England 150 years ago.

The outdoor museum, focusing now on the seasonal pace and changes in a recreated setting, presents drama and music productions, as well as new and revised exhibitions that bring to life a sense of early America.

Around the Common, the Village, following its tradition, offers these special music and drama activities:

In the Meetinghouse, the annual historical drama program includes daily (except Sunday) performances of "The Deed of Gift," an 1822 comedy written by Samuel Woodworth, and "Yankee: The Character of Early Nineteenth Century New England," both made possible with the aid of funds from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities. "Yankee" is an interpretive historical revue based on excerpts from travel accounts, memoirs, reflections and other source material of the late eighteenth and nineteenth centuries.

Visitors also may gather in the Meetinghouse each Sunday at 4 p.m. for a nonsectarian worship service.

During July and August, the music of early New England is performed by the fifers and drummers of the Sturbridge Martial Band, by the ballad singer on the common, and by young women in the Ladies Parlor of the Tavern, who play the pianoforte and sing the songs taught to young ladies of the Village period (1790-1840).

The first of the Village's Martial Music Days occurs July 27 when the Concord Minute Men fife and drum group joins the Sturbridge Martial Band for an afternoon performance of the fife and drum music that roused early Americans.

In addition, the demonstration and interpretation of antique muzzle-loading firearms will be given each day, outside the Gun Exhibit building.

New this summer is the Lighting Demonstrations exhibit. The building, located near the museum's formal collection of Early Lighting Devices, includes the interpretation and demonstration of candle dipping and other means by which early Americans lighted their homes and shops.

Changed to reflect the summer season is the museum's most recent restoration, the Asa Knight Store, moved to the Village last fall from Dummerston, Vt. Hay rakes and straw hats, gay ribbons and cotton prints have replaced axes, woolen caps, mittens and socks and woolen fabric, among the store's stock of nearly 2,000 carefully researched items.

Old Sturbridge Village is a living, outdoor museum where the agricultural way of life of early nineteenth century New England is re-created and presented to twentieth century visitors. Here, men and women do the work of another era in the homes, shops and fields of the 200-acre Village.

At the museum's working farm, the crops are doing well. The first hay crop is being taken while the rye grows ripe. In the Village houses, women tend daily household chores, spinning, weaving, washing, fireplace cooking, food preparation and preservation, and butter and cheesemaking.

These activities and other craft demonstrations, performed by authentically-costumed people, serve to help interpret early, rural New England for visitors today.

A nonprofit, independent, educational institution, Old Sturbridge Village is located on Route 20 at the intersection of Interstate 90 (Massachusetts Turnpike) and Interstate 86. The museum is open year round, from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. during the summer months.

An admission fee is charged.

Drug penalties are tough overseas

Keep off the grass—and all other illicit drugs when traveling abroad. Getting busted overseas could cost you your life.

Hundreds of young Americans already have found out the hard way that foreign countries are often tougher than the United States when it comes to enforcing laws against drug use, smuggling or trafficking.

Recent official figures show that about 900 Americans — most of them under 30 years of age—are being held in jails around the world on various drug charges.

They include a man and two women, arrested in December, 1972, who were sentenced to death by a Turkish court last year for smuggling 225 pounds of hashish into the country from Syria. The sentences were later commuted to life imprisonment and more recently reduced to about 12 years under a general amnesty.

Penalties Are Severe

sMany foreign countries do not differentiate between the so-called "soft" drugs like marijuana and the "hard" like heroin and possession of "grass" or "hash" can be punished with expulsion, prison terms and heavy fines—up to more than $100,000 in Spain, for instance.

Penalties for smuggling or trafficking are much more severe, ranging up to life imprisonment in Canada and the Philippines and the death penalty in Turkey and Iran.

A leaflet published by the U. S. Department of State notes that "prison conditions in some countries are deplorable." It warns that many countries, including Mexico, have no provisions for bail on drug offenses and that pre-trial detention "can be prolonged—in some cases up to a year."

In many countries, the leaflet cautions, drug pushers are also informers who tip off police or customs officials after making a sale.

No Protection

"The pusher...collects twice in such cases: he receives money from the buyer and a reward... for acting as an informer. Many young Americans have fallen into such a trap."

Americans traveling abroad— except those with diplomatic immunity—are subject to the laws of the country which they are visiting. They are not protected by U. S. law and the authority of American consular officials to intervene when a U. S. citizen breaks local laws is limited.

When informed, consular officials will visit the detained American and provide him with a list of local lawyers and will also notify his family and friends of his predictment.

"The consul may also act as an intermediary where the prison diet is below subsistence level, but prisoners' families or friends must pay for food supplements," the leaflet says.

Drug Arrests Up

At the same time, it stresses that U. S. officials can not ask for or obtain different treatment for Americans than that given other persons under the laws of the country concerned.

In addition, it points out that U. S. laws prohibit the use of official funds to pay legal fees or other expenses for any American held for violating local laws.

Americans returning from abroad can expect to be carefully scrutinized by U. S. customs inspectors as part of the intensfied anti-drug campaign.

The U. S. Customs Service reported that illicit drugs valued at more than $432 million were confiscated in more than 21,000 seizures during the 1973 fiscal year. That was an increase of more than 7,600 over the previous fiscal year, or a jump of 57 per cent.

Arrests for narcotic violations were up 21 per cent to 9,454, while convictions for federal narcotic offenses skyrocketed from 2,202 to 3,978, or 80 per cent.

Copies of the leaflets headed "Notice: Drug Arrests Abroad" may be obtained at U. S. Passport Agency offices or by writing to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington D.C. 20402.

Hollywood beat

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — John Amos, the black father in the new "Good Times" series, may well envy the character he plays as compared to his real life role as husband and parent.

In the series Amos is unemployed much of the time, but he is the solid, authoritative figure in the black family trying to keep body and soul together in a Chicago housing project.

As an actor Amos is fully employed. In addition to "Good Times" he has been a recurring character in "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" playing weather newscaster Gordy, and he can be seen in a singing commercial for a national hamburger chain.

But Amos, a heavily muscled former athlete, is in the midst of a divorce from his wife, who won custody of their two children.

Loves Animals

He rarely speaks of his private life or reasons for divorce.

For the time being, Amos lives in a rented apartment on the periphery of the San Fernando Valley, where government-owned land abutted his own property.

His choice for living near open country was not accidental. Amos is an animal lover of gargantuan proportions.

When he and Mrs. Amos separated she also won custody of three horses, 40 chickens, five cats, four kittens, three dogs and three goats. All of the critters were dear to the heart of John Amos.

Wants Another Zoo

Asked why, he answers: "After a hard day's work in show business I like to come back to animals. They're easier to be around. They're passive and conducive to relaxing. I love to feed the chickens and go horseback riding."

Amos is looking to relocate near his former residence and establish another menagerie.

As a rule he works from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. during the week. He watches his diet and skips lunch in favor of working out at a gym during the noon break.

His social life is almost nil. His ties are still with the Mary Tyler Moore group. He is a dinner guest infrequently at the Ed Asners (he plays Lou Grant) and at the home of Valerie Harper and her husband.

Writes TV Scripts

Amos is a relaxed, low key man with a rich sense of humor and a great compassion for his CBS show. He thinks "Good Times" is the first show to clearly identify the black family in terms that can be understood by other Americans.

Rock 'n Roll

Rock 'n' roll has always been the music of the young—and as such, it has been excessively self-conscious, often far too eager to justify its own existence. In 1974, the need for justification is gone, but the self-consciousness is, if anything, even more pronounced:

"So there you are, you known as much as I do—(we're) rock 'n' roll laborers after the golden fleece. Still rock's like a drug and I'm an addict. I'll still be here when I get my pension, if anyone will have me."

The words are Hunter's and are found near the conclusion of a book—"Diary of a Rock 'n' Roll Star"—a record of Mott's tour of the U.S. in late 1972. It was a good time to keep a diary, because though Hunter couldn't have been certain of it, Mott's music had finally jelled and the band's fortunes wee about to bbegin a sudden upturn.

Besides making fascinating reading for those interested in the Inside Truth about the rock 'n' roll biz, the book (currently available only in England), is a revealing portrait of Hunter himself. Not totally revealing, but close enough.

Of all the tens of thousands of bands in the world there is one that is most representative of the best of rock in 1974: Mott the Hoople. Mott, fronted by the carefully nurtured charisma of lead singer Ian Hunter, has created its own niche in the convoluted hierarchy of 1970's rock: more than a cult band, less than a super-group.

Mott's music is a calculated balance of theater and stops-out rock 'n' roll, more akin to Jerry Lee Lewis than to the Beatles. But while Jerry Lee's greatest moments were genuinely spontaneous, Mott's are carefully planned. Mott the Hoople's approach to its audience is one of sophisticated emotional manipulation.

That's no criticism, simply a fact. And the key word there is "sophisticated"—the old rock 'n' rollers did the same thing, just a bit more haphazardly. As a result, much of rock 'n' roll in 1974 sounds about the same as it did two decades ago, except louder.

And there is no better rock 'n' roll band in the world today than Mott the Hoople.

Family editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Los Angeles schools in the fall will be using a new book — "Free to Be . . . You and Me."

The book aims to lessen sex stereotyping at the pint-sized human level —giving boys chances to be nurses if they wish and freeing girls of guilt feelings if they aim to be firemen. Er firepersons.

The "free" movement, of which the book is a part, also may be making itself evident in schools about your town.

A television special by the name of the book, and based on its contents, and a record by that name (which started the book and the free movement) was co-produced by actress Marlo Thomas and Carole Hart over ABC some time back.

The other day Ms. Thomas and Ms. Hart received the Mass Media Award from the National Conference of Christians and Jews (NCCJ) for advancing brotherhood through the free movement.

Movement Takes Off

The record that started it all was produced by the Ms. Foundation for Women Inc. It incorporated a few stories — sans sex stereotyping —that first appeared in Ms. Magazine.

And then —the whole free children movement took off, to hear Ms. Thomas tell it, as she did during the award ceremony at a luncheon of the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

The book with the stories for little persons wanting to be what they wan to be, relardless of job roles imposed by stereotyping, is published by McGraw Hill. It is expected to be installed in other school systems as educators move away from sex stereotyping literature and programs in the era of woman's lib —and a movement away from sexism and toward personhood.

In accepting the award Ms. Thomas noted that it was for a contribution to Brotherhood. She said she thought there was room on the trophy for the insertion of the word sisterhood.

She said her involvement with the "free" book, record and television special was a movement.

Gift of Self

"It has given much more to me than I gave to it," she said.

The idea behind it all, as she put it:

"If we believe children are the hope of the future, we must let them develop their talents —without limits and boundaries and give them a chance to be themselves."

When the record first came out, Ms. Thomas said there was an overwhelming response. Teachers wrote in and wanted more materials. That's when the record became a book.

"I've really put my whole self into this from my little girlhood," Ms. Thomas said.

"One day while this was going on, the persons inside of me said, whatever became of the person who was inside of you."

As a result, she is "constantly receiving a new gift of self."

"I wish you all the same gift of yourself," she said when accepting the award presented at the drop-in luncheon of the National Acadmey of Television Arts and Sciences in New York.

One of the stories —in the book, on the record, in the TV special —is about William, a little boy who wants a doll. His grandmother understands, she buys him one.

Among the letters Ms. Hart has received is one from a little boy.

"My favorite is William wants a doll," the boy wrote. "Could you do another called Stephen wants a doll."

The boy's name, obviously, Stephen. He wanted a doll.

Ms. Hart and Ms. Thomas are amazed how the book is changing adult lives, too. One letter told of a nurse who had read the "Free To Be . . . You and Me" book to children in the hospital. Then a reaction set in. The nurse with some time to herself later came to the conclusion that she was railroaded into being a nurse — because it seemed one of the "female" jobs.

Hero with a cause

LENEXA, Kan. (UPI) — There are those who call Charlie Plumb, not complimentarily,a "professional hero." He doesn't like the tag but doesn't duck it, either.

Professional or otherwise, Plumb is a legitimate hero, decorated as such by the U.S. Navy. And he spent six of the best years of his life, 2,103 days, in North Vietnamese prison camps where his body stagnated and his soul flourished.

The days of captivity, he says, were an unmatched learning experience and he believes he must tell his story and share his learning. He makes his living doing so, as a paid speaker.

His heroism took seed on May 19, 1967. It happened to be the birthday of Ho Chi Minh, then the North Vietnamese premier, and it was only five days before Plumb's tour of duty was to end.

Lt. Cmdr. Joseph Charles Plumb Jr., was threading his F4B Phantom fighter jet through antiaircraft fire on a bombing mission over North Vietnam. A surface-to-air misd sile brought him down. l

Unhappy Homecoming

Six years later, on his first day of freedom at an air base in the Philippines, Plumb learned that his wife was divorcing him, his best friend had died of cancer and his country appeared p;p"reedom meant to a man denied it, of how he endured through love of God, love of country, pride, self-discipline. The children listened.

"If I hadn't been a prisoner of cwar, nobody would have wanted to listen to Charlie Plumb plug motherhood, apple pie and the American flag," he says now. "We 566 guys were in an enviable position —we came back and people listened to us. Now I have a personal philosophy that when a person finds out he can do something right, something good, then it becomes far more—it becomes an obligation."

Keeping Out Front

It's been a year and some months since that decision. All but a handful of the POWs have retreated from the public glare. Plumb and a few others have stayed in the forefront. He has made over 450 public appearances since returning, accepted some 60 plaques and other mementoes, cspoken to more than 200,000 students from New Mexico to Florida.

Now Plumb says he has "slowed down": he gives only eight to 10 speeches a week. He has at least one scheduled every night for six weeks in advance.

"I think interest in the POWs has died to a certain extent," he says, "but I sure haven't seen it."

He found he was so popular, and he felt his message was needed so much, that he retired from the Navy in January and incorporated a public relations firm to promote Charlie Plumb full-time. He has one full-time employe, two part-time.

Why does he do it?

"I see a great need in reviving patriotism in this country, in reviving credibility in its leadership," Plumb explained, his voice earnest. "The country's just been up to its ears in the antiestablishment approach.

Legislation in congress for "nuclear parks"

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (UPI) — If Congress approves a new concept in energy development, a radically different type of park might one day rise in Oklahoma along the banks of the Arkansas River.

Legislation is now before Congress which would authorize construction of "nuclear parks," or the clustering of atomic energy facilities now often widely separated.

The Muskogee Chamber of Commerce was one of the first to make a determined bid to land one, hoping to use the wilderness within the grounds of Camp Gruber, a World War II training area.

There are actually two different ideas of a nuclear park.

One would be a huge power center, including a series of reactors to provide electric power for a group of states. The other would carry out the entire development of nuclear fuel and this is the concept considered most likely for eastern Oklahoma.

Enrichment Plant

The first step would be an enrichment plant, to supply nuclear fuel for burgeoning civilian nuclear power plants. The Atomic Energy Commission has indicated a need for four more enrichment facilities, the first to begin production in April, 1981, cto augment the three present ones.

Other steps in the cycle might include a conversion plant, pelletization and fabrication facilities, reprocessing plant and an installation to take care of waste byproducts. Each step, however, would be subject to separate licensing procedures with regard to safety and environmental impact.

The Muskogee chamber recently flew a planeload of more than 60 persons, including some avowed foes of nuclear industry development, to Oak Ridge, Tennm, to hear from AEC officials what might be involved in such an undertaking.

Bill Oakley, an American congressional fellow on the staff of Sen. Henry Bellmon, R-Okla., has been in on planning by the Muskogee group from the beginning.

"Nuclear fuel is the only thing that could stabilize the price of energy," Oakley said.

Future Generations

Among the most outspoken opponents is Mrs. Ilene Younghein of Oklahoma City, representing "Friends of The Earth." She went on the Oak Ridge trip and askedn "Do we have the moral right to leave this to future generations?"

Present fuel enrichment plants operate under the gaseous diffusion system, which increases the concentration of uranium through thousands of steps by compressing uranium hexafluoride gas against a porous barrier containing millions of holes tinier than twomillionths of an inch.

Bellmon said an enrichment plant in the Muskogee area would more likely be one of the newer gas centrifuge process.

John Lewis Stone, editor of the Muskogee Daily Phoenix and Times-Democrat, is co-chairman with Harold Abitz of Oklahoma Gas & Electric Co., of the committee seeking support for the project.

"There will be exhaustive public impact hearing," Stone said. "We want to have a thorough study of the feasibility made. I would think even those who are opposed would be interested in having a study made."

BILLS SIGN RECEIVER

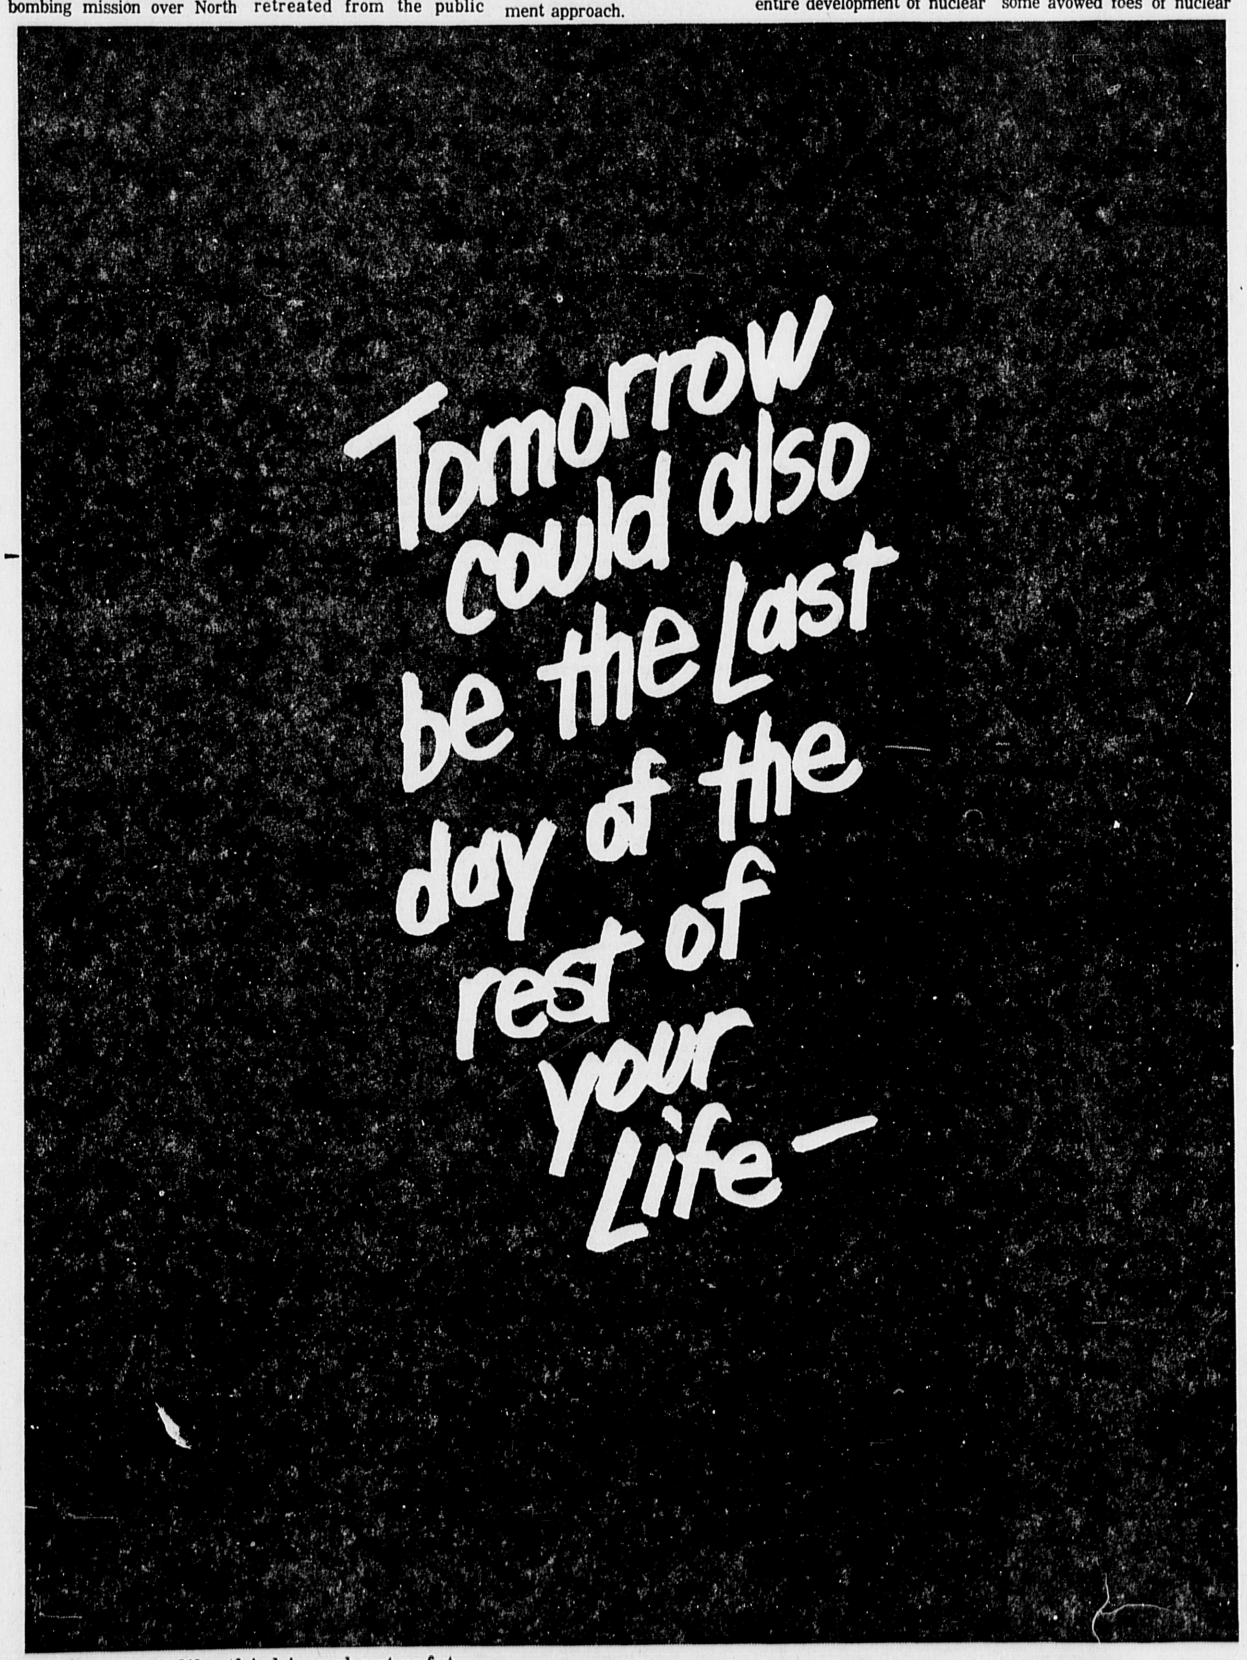

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Gary Heyman, a rookie wide receiver from Penn State, Thursday signed a multiyear contract with the Buffalo Bills.

The 6-foot-1, 198-pound Heyman was the leading punt returner among the nation's collegians last season with a 19.2 yard average on 23 returns.

PIRATES BUY BRINKMAN

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Chuck Brinkman, a reserve catcher, was purchased by the Pittsburgh Pirates from the Chicago White Sox Thursday to replace the injured Mike Ryan on the roster.

Ryan has been put on the Pirates' disabled list with a back injury.

If you don't like thinking about safety, think where you might be without it.

National Safety Council

The National Safety Council is a federally-chartered nonprofit, nongovernmental, public service organization, a staff of over 400 persons works with a membership of more than 15,000 safety-minded organizations, and their millions of employees and members, and a volunteer force of thousands. Safety is the only business of the Council, which develops and implements accident prevention programs reaching every segment of American life.

Players' veteran to direct fall musical

After a year's absence from directoral assignment, Daniel Kosow of Chestnut Hill returns to the fold to direct the Newton Country Players' Fall musical, Richard Rogers andLorenz Hart's perennial favorite, "Pal Joey."

The musical will open the Players' 19th season of community theatre activity.

The production will be available for programming to sponsor groups and theatre parties interested in fund raising for Sunday through Thursday bookings from Nov. 14 to Nov. 30, for performances at the Rebecca Pomroy Playhouse, 84 Eldredge St., Newton, with its seating capacity of approximately 200.

Kosow, director - in - residence with the Players for the past five years, was recipient of the "Best Director" award for community theatres in New England at the 19th Annual N.E. Theatre Conference Drama Festival in 1972 with the Players' entry of their highly acclaimed musical detective story "Sam Stiller, Private Eye." It was the first and only children's show ever selected as a finalist in the NETC's 21 year history.

Aslo for the Players, Kosow directed another children's musical, "Gabriel Ghost," the highly successful new nineteenth century musical melodrama, "Gold in the Hills or The Dead Sister's Secret," the three-act farce "See How They Run" and the one-act plays "Dinner for One" and "Suppressed Desires." Other directoral credits include the original scripts "The Visit" for B.U. Workshop and "Just Around the Corner."

A member of the Newton Cultural Affairs Commission Advisory Board and a five-year member of the Players' Board of Turstees, Kosow held office for three years on the Players' Executive Board before serving a dual term as president. From 1969-71, he was a member of the NETC staff, serving as editor of their newsletter and is still currently a community theatre play reviewer for the NETC.

On stage, Kosow has appeared with the Players as Hinezie, the time-study man, in "Pajama Game," as Richard Pawling in "The Shock of Recognition" from "You Know I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running," and as the Envoy in "The Balcony," a role he repeated both as an entry and finalist in the NETC Drama Festival.

His performance as the Older Actor in the three-character avant-garde "War" with the Players in 1969, also an entrant into the Festival, was instrumental in the winning of two major awards and seven guest appearances with the Entr' Actors Guild at the Fenwick Theatre, Holy Cross College.

For the Players, he created also the lead roles of Sky Masterson in "Guys and Dolis," the devil Mr. Applegate in "Damn Yankees," Judge Aristede Forestiere in "Can Can," Daniel Corban in "Catch Me If You Can" and Sir Lawrence Wargrave in "Ten Little Indians." He also performed in their mini-musical revue, "The Ones That Stopped the Show."

Daniel Kosow

While assistant producer at the Falmouth Playhouse, he appeared in the national touring company production of "The Best Man," which starred Frank Lovejoy and Sheppard Strudwick, and in 1968, he appeared with the Weston (Vt.) Playhouse as Vittorio Vidal in "Sweet Charity" and in "Brigdoon." Last summer, he received rave reviews for his portrayal of Senex in "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" at Playhouse 101, Milford, N.H.

Kosow was featured in the full-length Enfield Productions film "Ruby" and was a leading performer in the Boston University radio series "Harvard Square." Other film credits include the Steve McQueen movie "Thomas Crown Affair" and academy award winner Cliff Robertson's "Charly," in which he also worked as stand-in for character actor Leon Janney. He has authored a number of original revues, as well as the libretto for the original musical comedy "The Wicked Picket Fence."

His educational background includes a journalism degree from Boston University, a diploma in Theatre Management from Musical Arena Theatres Assn., NYC., and study of stage direction under William Lacey at B.U., mime under Jan Kessler at Brandeis University, theatre make-up with Jack Stein at Emerson College, stagecraft with Douglas Maddox at Brandeis U. and American musical theatre with Leo Nickole at Emerson. He has moderated at many publicity institutes and is the author of the syllabus "So You Want Good Publicity."

The Newton Country Players are a non-profit, philanthropic association comprised of local residents, who, as an avocation, are actively engaged in the development, expansion and assistance of theatre activity on community and educational levels. Co-presidents of the group are Mr. and Mrs. Alyn Pinkofsky.

For additional information concerning individual memberships or theatre party sponsorship, phone Jim Sloane at 969-2665 or write to P.O. Box 9, Newton Centre, 02159.

Buyers billboard

A recent column, and news stories, on the potential fire problems associated with "instant on" television sets, failed to mention one possible solution to the problem, which a reader in Huntingdon, Pa., passes on:

"In October, 1970, I bought an Admiral TV for just under $500. The light bill was more than ever for a year with it. I had to take the set in two times to a repair store for new tubes where I found out the constant burning of the tubes made them burn out much faster.

"Then a friend of mine told me about someone who would help me...He said look in back of the set and showed me an instant on and off switch. They are there on most all sets. Don't get me wrong, I think our set is great, except it's not impossible for one to start a fire...Turn off the instant-on button in back and be safe..."

Thanks for the tip.

Theater group plans three August events

Minerals collected by family at library

A few years ago while vacationing in Maine, the Harold Freedman family of Newton was equipped with a newly purchased rock hammer. It hiked up Mt. Apatite and spent a day breaking up rocks and speculating on the interesting mineral special thus revealed.

Though no valuable specimens were uncovered that day, it did stimulate the genesis of their mineral collection which today numbers over 500 specimens of crystallized minerals.

A select group of specimens from their mineral collection is now on exhibit at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre Street, Newton Corner, and will remain on view until the end of August. The exhibit emphasizes the variety of appealing forms of such common minerals as calcite and quartz and is reasonably representative of the type of collection that can be assembled from currently available material without prohibitive expenditures of time and money. The Freedman Collection changes continually, as new specimens are added and others are traded off.

Both Dr. freedman, an associate scientist at Dow Chemical Company's Eastern Research Laboratory in Wayland, and his wife, Marilyn, are active members of the Boston Mineral Club and enjoy the club's varied activities.

Their youngest son, Danny, who will enter Newton South High in the fall, is also an ardent "rock hound," proud of his own rapidly growing collection.

The Freedmans live in Newton Centre with their two older boys, Michael, a senior at South, and David, a sophomore at Northwestern.

Summer hours for the Newton Free Library are Monday-Friday 9 a.m.-9 p.m., through Sept. 1.

Aldermen keep it short

At a late-starting, short, and humdrum meeting of the Board of Aldermen this week, one of the two major items on the docket did not get to a vote, and the other has been the subject of a motion to reconsider.

The proposed ordinance to restrict drinking in public places except by permit was returned to the Legislation & Rules Committee because of uncertainty regarding the permit-issuing authorities and other aspects of the legislation.

Ald. Richard McGrath has filed a motion to reconsider the 20-2 vote extending the life of the Newton-Waltham Regional Refuse Disposal District (RRDD) for another three years.

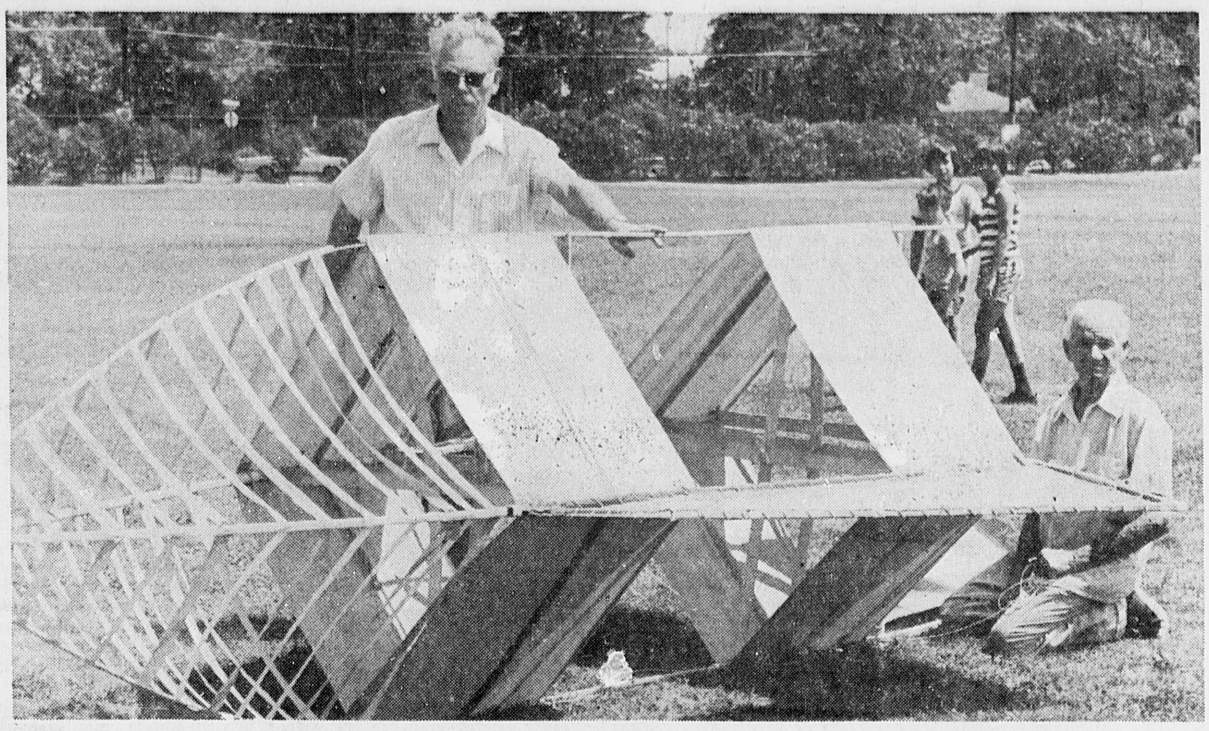

A motion by Ald. Edward Richmond to send the request back to the Public Works Committee had already failed 16-6, prior to the vote affirming the extension.

McGrath spoke at length in opposition to the RRDD and to the fact that the district is obtaining bids on refuse disposal for the city.

The RRDD has been in existence for the past year as a study committee to in-

Reorganization plan back in detail

Kites are fun Leo P. Eustis (kneeling right) of West Newton has invented the soon to be patented kite pictured above. It is 14 feet long and eight feet wide and is also completely collapsible. Nearly six months after the last aldermanic meeting on reorganization, Mayor Theodore Mann has prepared an extensive and detailed "working draft" of his sweeping reorganization program that will affect more than 500 city employees.

The draft has been submitted to a special committee of the Board of Aldermen for its "review and comment." The final plan must be approved without amendment or disapproved by the full Board.

The main points of the plan are theses:

The Public Works Department will take over all maintenance and construction functions previously performed by the Public Buildings and Recreation Department. It will continue to perform the services done by its present divisions.

Public Works then will have seven divisions — facilities maintenance and construction, equipment and vehicle maintenance, sanitation, parks and grounds, highways, water and sewer, and engineering.

A new department, called Purchasing and Central Services, will handle mail, telephone, printing and City Hall custodial services, as well as present Purchasing Department functions.

The present Public Buildings Department will become the Zoning and Inspection Department. The ZID will be responsible for an improved enforcement of building code and zoning regulations. The new department will also incorporate the Department of Weights and Measures.

The Recreation Department will be relieved of the jobs

Voter registration deadline August 13

The last day for registering for the primary electrion is Aug. 13, Election Commission Executive Secretary Alan Licarie reminds would-be voters.

The Election Commission office is open for registration every day from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. for registering new voters, and will have a special registration on Saturday, Aug. 10, from noon until 10 p.m.

Persons enrolled in either political party may vote only in the primary for the party in which they are enrolled. But anyone may change his party registration at the Election Commission office up until Aug. 13.

Application for absentee ballots for registered voters are being taken now for both the primary and the regular election. Application may be made by form at the Election Commission office or by mail.

Persons applying by mail must give their name and Newton address with the address to which they wish the absentee ballot sent. If absentee ballots for both elections are requested, they must be accompanied by two separate letters, one for each election.

Licarie also announced a change in polling place for two precincts in Ward 4.

Voters in Ward 4, precinct 2, will vote at the Auburndale branch library on Auburn Street instead of at the Burr School. In Ward 4, precinct 3, voters will go to Winslow Hall of Lasell Junior College, not to the library.

No landtaking for North parking now

"There will be no landtaking before 1976," Mayor Theodore Mann said clearly about teacher parking at Newton North High School at last week's School Committee meeting.

Leaving open the city's options after 1976 regarding landtaking to provide parking at the school, Mann supported the newest revision of the parking plan, which now provides 336 teacher spaces, up 40 from the last plan.

Despite objections from members of the Newton North High School Neighborhood Association, Dennis Becker and Harold Scheibert, about the Planning Department's disregard of neighborhood concerns and citizen participation, the plan was accepted by the School Committee by a 7-1 vote.

Ward 3 School Committeeman Gerard Byrne was opposed. Ward 5 member Joan Needleman was absent.

The latest plan goes next to the Engineering Department for detailed plans, then to the Design Review Committee for design acceptance and a public hearing, then to the Public Buildings and Finance Committees of the Board of Aldermen, and finally to the full board.

According to James Salter, the mayor's chief administrative officer, the parking lot cannot be built this year because of all these steps.

The "final" plan puts egress and ingress to the lot on Elm Road, part of which will be relocated to the north of its present location. The parking lot will have a large central portion opposite Kimball Terrace with extensions east and west.

The easterly extension will follow the curve of the new part of Elm Road.

Committeeman Herbert Regal questioned the effect that an Environmental Protection Agency regulation on parking would have on the number of spaces sought by the School Department, saying, "We want to be in compliance with the law."

A reduction in parking spaces for employees of municipalities and businesses has been called for by the EPA, plans for which must be submitted by the end of this month. The reductions will go into effect May 31, 1975.

According to the EPA, all employers of more than 50 people must reduce their present parking spaces by 25 per cent or by whatever amount results in parking for not more than 75 per cent of their employees, whichever reduction is greater.

Superintendent of Schools Aaron Fink quickly followed up on Regal's comment by saying, "We really need 500 spaces."

Newton North High School employs 280 teachers, according to School Department figures, plus some part-time special teachers.

Students are not provided for by EPA regulations.

Plans have not been completed by the School Department for submission to the EPA. Affected schools would be the two high schools and the five junior high schools.

The final parking plan apparently still does not allow enough athletic-field space for the high school. Supt. Fink reportedly has said that busing students to other fields will still be necessary.

At least two homeowners in the area that has been considered for landtaking to enlarge the parking areas were not satisfied with Mayor Mann's statement on landtaking.

Mrs. Dennis Becker of Elm Road complained that the uncertainty of landtaking "has put a damper" on any sale of property there, and Paul O'Connor, also of Elm Road, said that land at each end of the "spine" of the School — Main Street, a wide corridor that runs the length of the school — should be taken, since the two ends are the natural "end focuses" of the school.

Board investigates permit muddle

An inquiry into the "McDonald affair" last week by the Land Use Committee of the Board of Aldermen yielded little new information and caused ill-feeling among several aldermen.

After two and a half hours, one of the real estate brokers involved was heard to say, "Unbelievable, unbelievable."

The investigation was held to try to unravel the tangle leading up to the issuance and then revocation of a building permit for McDonald's Restaurants to remodel a building at 330 Walnut St., Newtonville, for use as a 148-seat restaurant.

The permit was issued July 10 and revoked July 12 by Building Commissioner Gene Larson, who after 11 months on the job felt for the firt time the full wrath of the Board of Aldermen.

At a special meeting of the Board on July 11, some aldermen castigated Larson for not having let the Board know that McDonald's, which had earlier indicated its intention not to go ahead with its plans for the property, had applied for the permit.

The Board of Aldermen had denied a proposed ordinance amendment on June 18 that would have required McDonald's and all other businesses in the city to provide additional parking when the use of a building changed.

Between June 18 and June 27, according to John Gorman, a broker who had originally brought together McDonald's and the then owners, Philip and Richard Bram, another tenant had withdrawn and McDonald's again expressed interest in a restaurant there.

Much of the argument centered on statements by the Brams, and denials by Ald. Robert Tennant, that they had told Tennant on June 18 that McDonald's was going to come back.

Tennant, who is president of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce, did warn at the June 18 meeting that denial of the zoning amendment might clear the way for McDonald's return, but denies that either Philip or Richard Bram told him that the agreement had been definitely consummated.

Richard Bram said at the meeting last Thursday first that he had told Tennant in Tennant's office on June 18 that

Kids indulge in summer learning

By TOM GRAVES
Of the Graphic Staff

Bigelow Junior High School has been transformed this summer to house numerous programs for young children.

The Title One programs originally slated for Lincoln-Eliot School are being run at Bigelow because of construction at Lincoln-Eliot. Junior high furniture has been moved out of many rooms, and in its place stands equipment more suitable to 5. and 6-year olds.

The early childhood opportunities program (ECHO) at Bigelow includes children from nursery school to first grade age.

According to summer principal Joseph Utka, the program is "trying to provide readiness skills for nursery and pre-kindergarten children." This includes "how to get along with other kids" and finding out "what's school like."

Nearly every day there is a field trip leaving the school. Utka says that if a child has not been to a zoo, a farm, or the swan boats, he will not understand a story if he reads about them. Field trips have already gone to the Jordan Marsh Circus, the swan boats, on a cruise of Boston Harbor, and Howard Johnson's.

Utka commented: "Teachers are encouraged to make every tie in with language and self-expression."

At Emerson School, where a similar program is being conducted, children read Dr. Seuss' "Green Eggs and Ham," and proceeded to make and eat green eggs.

The program has accepted non-English speaking youngsters. "Its amazing how they pick up language, just hearing it," Utka noted.

Each teacher at Bigelow has a teacher aide, a student who will be a senior in the Newton high schools next year.

"I don't know what we would do without them," Utka remarked.

Most of the teachers are from the Newton school system.

A four-week Italian program started at Bigelow this week. Each day, directed by Pasquale Puelo and three aides, 50 to 60 children learn about Italian culture and language. The program includes the teaching of both Italian and English, depending on the needs of the children.

The curriculum of the course includes such diverse activities as playing soccer, folk dancing, card games, cooking and playing bocce.

Another program involves 20 Boston State graduate students teaching reading. Each teacher has two students from grades one through eight.

There are also remedial math classes at the school. A math lab for students from grades two to eight is directed by Bill Lorenz. According to Utka, some of the math students have brought friends to the lab.

In one of the halls at Bigelow there are long strips of paper on the floor. Bigelow personnel were at first a bit leery about having young children paint in the school, but a solution was reached, and the hall serves as an art room.

This in addition to other art projects. Many of the math students participate in an art program which includes batiking, woodworking, macrame, and work with plaster of paris.

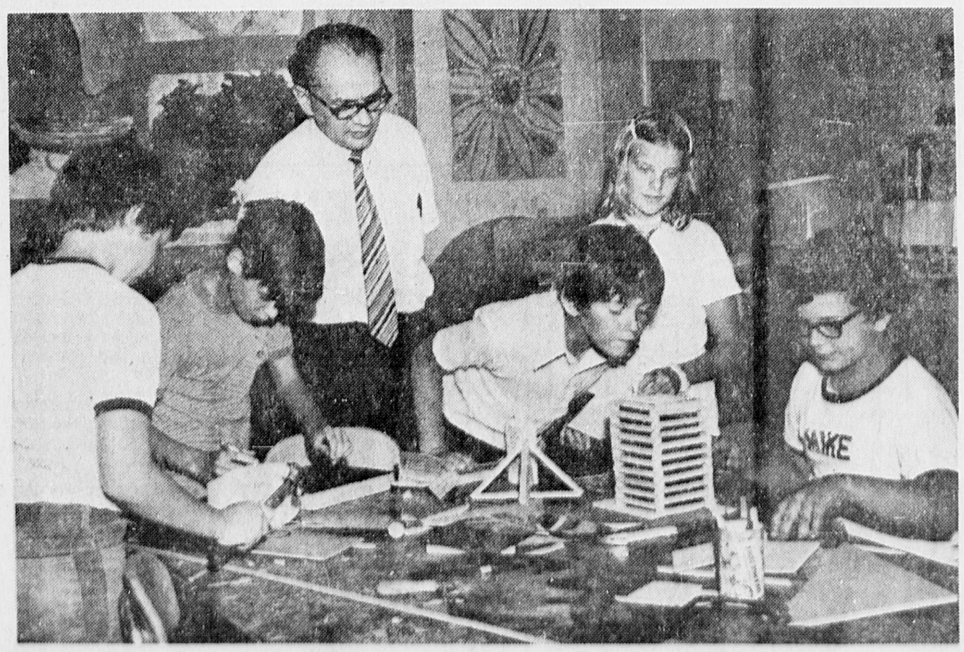

The program at Bigelow have not been limited to public school students. They have also included students from Newton Catholic and St. Jean's.

In all, there are approximately 291 students involved in programs at the school. A way to identify one is to look at his head. If he is wearing a blue navy surplus hat he is probably going to school this summer at Bigelow. Utka acquired a large supply of these hats for 10 cents apiece from a warehouse.

Newton is tied in this summer with the federal Food for Children program. Each morning, students get a snack of a sandwich, juice, fruit, and milk.

Candidates

LOIS PINES

"Massachusetts elderly can now find some relief from the burden of rising property taxes in the period of their lives when they are most likely to be on fixed incomes," State Rep. Lois G. Pines, Democratic candidate for reelection in the 19th Middlesex district, said this week.

"The new tax deferment law will enable them to delay payment of their property taxes until the property is sold or passes to their estates," she said.

The bill was drafted by the Taxation Committee of which Mrs. Pines is a member. It applies to homeowners over 65 whose gross incomes do not exceed $20,000. Deferments will be granted by the local board of assessors upon the singing of a tax deferral and recovery agreement.

JACK BACKMAN

A bill providing a yearly cost of living increase to recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children, General Relief and Veterans Benefits, has been enacted by the Legislature and sent to the governor.

The bill was filed by State Sen. Jack Backman, Democratic candidate for relection in the newly created Newton-Brookline State Senate district.

In 1973, the Brookline legislator secured a minimum income for the elderly, blind and disabled. This year, he sought to have the program extended to include the cost of living increase. Increases will occur annually beginning July 1, 1975.

ROBERT QUINN

Democratic candidate for governor Robert H. Quinn Friday urged his Republican gubernatorial opponents to make public disclosures of their financial net worth.

Pointing out that both Democratic candidates have already made financisl disclosures, Quinn said, "the people have a right to know. It would be a demonstration of good faith and it would uphold the concept of an elected official's accountability to the public."

Quinn made his financial position public June 11 when he formally announced his candidacy. His net worth was slightly more than $112,000.

MICHAEL DUKAKIS

Michael Dukakis, Democratic candidate for governor, testified in Washington, D.C., last week before a U.S. House subcommittee considering a national no-fault auto insurance law.

The original sponsor of the Massachusetts no-fault law endorsed "in principle" a national no-fault system, but warned against setting "rigid standards which would force states with genuine no-fault systems to raise insurance rates."

He urged enactment of a bill "that requires all states within a reasonable grace period to enact no-fault statues which will meet minimum standards set by Congress." He called for a bill with a provision allowing states that alceady have no-fault laws to retain them.

He suggested Congress use the Massachusetts law as a minimum national standard.

JOHN P. LYNCH

John Pierce Lynch of Springfield, Democratic candidate for lieutenant grovernor, this week advocated the installation of a hot line to "better serve the public."

If elected, he said, "I will install a toll free hot line in the lieutenant governor's office so that a citizen may call with a problem."

"I believe that new lines of communication are necessary today," the candidate observed.

CHARLES CABOT

Republican candidate for attorney general Charles Cabot this week urged the State Legislature to take action on "an effective gun control law."

"Criminals who use guns already know that they face the possibility of prison," he said.

"The way to stop the use of handguns by criminals is to make these guns less available. The only way to do this is to completely ban the sale, ownership or possession of handguns for all except police authorities or shotting clubs where guns are kept in a central depository," Cabot said.

Asked about the public's need for handguns for protection, Cabot responded: "The fact is that guns bought for self-defense are much more likely to accidentally kill or injure loved ones or to be stolen than to be successfully used in self-defense. Some evidence suggests that the majority of handguns used by criminals were at one time owned by law-abiding citizens."

JOHN DAVOREN

Incumbent Secretary of State John F.X. Davoren said this week that two Bay State labor organizations have endorsed his candidacy.

Davoren said the Massachusetts State Labor Council, AFL-CIO, and the Greater Boston Labor Council, AFL-CIO, voted to endorse him.

The formal letter of endorsement, signed by Council President Joseph A. Sullivan, Secretary-Treasurer James P. Loughlin and COPE Director John A. Callahan, congratulated Davoren "on compiling a record while serving the Commonwealth that warranted labor's endorsement."

CHARLES CLOUGH

Charles I. Clough Jr., of Concord, Democratic candidate for Middlesex County commissioner, this week called for an end to patronage in the county employment system.

The candidate is the founder and former chairman of Citizens for Middlesex County, the group which created the reform slate of county commissioners elected in 1972.

"The patronage powers exercised by the county commissioners exist only to be abused and they have a disruptive effect not only on the employees involved but on the entire fabric of government," he said.

Clough praised the reform slate commissioners, but added: "I repeat, the first step toward major structural reform must be to end the county's power to hire and fire people at will."

"A form of Civil Service hiring for the necessary functions would be far more effective," he concluded.

Freeport wins grant for training program

Freeport has won a competitive contract from the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) to train community personnel to deal more effectively with troubled youth, announced Executive Director Phyllis Busansky at a board of directors' meeting held July 9.

The grant will be used initially to train Freeport's own staff and prospective staff. It is expected that eventually it will train teachers, policemen, students, parents or others who deal with community youth. The training program will begin in September and will run through the school year.

Program Coordinator Jean Kole said, "Only a very small portion of the grant funds are available for Freeport operation — the real benefactor of the contract is the community."

Both Ms. Kole and Ms. Busansky stressed that current operational funds for the house are low and that the grant offers no immediate relief to that problem.

Freeport submitted a proposal for the contract in response to a government "R. F. P." (request for proposal), and Ms. Busansky said, "The awarding of the grant emphasizes Freeport's role as a national model for the development of alternative homes for troubled adolescents."

In charge of the project is R. Chris Dowell, who taught a Newton High School psychology class which stimulated the founding of Freeport. Dowell is now a lecturer at Harvard and a Wellesley psychologist.

Located at 361 Commonwealth Ave. in Chestnut Hill, Freeport serves adolescents from the Newton area who, for various reasons, are unable to live at home. Through counseling, the explorative therapy of group living, and the support available through a high staff-to-student ratio, Freeport aims to return the residents to their homes whenever possible.

The organization is supported by tax-deductible contributions from concerned community citizens and by gifts from small foundations. Some funding is also available as fee for services rendered from state agencies.

Youth Corps has jobs

The summer Neighborhood Youth Corps program, operated under a $297,650 federal grant, has provided summer work for 345 young people in a 10-community area, including Newton, Alfred DiBenedetti, program director, has announced.

The program, which covers Newton, Waltham, Lincoln, Dover, Bedford, Weston, Wellesley, Needham, Brookline, and Lexington, is administered by the Newton Ancillary Manpower Planning Board. Mayor Theodore Mann is chairman of the board.

The program provides a two-month period of work experience for economically disadvantaged young people between the ages of 14 and 21. They are placed in branches of city government and other nonprofit agencies, where they are paid $2 an hour and work 30 hours per week.

The program continues through August 31.

Applications or information about the federal program and youth eligibility can be obtained from the Neighborhood Youth Corps Office, 429 Cherry St., West Newton, which is open Monday through Friday 8:30-5 p.m. or by calling that office at 527-4884.

Mayor Mann suggests that any nonprofit agencies interested in providing a work site for enrollees should contact DiBenedetti at 527-4884.

Children's Campaign to hold public hearing on July 30, 31

The Children's Campaign, a non-partisan campaign for children's rights, will hold a public hearing in Boston at The George Sherman Union Auditorium at Boston University, 775 Commonwealth Ave., on Tuesday and Wednesday, July 30 and 31, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. On Wednesday only there will be an evening session, from 7-9 p.m.

Testimony will be taken from children and youth (defined as anyone up to age 18) and adults who would like to speak on the conditions of children and their families in Massachusetts. Some topics to be discussed are mental and physical health, juvenile justice, education, child consumerism, work and recreation and the family.

"Everyone is encouraged to come; anyone may testify," says Hubie Jones, chairman of the campaign. "If anyone would like further information about testifying or attending the hearings they can call our campaign headquarters at 227-6506 or come in to see us, at 10 Tremont St., in downtown Boston," added Jones.

The schedule for th hearings is Tuesday, July 30, children only will be testifying (but anyone may attend). At 10 a.m. there will be an opening statement and testimony on a broad range of subjects. The morning session will end at 1 p.m. During the afternoon session, from 1:30-3:30 p.m., there will be discussion groups on drugs, education and juvenile justice.

On Wednesday, July 31, children as well as adults may testify at 9 a.m. on mental retardation-special education-mental health; 10:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m., physical health-education; 1:30-2:30 p.m., juvenile justice-drugs; 2:30-3:30 p.m., work and recreation; 3:30-4:30 p.m., family; 4:30-5 p.m., child consumerism. On Wednesday, only, there will also be an evening session (7-9 p.m.) for testimony on all subjects.

A platform committee composed of citizens from the Boston area and members of the Campaign's statewide steering committee will record the testimony and incorporate it into a Children's Platform. A final platform developed out of these hearings will be presented to candidates for public office at the campaign's second series of hearings to be held in Boston in September.

"At those hearings we are going to ask some very tough and specific questions about support for children's issues," says Jones. "Then we will publish evaluations - 'report cards' - of the candidate's positions on these issues to let the people know just where their legislators stand," Jones added.

The campaign plans to hold a series of hearings around the state. They have already held one in Springfield, and after Boston, they plan to go on to Worcester, Pittsfield, New Bedford and Lowell-Lawrence in August.

"Our citizen's hearings will be a chance for parents and their children to speak out, and let everyone know just what the conditions are in Massachusetts that affect millions of children and their families," Jones continued.

"Grassroots support has just been fantastic," Jones said. "Volunteers and money has come in from around the state," he added. "Just as in any campaign, we are dependent on public contributions to make this campaign a success," Jones emphasized.

"The needs of children have been a low priority in the state legislature," Jones declared. "Children's rights and issues have been pushed aside in the political arena for too long," he added. The Campaign hopes to politicize children's issues and make their welfare a top priority for government.

Two centers for elderly

The program at the Newton Senior Drop-in Center in Newtonville is now under way.

On Tuesday mornings hospital work will be done at 10 a.m. Aug. 12 and 27. Chess will be played every Wednesday afternoon and bridge on Friday afternoon. On Thursday, there will be a lunch-in for senior citizens to bring lunches and visit with other senior citizens. At all times tea or coffee with cookies will be served.

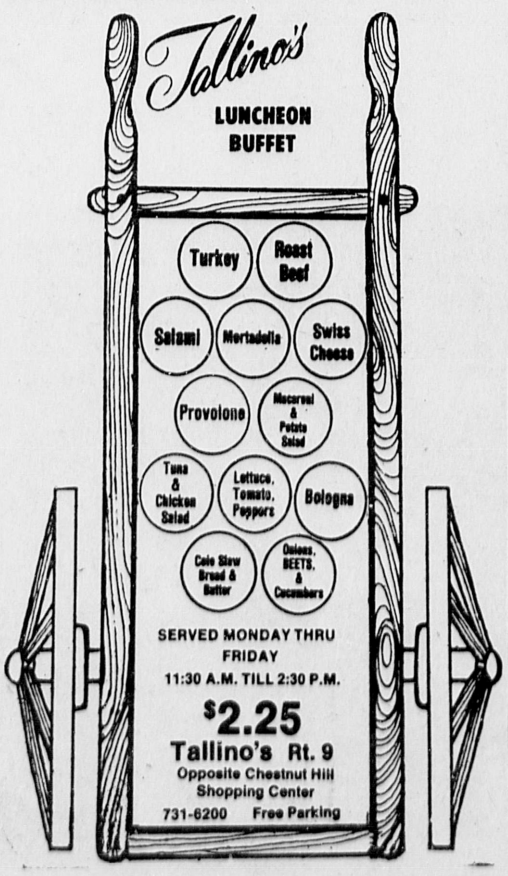

At the Senior Drop-In Center at Brae Burn Nursing Home, August 6 and 20 hospital work will be done in the morning. Lunch is brought by everyone, and bridge, macrame, etc., and a program of entertainment are held in the afternoon. Transportation is provided for this drop-in center only. Call the Department of Human Resources at 244-4700, ext. 266, for a reservation on the bus.

During August, Newtonville Drop-In hours are 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Appointed John L. Harrison has been appointed associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Boston College in Chestnut Hill. He holds a Ph.D. in chemistry from the University of Pennsylvania and a bachelor's degree in chemistry from Princeton. Harrison, 34, is married and has two children.

Who decides where revenue sharing goes?

By ELIZABETH McKINNON
Of The Graphic Staff

Newton's piece of that great pie in the sky—general revenue sharing from the federal government—was dished out last month.

But the amount, $975,783 (up about $18,000 from last year) has already been devoured by the city's 1975 budget.

The "planned use report" on expenditure of the money was duly published in July in accord with federal law, and the full report has been duly placed in the City Clerk's office for inspection.

The planned use report refers to the law requiring each government to publish its plans for the funds "to inform its citizens and to encourage their participation in deciding how the money ought to be spent."

In Newton the decision about how the money was to be spent was announced by the mayor last March at the end of the budget hearings of the Board of Aldermen.

The expected revenue-sharing funds were worked into five categories (of 14 allowable) of city government—public safety, recreation, social services, general government, and the ever-hungry public works ($150,000).

Newton is not alone in using general revenue-sharing money in the total budgetary process to keep taxes down. A survey done by Sen. Edward Muskie found that cutbacks in other areas of federal funding had forced some cities and states to use revenue sharing to keep existing programs going instead of looking at the funds as "new money" to be used for new programs or capital items, as was the original intento of general revenue sharing.

Nationwide, local governments leaned toward public safety, transportation, and environmental protection, according to the federal Office of Revenue Sharing.

In Newton, the lion's share went to public works (!510,657), followed by public safety ($216,460), social services ($57,195, recreation ($34,498), and general government ($26,355).

What if a citizen or group of citizens sees a need that is not being met by the city and wants a say in the expenditure of revenue-sharing funds?

Since in Newton the money was already earmarked and put into the budget long before it was even received, there's nothing anybody can do about it now. There's no chance for the citizen participation desired by the federal government this year.

Seth Armen of the Federal Grants Bureau in the state Department of Administration and Finance said recently that the bureau (and the Feds) "like to see citizen participation," but there are no federal guidelines on participation and no hearings are actually required.

Nevertheless, Armen said, many non-profit and social agencies have taken advantage of the federal emphasis on citizen participation. Cambridge is one city with such citizen input, and in Boston citizen-action groups have gone to Mayor Kevin White with proposals, many of which he has accepted.

In order to get into the process before revenue-sharing funds are allocated and put into the next year's budget, citizen groups would have to start formulating proposals by the summer before, then go to see the mayor or department heads involved and try to win acceptance of their proposal while the budget proposals are being made up.

One might argue that if the revenue-sharing money is spent on one-teim programs or capital items, the tax rate would have to be increased to make up for the decision not to apply the money to the general budget.

One might also argue that since revenue-sharing was designed to provide "new money," and that since the city got along without federal revenue-sharing money before the inception of the program in 1972, the funds might well be spent on providing programs and improvements, within the federal guidelines, that the city could not achieve without extraordinary tax levies.

In Newton, there are already several groups with stated goals that need funding. For example, under the revenue-sharing guidelines, funds could be used for a new library, swimming pools and other recreational facilities, an intracity transportation system, or a recycling program.

The decision would be hard to make, and politically shaky, to take revenue-shiring money for specific new expenditures.

But if and when revenue sharing stops, and the money is not available to use for day-to-day governmental costs, the tax rate will have to go up in response.

So the question remains—does Newton wish to postpone many of the good things that revenue sharing could buy in order to postpone a tax increase? Or should the citizens help decide?

Rev. Laughland called to new ministry

rev. Polly Laughland of ewton has been named interim minister at the Wellesley Hills Unitarian Church. She will assume her post Sept. 1.

Rev. Laughland has been co-minister at the First Unitarian Society in Newton for the past two years and served previously as minister of religious education there.

Rev. Laughland is the wife of Dr. Arthur Laughland, principal of the Hyde School in Newton Highlands. They are the parents of two daughters and one son.

Rev. Laughland served on the Massachusetts Bay District Board of the Unitarian-

Universalist Association from 1967 to 1973 and is a member of the International Association of Women Ministers and the International Association of Liberal Christian Women.

Police report

Chestnut Hill Brigham's robbed

A robbery at Brigham's 19-21 Commonwealth Ave., Chestnut Hill, reportedly netted approximately $300 in bills Sunday night.

Newton Police reportedly received a call at 9:45 p.m. from an employee who reported that he had been held up. A robber allegedly entered the store around 9:30 p.m. and after ordering a cup of coffee, handed a clerk a note demanding money.

James D. Littleton, 23, 37 Walsh Rd., Newton Centre, was arrested by Newton Police early Monday and charged with breaking and entering in the nighttime, larceny of a motor vehicle, operating to endanger, and leaving the scene after causing property damage. Police reportedly received a call from a citizen who had heard a crash at Prioli Brothers Service Station, 671 Saw Mill Brook Parkway. Entrance was reportedly gained to the service station by breaking a pane of glass, and a car reportedly left the station by crashing through a door.

Littleton was allegedly involved in an accident at Rosalie Road and Dedham Street, Hitting an Edison pole and overturning. He was arrested at the rear of 636 Dedham St., Newton Centre.

Joseph DeAngelis reported to Newton Police on Friday that items belonging to a roomer at 83 Court St., Newtonville, were missing. Reported missing were $2,000 in cash from a fireproof strongbox, papers, three rings, and money from a piggy bank. There was no sign of forced entry, police said.

David M. Katz, 18, of 100 Andrew St., Newton Highlands, was arrested Monday and charged with larceny of a motor vehicle and possession of burglarious tools.

Police received an anonymous call at 1:30 a.m. Monday reporting that two youths were pushing a motorcycle out of 274 Newtonville Ave. As a result of investigation, Katz was arrested.

A breaking and entering at 132 Farlow Rd., Newton on Monday reportedly netted a number of coins and $80 in bills. Entrance was reportedly gained by breaking a terrace window and unlocking a latch. Four youths were observed running near the house between 3 and 4 p.m.

A breaking and entering and malicious damage at 7 Faxon St., Newton was reported to police on Monday. A pane of glass on a rear apartment door was reportedly broken, and the apartment ransacked. A radio was reportedly missing and other things broken.

A break at 61 Woodlawn Dr., Chestnut Hill was reported on Sunday. Reported missing were two television sets, a stereo, a cassette player, and a turntable. A screen was reportedly removed, a vent pushed in, and a window unlocked. The house was reportedly ransacked.

An unknown quantity of adding machines and typewriters and a code a phone were reportedly taken from the school administration building, 265 Watertown St., Newton, over the weekend. A search in woods near the building reportedly turned up five typewriters, a dictaphone, and a code a phone.

A break at 16 Everett St., Newton Centre, was reported on Sunday. A screen was reportedly cut, and a stereo console and speakers were reported missing.

On Safari III

More grass

This week, the "safari" has moved to Albermarle Road between Crafts and Watertown streets in Newtonville where it soon becomes apparent the grass has not been mowed for a good long time. Another reader suggested a picture be taken at this spot and said the tall grass presents a traffic hazard and causes fears among residents that children playing in the area might suddenly dash out from their hiding place and be hit by cars. Nine-school study has finally been made public

By TOM GRAVES
Of the Graphics Staff

Since the first School Committee meeting in November, there has been intermittent mention of something called the nine-school study.

Last week, after months of review, it finally emerged before the School Committee. The school buildings advisory committee recommended numerous capital outlay projects for the fiscal year 1975-76 in nine of Newton's older schools.

This, however, is only the beginning. The nine-school study is a reference point for capital improvements to be made in the schools over the next 10 years. Each year, new recommendations will be made.

The nine schools included in the study are Angier, Cabot, Emerson, Franklin, Hyde, Ward, Williams, Warren, and Weeks. They have been extensively examined by a consulting firm, Hill, Miller, Friedlaender, Hollander, Inc., the school administration, and the school buildings advisory committee.

A cost of $209,250 was assigned to the work for 1975-76 which the advisory committee recommended. The School Committee unanimously accepted the advisory committee's recommendations, but it was explicit that they were approving the individual projects rather than a specific amount of dollars.

John Samuels, temporary chairman of the advisory committee, explained that work on the nine-school study began in 1970. The architects were commissioned in 1973 to make a report.

Former School Committee member Richard Douglas, a member of the advisory committee, said that the consulting firm's recommendation was "reduced something like 60 per cent." The report from Hill, Miller reportedly called for $6.4 million to be spent over 10 years on the nine schools.

Both Samuels and School Committeeman Gerard Byrne pointed out that the nine-school study is going to be an ongoing evaluation. Samuels said that there is "going to have to be an analysis each year of what the priorities should be."

George Murphy, chairman of the Emerson School building committee, expressed concern over the fact that the school administration decided to hold new sprinklers for Emerson.

Murphy said that renovation at Emerson has centered around the third floor. "By using the floor without a sprinkler system, I believe it to be unsafe," Murphy commented.

Director of Support Services John Gilleland noted several reasons for why the item was held. He said that Emerson is also part of the 11-school study, which raises the possibility that it might be closed in the future, and he reported that the Fire Department has certified Emerson for occupancy.

Murphy, a safety engineer, remarked that if adequate smoke detectors were installed, the building might be okay. He said that the school presently has thermal detectors. "You have to have a raging fire before hou find out you've got one."

Gilleland replied that "I have to oppose the idea that a dangerous situation exists. We do know that we can empty that building very quickly. We do know the building is safe."

School Committeeman Alvin Mandell asked about the success of heat detectors. Gilleland said that "the Fire Department often gets a signal before we know a fire is in progress. He called the detectors "successful."

Douglas said that health and safety was the first priority of the advisory committee when it was preparing its recommendations.

Mandell moved that the recommended capital outlay items be recommended to the mayor for his recommendation to the Board of Aldermen. Both Mandell and Regal said that it was the projects rather than the money which were being moved.

Mrs. Barbara Kravitz asked about individual communities having input into the evaluation and recommendation process. Byrne replied that each school district had an advisory committee involved in making recommendations. School Committee Chairwoman Mrs. Eleanor Rosenblum said that she was sure there would be collaboration in the future on recommendations.

There is some doubt over whether the Schol Building Advisory Board will provide funds for work to be done. Byrne remarked that there is a chapter in the SBAB which allows the refurbishing of old buildings. Whether funds can be gotten for work done over a 10-year period is unknown.

The school administration's recommendations for capital outlay for Newton's 21 other schools is expected to be presented to the School Committee on July 30.

NCDF must have Hatch Act hearing

The Conservation Commission has agreed that the Newton Community Development Foundation will need a Hatch Act hearing. The Hatch Act was designed to protect wetlands.

Commission chairman, Dennis Ditelberg, said that "since there is some question as to whether some of the area falls under the Hatch Act, I feel we should take the position all does" especially since no one has been "definitive". Ditelberg felt the talks had resulted in a "semantic dispute."

The Cramer Electronic parking proposal reared its head at the commission meeting causing a somewhat heated exchange between members. Part of the Cramer plant involves putting the parking on the flood plain. Commissioner Thelma Fleishman stated that the "parking will be reheard in August," but that aldermen treated the matter as a "joke." Mrs. Fleishman had written a "stinging" letter to the aldermen protesting the first hearing which she said was held in "15 minutes".

Commissioner Richard Staley asserted that he didn't see the commission's role "as that of negotiator." To which Mrs. Fleishman retorted that "we're jolly well lucky with what we got."

However, Commissioner Debra Howard didn't agree saying that if any change were to come about it would be with "persistent hammering" and added "we have to keep pushing." The commissioners will walk the site in August.

The commission also received from Larry Kaplan, a botanist at the University of Massachusetts a Webster-Hammond Woods trail guide with a detailed description of the trees and flowers found along the way. According to Debra Howard, the commission will go "over the route and begin procedures to duplicate the guide so it can be made available to the public."

In other business, Grace Taglienti was taken on as an associate commissioner after she wrote to the commission requesting this position. An associate commissioner does not vote.

Ishikawa elected to board

Dr. Sadamu Ishikawa of 65 Oakmont Road, Newton, has been elected to the Board of Trustees of the American Lung Association of Boston. The announcement was made by the Christmas Seal organization's president, John J. Devlin.

Ishikawa is associate professor of medicine at Tufts University Medical School and director of the pulmonary function lab at Lemuel Shattuck Hospital in Jamaica Plain.

Watershed Association discusses flood control

The Charles River Watershed Association has intervened formally in the Department of Natural Resources adjudicatory proceedings relating to parking restrictions imposed by the department on Beacon Construction Company for its proposed Wellesley Office Park Building No. 6. This announcement came from CRWA Executive Director Rita Barron.

The association contends that flood control programs for the Charles already authorized by Congress have three essential components — the new Charles River Dam now under construction in Boston, the permanent protection of 17 Natural Valley Storage Areas in the middle and upper watershed, and local land use controls to discourage further development of the flood plain. The association strongly supports this total management plan.

The decision whether to allow pavement of 72 per cent of the five-acre site or to retain the condition restricting parking issued June 22, 1973, will likely be made by the Department of Natural Resources within a few weeks.

More warnings are needed

Is it news that kids under 18 can buy beer or booze in some package stores without being asked for identification?

At least one town in the area ran up against this situation, and when doubt was raised that this could be so, a 15-year-old boy went into a package store and marched out with a case of beer.

At another package store, a boy age 17 bought a case of beer with no questions asked.

All this was brought to light when a father noticed teenagers in his neighborhood imbibing and asked the youngsters where they were getting the stuff.

It's general knowledge that 18-year-olds have been buying beer and liquor for their younger friends since the drinking age has been lowered. But it's startling to learn that a 15-year-old who looks not a day older can walk into a liquor store and walk out with a case of beer, especially when package store owners are well aware of the penalties involved.

The lowering of the drinking age has already proved lethal in this state. Statistics released by the office of Public Safety Secretary Richard L. McLaughlin show that since the new law went into effect the number of drivers between 18 and 20 killed in alcohol-related accidents shot up 134.2 percent. Equally alarming is the statistic that the total of drinking drivers in the same age bracket involved in fatal accidents rose 124.2 percent.

Before the drinking limit was dropped, about 50 percent of the kids under 21 were getting liquor and beer from the older ones. Now 15-, 16-, and 17-year-olds are getting it from the 18-year-olds. Evidence of this is seen in the state laboratories where the alcohol content in the blood of car accident fatalities is tested.

Authorities are worried because kids don't yet realize what a six pack of beer does to body and brain.

Thoas who dispense alcoholic beverages over the counter have for years been attuned to the 21-year-old face. Suddenly more youthful looking customers have a right to be served and thus it could be that some package store clerks are becoming careless.

The teenage drinking problem is serious enough without making it easier for youngsters to get their hands on alcoholic beverages.

Book Review

About Harry Towns, by Bruce Jay Friedman. (Knopf, $5.95) Harry had it made. A screenwriter who earned big money, he had all the women he liked along with a wife from whom he was more or less permanently separated. A neat arrangement for a man wrapped up in himself. But an undercurrent of violence blemished everything he did. Harry really didn't like himself much and Friedman pursues Harry's writhings unmercifully.

—— The Water, by Robert L. Fish. (Putnam, $5.95) Urbane Kek Huuygens, the likeable smuggler who has figured in other books by Fish, goes to Barbados to win a bet that he can sneak a valuable carving past customs officials. The situation gets more complicated when Kek encounters an old friend. As always the author keeps things popping and comes up with ingenious solutions at the proper time.

SURPRISE! SURPRISE!

Political Highlights

By JAMES G. COLBERT

Sargent and Dwight map comeback drive

Governor Francis W. Sargent and Lieutenant Governor Donald R. Dwight by no means are throwing in the towel and conceding their defeat in next November's election.

They know the most recent polls show them to be in political trouble. They realize that some painful and damaging blunders have been made.

But they also recognize that it is time to stop looking back on past mistakes and to launch an all-out drive to regain and restore their fallen political fortunes.

Sargent and Dwight actually are sound and astute politicians although a close political observer might have his doubts at times about Sarge. And they have some shrewd advisers around them.

They have more than three months in which to gain the ground and pick up new support they need to get back in the more favorable positions they hald last April. Sarge and Dwight are confident they can do exactly that.

While they will not admit it, Sargent and Dwight are lookicg beyond the Sept. 10 primary to thevNov. 5 election.

Governor Sargent, in his campaign for Republican renomination, is opposed by former State Commerce Commissioner Carroll Sheehan. Dwight has a free ride in the primary but is working just as hard for Sargent's renomination as Sargent is himself.

Political analysts are almost unanimous in their belief that Sargent will easily beat back the challenge of Sheehan in the primary and win renomination decisively.

They even suspect that the primary contest may help Sarge by providing him an opportunity to review the accomplishments of his administration, by giving his political organization a tuneup for furnishing momentum for his campaign that will carry on after the Sept. 10 primary.

Conservative Republicans such as former GOP State Committee Chairman Lloyd Waring, who are disenchanted with Governor Sargent, to put it most politely, argue that Sarge and his advisers are over-confident and that Sheehan will topple Sargent in the primary.

They seem politically unrealistic. This observer can see no way Sheehan can defeat Sargent in the primary. If by any chance he should, it probably would mean the end of the Republican party as an effective political instrument in Massachusetts.

That is the risk Waring and other sons and daughters of the GOP are taking in attempting to punish Governor Sargent for such political sins as appointing too many Democrats and not doing more to build both the Republican party in the state and the egos of some members of the GOP State Committee.

Governor Sargent obviously is not taking the conservative Republicans too seriously. At a time when they were criticizing him for appointing too many Democrats, Sarge appointed another one.

He named Democratic State Senator William Bulger of South Boston judge of the South Boston District Court to replace Judge Thomas Linehan who retired.

It was a good appointment. Bulger has the qualities and qualifications to be a fair and competent judge. He is very popular in South Boston, and Sarge's actions will win votes for him in that section next Nov. 5.

Lieutenant Governor Donald Dwight will be a great asset to Governor Sargent when the political chips are on the table next autumn.

Dwight, who has been the top trouble-shooter of the Sargent administration, is extremely well liked and highly respected out in Western Massachusetts.

He will be running in tandem with Sargent in the final election, and he should be able to draw votes Sarge would not otherwise get.

All in all, Governor Sargent's cause seems far from hopeless even though he has made his full quota of mistakes.

Cabot seeks A.G. post but is not politician

Charles C. Cabot, Jr., of Dover, who is seeking the Republican nomination for Attorney General, concedes at the outset that he is not a politician.

But Cabot, who has had a distinguished career in the legal profession, believes that this may be a good year for a candidate for an office of high public trust to be a non–politician.

This is the first time that Cabot, who is a Selectman in Dover, has waged a political campaign outside the borders of that small and attractive town.

However, he believes he is the Republican candidate who would have the best chance of winning election next Nov. 5.

"Against a Frank Bellotti, who is the total politician, I am the exact opposite because I'm not a politician," Cabot declared.

"I have been a Selectman in my town, but apart from that I have been practising law which should be the best training and preparation for the job of Attorney General," he continued.

Cabot is also chairman of the State Outdoor Advertising Board, a position which pays only a modest stipend per meeting and involves a lot of work. State House observers say he has done an excellent job in that capacity.

"There is no place for politics in that office," Cabot asserted. "It is virtually impossible to be an effective Attorney General if political objectives and obligations interfere with your legal judgement."

Cabot is restrained in discussing his qualifications for serving the people as their Attorney General, but he maintains that his two opponents in the Republican primary— former GOP State Committee Chairman Josiah Spaulding of Manchester and former Deputy Governor William I. Cowin of Newton—have not concentrated on the law to the same extent that he has.

"The Attorney General should be the people's lawyer. Not a politician," maintained Cabot.

Attorney Cabot has come on much stronger in his bid for the GOP nomination for Attorney General than most political pundits expected.

He says he has collected more nomination signatures and has raised more money than either Spaulding or Cowin.

"I got over 27,000 raw signatures and 15,000 certified signatures," the energetic Cabot reports with obvious pride.

Spaulding apparently is dodging a public debate with Cabot and Cowin. The Republican Club of Massachusetts has invited the three GOP Attorney General candidates to engage in a debate on Sept. 5, five days before the primary.

Mr. Spaulding made the highly unusual reply that he would participate in the debate if Governor Francis W. Sargent agrees to debate former State Commerce Commissioner Carroll Sheehan.

Sarge, of course, will not give Sheehan the exposure he would receive from such a debate. What that has to do with Spaulding or the fight for the Republican nomination for Attorney General is not clear from this distance.

Spaulding, a former chairman of the Republican State Committee, apparently believes he is out in front in that race. Some political experts, however, are not so sure that he is.

Some political analysts, incidentally, believe Cabot has made one mistake in his campaign. Their reasoning is the subject of an intriguing argument.

Former Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox, who was fired last October by President Nixon in the famous Saturday Nigh Massacre, has endorsed Cabot and urged his election as Attorney Genral.

Cox knows Cabot. When Cox was Solicitor General in 1960, he proposed Cabot for admission to practise before the U.S. Supreme Court. In supporting Cabot, Cox said that Cabot's election as Attorney General would be a great thing for Massachusetts.

Some admirers of President Nixon have told the surprised Cabot that the endorsement of Cox might do him more harm than good.

Cabot pointed out that Cox is an eminent and outstanding member of the legal profession, a man of great integrity who was picked by Elliot Richardson for the job of Special Prosecutor. Richardson resigned rather than fire Cox.

Cabot had an unusual baseball career when he was a student at Harvard College. He was a substitute on the Crimson baseball team. He went to bat only once. That was in the Harvard-Yale game in his senior year, and he hit a homerun. "I batted 1.000 and had a slugging average of the same percentage," observes Cabot.

Watergate is the principal reason Cabot is seeking election as Attorney General. "I'm doing what little I can to restore respect for the law," he explained.

He expressed the conviction that people have lost confidence in the criminal justice system. "An Attorney General is in a position to help restore and regain that confidence," Cabot said.

"People are alienated from the criminal justice system," Cabot elaborated. "Many victims of crimes don't even report the crimes. There needs to be a new concern for the rights of victims of crimes. If people are treated with some courtesy and compassion in the criminal justice system, they are more likely to submit themselves to it."

Cabot resigned from the law firm of Sullivan & Worcester to devote his time to his campaign for election as Attorney General. "I am confident I can win in the primary," he said. "I am equally confident that I can defeat Francis Bellotti who reportedly is the leading Democratic candidate at the present time."

Charles C. Cabot, Jr., is 44 years old. He is married and the father of three children. He was educated at Milton Academy, Harvard College and Harvard Law School. He has practised law for 17 years and served on a submarina for two years.

Conservation Commission inept, vague

The Conservation Commission is not discharing its responsibility to the public by holding loosely structured meetings, by not publicly discussing its' land acquisition proposals, by not taking a firm stand on issues it believes in, by not clamping down on absentee members and by not broadening its vision.

Sadly, the meetings are devoted to minutiae rather than exploring the ramifications of issues in a logical, clear and concise manner. Because they ramble, the meetings are almost impossible to follow and worse, because no votes are taken, it's virtually impossible to learn what action, if any, has been taken.

Commentary by Eleanor Siegel

The commission would be well advised to take parliamentary procedure seriously.

At no meeting has its land acquisition list been discussed and the public has a right to be let in on the intentions of the commission. By not involving the community, the commission has no way of heightening public interest, increasing public support for its position or of educating the public.

The commission seems to be divided between a posture of taking what it can get or standing firm and bargaining from a strong conservation position.

It doesn't seem to feel it is always taken seriously by the Board of Aldermen; and on that score a bit on introspection is necessary.

Absentee members of a commission which is an official voice in local government is inexcusable.

If these members cannot attend meetings, then they have no right sitting on a commission which is shaping conservation policy in this city. They should be removed immediately and members appointed in their place should possibly have some expertise either as hydrologists, planners, biologists or soil experts so they can competently make the critical decisions in the coming years..

And the coming years will bring new challenges before the commission which it should be prepared to meet. I would hope it will broaden its vision to include greater involvement in the areas of solid waste disposal and recycling, pesticide control, soil erosion, water supplies, promoting conservation mapping and zoning, and educating the public.

If it though what it got was hard to come by, the next years will bring even greater struggles as the business of environmental protection becomes more difficult to resolve.

Each of the active members of the commission is devoted, dedicated and competent. . . if they could improve the procedures of their meetings, they could make an even greater contribution to the environmental quality of Newton.

Scientist urges step-up in lead screening programs

Over 400,000 children in the United States are known to have elevated blood lead levels, and another 2 million are estimated by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to be in the high risk category, yet the United States has provided only enough money to test 450,000 children over the past three years, according to testimony presented to the United States Senate appropriations sub-committee on Labor—HEW by Alvin V. Block, president of Environmental Sciences Associates, Inc., Burlington, Mass.

Block, whose firm has tested over 50,000 children in 60 cities and states, estimated the cost to the country for those afflicted is $200 million, and that this sum will escalate unless remedial action is taken.

Among his recommendations was funding to determine the maximum blood lead level that can be tolerated without brain damage and life-long imparement to health . . . development of instruments for rapid on-site testing . . . and an increase in appropriations to the level authorized by PL-151 (sponsored by Senator Edward Kennedy) to expand city and county programs and thus test all children in the suspect and high risk category.

A copy of Block's testimony follows:

I am Alvin V. Block, president of Environmental Sciences Associates, Burlington, Massachusetts, and I am speaking on behalf of the lead paint poison control programs of Chelsea, Lowell, Somerville, and Waltham, Massachusetts, and Winnebago County, Rockford, Illinois. These projects have all been funded by HEW under the Lead Based Paint Poisoning Prevention Act of 1971.

There are several points I would like to make. Approximately 40 city and county projects have been funded under the provisions of the Act. Nationwide, under this program, a total of 475,000 children have been screened in the last three years, with 275,000 tests occuring in 1973. Some 46,000 children, or approximately 10 per cent, have been confirmed as having elevated blood lead levels.

In a document entitled "Control of Lead Poisoning in Children" dated May 1972, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare estimates that there are 20 million children in the suspect age group (under 5 years) and 2 million at risk (under 5 years in urban areas and in families with poverty classification).

HEW estimates up to 400,000 children are suffering from elivated blood lead levels with 200 deaths per year and thousands of cases of physical and-or mental damage. The annual cost to the nation of lead poisoning is approximately $200 million. This figure includes the cost of treatment, education and institutional care for those afflicted, as well as the sost of future lost earnings.

Recent surveys and studies have shown that while a high percentage of children with elevated lead levels reside in poor urban areas, a significant number are still to be found in either rural areas or middle class neighborhoods.

This means that the nationwide goal should be the screening of 20 million children annually. It is obvious from these numbers that only 1.5 per cent of the children who should be screened are presently being tested. Despite this, the funds requested by HEW for lead poison prevention have remained constant over several years.

On March 20, the Lead Control Projects of HEW's Region V reported on last year's operations to Representative Flood. They screened 85,000 children and treated 2,000 for elevated blood leads at a cost of $1.6 million. By preventing permanent damage to the children, they estimated a total cost saving of $200 million.

Lead poisoning is primarily caused by household paint which chips off walls and woodwork. Next in importance are auto and industrial emissions. Additional sources of lead poisoning are utensils, water, newsprint and contaminated food. Until there is a better understanding of the contribution of each of these sources to the total problem of lead poisoning, we cannot properly control this disease.

HEW considers a value of 40 micrograms of lead per 100 milliliters (40 ug per cent) of whole blood the level at which a child is considered exposed to lead poisoning. At these levels or above, it suggests re-testing and an evaluation of the child's living conditions for lead hazard. The effects of elevated blood lead levels are not only acute but are subtle as well.

At a recent symposium sponsored by HEW and the Environmental Protection Agency, several researchers reported on the possible long term mental and physical effects of lead levels lower than 40 ug per cent.

With the release of impounded funds in late fiscal 1974, several new projects are being added to the original 40 programs. However, the original projects are scheduled to be significantly reduced or phased out at the end of the fiscal year.

These projects have acquired a wealth of knowledge and experience in community education, in how to reach the target children, in the testing and treatment of children, and in the removal of lead poisoning hazards. With the reduction or phase out of these projects, the nation will lose a large nucleus of trained effective personnel just as the requirements increase for pediatric lead poisoning prevention.

When children are screened by the lead poisoning control projects, there is a time delay ranging from days to weeks (depending on the project) before the results of the laboratory tests are known.

In a recent hearing held at the request of the secretary of Housing and Urban Development, a representative of HEW stated that in the time interval between initial screening and re-screening, up to one-third of the elevated children could not be found for re-testing. This means that up to one third of the children who, on the original screening were shown to have elevated blood lead levels, could not be found for further testing, evaluation and treatment.

Lead poisoning projects need more sophisticated instrumentation to determine blood lead levels within a matter of minutes while children remain at the clinic or testing site. Such tests will significantly reduce the overall cost of the program because an appreciable percentage of the present costs include the re-locating of children who tested high on the initial screening. It will also eliminate the serious and costly problem of the "un-locatable" child (up to one-third of the "elevated" children figure previously mentioned).

Based on the preceding points I would make the following recommendations:

Congress should increase appropriations to a level approaching the $63 million authorized in PL 93-151 in order to achieve a more extensive and cost effective program.

Congress should request a reassessment of pediatric toxic lead levels to determine at what blood lead value further observation and-or possible remedial action should be taken.

Congress should provide for the expansion of current city and county programs rather than see much of the training and experience of existing program personnel pass into non-use, and Congress should provide funds for initiation of projects in other communities.

Congress should provide funds and recommend that HEW develop instruments to allow rapid on-site testing of blood lead levels.

Thank you for the opportunity to speak on behalf of these lead control projects.

Alvin M. Block

Richardson back from Cyprus

By WILLIAM GREVILLE

The Rev. H. Neil Richardson of Newtonville was expected to arrive at John F. Kennedy Airport in New York last night following evacuation from Cyprus, the scene of a recent coup against the government and subsequent invasion by Turkish troops.

Richardson, of 168 Mt. Vernon St., is director of a 60-member archaeological dig which had been working since mid-June at the ancient village of Idalion on the southern part of the island.

Richardson was one of 20 Boston-area professors and students at the dig, sponsored by the American Schools of Oriental Research, which has headquarters in Cambridge.

Richardson's wife said Tuesday the Cambridge office had informed her that her husband had been safely evacuated to the Holiday Inn in Beirut, Lebanon, arriving there Tuesday morning.

Early Monday the expedition's members were among 350 Americans escorted from the area by a British automobile convoy to the British naval base at Dhekelia on the southern coast of the island. The group was flown by helicopter to the U.S. Navy ship Coronado, where they spent Monday night, flying on to Beiruit the next day.

She said the expedition had been in no danger from the fighting, although it was reported the group could hear shooting and see fires in the distance.

Last Friday night Richardson had been at the Ledra Palace Hotel in Nocosia, running errands and purchasing supplies for the expedition, one of his job's as the group's chief administrator, when Turkish troops landed paratroops on the capital city.

He returned by car south to the site of the dig at Idalion that night, and the hotel was subsequently hit by gunfire, Mrs. Richardson said.

This was Richardson's third summer at the dig, having also been there in 1971 and 1972.

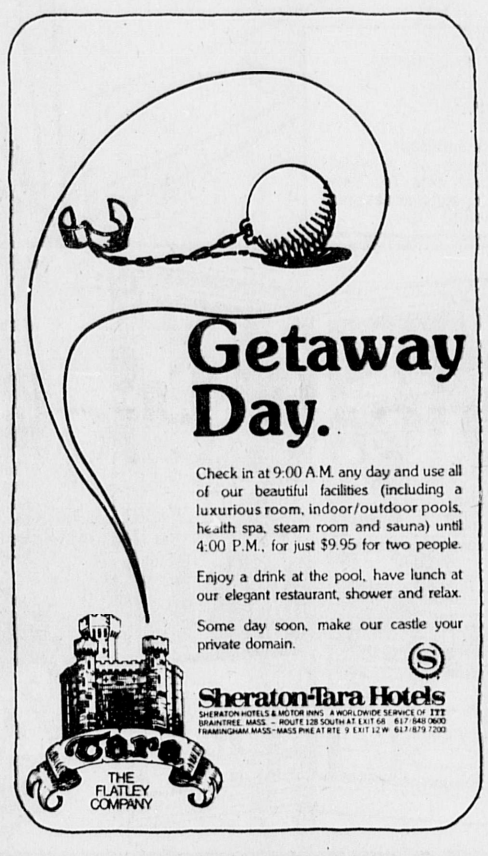

Mrs. Richardson said she was supposed to join him on the island but had to cancel a July 15 flight when the State Department advised her not to go.

First aid

First aid training for recreation personnel

This summer, the Newton playgrounds are a safer place to play due to the cooperation of the Norton Company, located at 45 Industrial Place, Newton Highlands, and the Newton Red Cross.

The supervisory personnel of the Newton Recreational Department are now capable of handling many emergencies which may arise at the various city facilities.

The Norton Company displayed community spirit by offering the services of two of their trained personnel, Lance Fulton and William Hommel, authorized Red Cross first aid instructors, for a first aid program. These instructors gave freely of their time and expertise to conduct a two day workshop at the Mason Rice School.

The general objectives of such a course are to teah people the skills needed for emergency care of the injured until a physician arrives, and to create interest in the prevention of accidents through the elimination of their causes.

In particular, playground personnel have been trained to deal with external and internal wounds; to recognize and treat shock victims; to perform artificial respiration; to apply bandages and tourniquets; to treat victims of poisoning and burns; to recognize and treat fractures; and to care for suspected heart attack and epileptic attack victims.

The Newton Chapter, American Red Cross thanks the Norton Company for making their personnel available to serve the Newton community. The Red Cross is anxious to cooperate with businesses and other organizations interested in fostering "safety consciousness" and teaching first aid skills in Newton. For further information people may call the Newton Chapter at 527-6000.

Schwartz to direct fund-raising efforts

Alan M. Schwartz of Newton has been appointed chairman of the Metropolitan Division of the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston.

The announcement was made recently by Sherman H. Starr, 1975 general campaign chairman. He noted that Schwartz will have responsibility for fund-raising efforts in the 38 cities and towns comprising the CJP area.

Commenting on his appointment, Schwartz said: "Above all other consideration, what prompted me to accept this position was the memories of my trip to Israel right after the Yom Kippur War.

As co-chairman of the Metropolitan Division in this year's campaign, Schwartz previously served as vice chairman of that division and chairman of the paper team.

He is on the readership committee and the steering committee of the young leadership development program of CJP, and is a member of the United Jewish Appeal Young Leadership Cabinet.

He also serves CJP as a member of the group services subcommittee of the social planning and allocations committee, and as a member of the executive committee of the Business Men's Council.

He is a vice president of Beth Israel Hospital's Men's Associates, on the executive committee of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, and on the board of Temple Mishkan Tefila.

A resident of Newton, he is president of Bay State Packing Corp. of Newton.

First aid

First aid training for recreation personnel

This summer, the Newton playgrounds are a safer place to play due to the cooperation of the Norton Company, located at 45 Industrial Place, Newton Highlands, and the Newton Red Cross.

The supervisory personnel of the Newton Recreational Department are now capable of handling many emergencies which may arise at the various city faciiities.

The Norton Company displayed community spirit by offering the services of two of their trained personnel, Lance Fulton and William Hommel, authorized Red Cross first aid instructors, for a first aid program. These instructors gave freely of their time and expertise to conduct a two day workshop at the Mason Rice School.

The general objectives of such a course are to teah people the skills needed for emergency care of the injured until a physician arrives, and to create interest in the prevention of accidents through the elimination of their causes.

In particular, playground personnel have been trained to deal with external and internal wounds; to recognize and treat shock victims; to perform artificial respiration; to apply bandages and tourniquets; to treat victims of poisoning and burns; to recognize and treat fractures; and to care for suspected heart attack and epileptic attack victims.

The Newton Chapter, American Red Cross thanks the Norton Company for making their personnel available to serve the Newton community. The Red Cross is anxious to cooperate with businesses and other organizations interested in fostering "safety consciousness" and teaching first aid skills in Newton. For further information people may call the Newton Chapter at 527-6000.

Schwartz to direct fund-raising efforts

Alan M. Schwartz of Newton has been appointed chairman of the Metropolitan Division of the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston.

The announcement was made recently by Sherman H. Starr, 1975 general campaign chairman. He noted that Schwartz will have responsibility for fund-raising efforts in the 38 cities and towns comprising the CJP area.

Commenting on his appointment, Schwartz said: "Above all other consideration, what prompted me to accept this position was the memories of my trip to Israel right after the Yom Kippur War.

As co-chairman of the Metropolitan Division in this year's campaign, Schwartz previously served as vice chairman of that division and chairman of the paper team.

He is on the readership committee and the steering committee of the young leadership development program of CJP, and is a member of the United Jewish Appeal Young Leadership Cabinet.

He also serves CJP as a member of the group services subcommittee of the social planning and allocations committee, and as a member of the executive committee of the Business Men's Council.

He is a vice president of Beth Israel Hospital's Men's Associates, on the executive committee of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, and on the board of Temple Mishkan Tefila.

A resident of Newton, he is president of Bay State Packing Corp. of Newton.

Question: I give up! I just can't make a decent pie crust and yet I want to bake some pies this summer . . . can you give me a couple of good blueberry pie recipes that don't call for a prebaked crust? The graham cracker crumb crust is fine. Don't think me a dope, please. — Mrs. T. G., Dedham

Answer: A dope? Never! It took quite a bit of practice on my part before I could make an acceptable pie crust — but no lectures here. We'll go into pie crusts at another time. Here are two dandy blueberry recipes — one is prepared using blueberries as the crust, the other calls for a graham cracker crust.

BLUEBERRY CHEESECAKE DESSERT

4 cups (1) quart) fresh blueberries, rinsed and drained
1) pkg. vanilla pudding and pie filling (large package)

2 egg yolks
2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
3 cups (1½ lbs.) cottage cheese, sieved
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup (½ pt.) heavy cream, whipped
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten

Pour blueberries into a 1½ quart serving bowl and arrange berries to make a shell, covering bottom and going up sides of dish. Cook pudding with milk according to package directions. When thick, remove from heat and beat in egg yolks. Stir gelatine and lemon juice together and add to hot pudding. Stir until gelatine dissolves. Stir in lemon rind, cottage cheese and vanilla. Chill until slightly thickened. Fold in whipped cream and egg whites and pour mixture into blueberry shell. Chill until firm. Serves 8.

NO BAKE BLUEBERRY ICE CREAM PIE
1 prepared graham cracker crust (9-inch)
4 cups fresh blueberries
1 cup sugar
2 cups water
¼ cup cornstarch
1 quart vanilla ice cream
2 tablespoons orange juice

Combine blueberries and sugar. Mix water and cornstarch and stir into blueberries. Cook at a simmer until sauce is thickened. Reserve ½ cup of blueberry mixture for decorating top. Cool. Spoon blueberry filling over crust. Spoon ice cream over blueberry filling. Beat orange juice into reserved blueberry filling. Drizzle over vanilla ice cream. Freeze. Remove pie 30 minutes before serving to thaw enough to cut.

Question: We attended a barbecue the other night and while all the food was very good, my husband and I loved their Caesar Salad best. The hostess said she "throws things together" and couldn't five me a recipe. Would you please print a salad recipe of this nature? Thanks! — Mrs. C. H., W. Roxbury Answer: This is a marvelous salad — try using romaine, Boston lettuce and a few spinach leaves. Enjoy!

CAESAR SALAD
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons salad oil
3 cloves garlic, peeled and crushed
4 slices day-old white bread, cubed
6 slices bacon
Salt
1 clove garlic, peeled and halved
7 to 8 cups torn up salad greens
1 can (2 oz.) anchovies, cut up
One-third cup salad oil
3 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
Pinch pepper
1 egg
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Heat butter (or margarine) and oil in skillet. Add the 3 crushed cloves of garlic and cook for 1 minute. Add bread cubes and cook ans stir until golden on all sides. Lift out cubes and cook and stir until golden and drain on paper toweling. Discard garlic and any fat left in pan. Add bacon strips to same pan and cook until crisp. Drain on paper toweling and crumble. Sprinkle salad bowl very lightly with salt. Rub the cut sides of the one clove of garlic in the salt and all over the bottom and sides of the bowl. Discard garlic. Put the salad greens, anchovies and browned bread cubes in the bowl and toss together lightly. Combine one-third cup oil, lemon juice, ¼ teaspoon salt, pepper and egg in small jar with a tight lid. Shake until blended. Pour over salad greens and toss lightly; sprinkle bacon bits and cheese over top of salad and serve immediately. Serves 6-8.

Question: There are always so many meat barbecue recipes but seldom barbecue fish recipes; would you please print a fish barbecue recipe. Thank you. — Mrs. S., Westwood

Answer: You're right! And just to set the barbecue scales even, here is a fish recipe along with a tasty Sour Cream Tartar Sauce.

FISH "BUNDLES" IN FOIL
6 or more small fish fillets
Melted butter or margarine
6 to 12 slices onion
6 lemon slices
Salt and pepper

Dip fillets in melted butter (or margarine) and roll up each fillet. Have ready squares of heavy duty aluminum foil. Place one or two rolled fillets in center of each square; add a lemon slice and a slice or two of onion. Sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper and seal foil tightly. Place "bundle" on grate over medium hot fire and cook about 20 minutes, turning once or twice. Serve with following sauce:

SOUR CREAM TARTAR SAUCE
1 cup mayonnaise
5 tablespoons sour cream
2 tablespoons minced dill pickle
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon parsley (optional)
1 teaspoon EACH minced thyme, tarragon
Freshly ground black pepper (as desired)

Combine all ingredients and blend well. Refrigerate until needed.

"Hair painting"

Short and sweet

Going to the New York American Designer show means that you get to see a lot more than just fashions.

The Intercoiffure hair fashion show was held and, according to Julius Caruso, style director, women are in the mood for more casual, comfortable day clothes, and, equally, for hair that more or less takes care of itself.

"For a majority of women," he says, "this means the return of the permanent with shape cut right in. It means hair will be waved or curled, but usually soft and full - pretty around the face and really romantic."

Also, Julius says, though hair has to be controlled, it needs fluidity in keeping with the new big tent coats, wide capes and swingy skirts.

Long hair seems to be out in favor of short to shoulder length, keeping the hair clear of coat collars and the wrap of scarves. Most hair designers agree that the ideal cut for naturally curly hair is short, layered for fullness and scissored to emphasize bone structure and the shape of the head.

For those of you with vacations ahead, "shorter" and "simpler" are good words to use when visiting your hairdresser. It's better to have your hair shaped and styled beforehand instead of spending precious sun hours sitting under a dryer in a beauty salon - no matter where the salon is. Also, it's a good idea to start conditioning treatments at home before leaving for vacation - and when you're out under the sun, protect your hair by wearing a hat or scarf.

Leslie Blanchard, probably the foremost authority on the science of hair coloring, has created a line of hair care products specifically formulated to enhance and help protect hair color.

At one time Leslie was color director for Saks Fifth Avenue and in ten years built the salon into a professional success. Leaving Saks he went to Clairol as their color director and educational consultant where he's been for over 15 years. His own salon, The Private World of Leslie Blanchard, has become the first salon dedicated to hair color that really looks natural.

Maintaining that "hair color can only be as beautiful as the hair itself," he has now introduced "Maintain" especially formulated products to enhance and protect hair color. It's for the woman who doesn't visit the salon as well as the professional hairdresser who uses his products.

Following are special tips on hair car from Leslie Blanchard:

1. Wash your hair as often as it needs it - even every day if you want to. Just be sure the shampoo is gentle. Your shampoo should be in a formula designed for your type of hair.

2. Remember, oily hair can't keep a set. How to tell if your hair is oily or dry? Actually, hair itself does not produce oil; it is the oil glands in the scalp which become oily. Dry hair indicates less active oil glands. One indication of dry hair is that the hair never looks greasy. Often people with dry hair also have dry skin.

3. Before shampooing, comb through your hair to make sure it is tangle-free. But you don't need to brush before shampooing unless you are trying to get rid of hair spray and dandruff particles.

4. Beauty starts at the top, and this means not only hair that is a beautiful color but in a beautiful condition. The fact is, hair is the fabric which the colorist works with - the better it is, the better the coloring results.

Speaking of color, the word from France is color casting, or the elimination of the monotony of the one-color-look. Many hair designers are using a face-framing silhouette of platinum coloring on an otherwise brunette head. This new two-tone coloring is particularly attractive when ash brown hair is highlighted around the face with light beige blonde coloring that extends to the crown of the head.

"Call it streaking, dappling, shading, tinting or turning up the lights," said Julius Caruso, "there's much that can be done today to improve the color of hair. The coppery red tone got a start last year and is now in full favor at all salons. Also popular are the warm blonde to fawn and camel shades, as well as an interesting tortoise brown. Softer color is suggested for fluffed or "whipped" hair; short hair can take a bolder red or deeper brown.

A style destined to be popular is the "deep wave" which dips decidedly over the forehead, is fluffed on each side, and is nearly shoulder length. Suggested for the young oval face, is the Toulouse-Lautrec style - hair is all curls, delicately-tousled high curles on top of the head and others falling over the forehead.

Capsuling the hair fashion scene, you'll be seeing a lot more movement to hair, a lot of machine permanent waves similar to the machine waves back in the 30's and more curls than in previous years. In other words, much more softness to the hair; and after all is suggested and proposed, it remains for the individual to choose the style that best suits her personality and life style.

Across the Kitchen Counter

This is the time to capture the goodness of summertime fruits and vegetables using canning methods which are fun, easy and relatively inexpensive.

If you've never felt comfortable about canning, concerned about the safety of home-canned goods, the answer is that when properly done it is as wholesome as any other food. My suggestion is that you buy the Better Homes and Gardens' "Home Canning Cookbook," $1.95. It is an interesting and informative book outlining canning techniques (basic equipment required as well as procedures), recipes as well as a very good chapter on freezing foods.

There are two canning methods: The water-bath canner and the steam pressure canner. For fruits, tomatoes and pickled vegetables use a water bath canner which may be any metal container deep enough for the water to cover the tops of the covered jars two to four inches. The container must have a cover and a rack. A steam-pressure canner is used for all vegetables except tomatoes.

Follow the manufacturer's directions for use of the canner. Don't second guess recipes . . . if one says to use a pressure canner and you have only a water bath canner, don't substitute one for another.

Also, if you have a pressure cooker with a rack, you can use it for processing pint jars. Your cooker must have a guage that will maintain 10 pounds pressure.

Many homemakers will ask themselves whether it pays to go through the process of canning and freezing foods. Only you can be the judge-there is the expense of investing in jars, canning cookers, etc. Not to be overlooked, however, is the satisfaction of doing your own canning and preserving.

There's a very special pride in slicing a thick wedge of your own warm homemade bread and slathering it with fruity homemade preserves. So, be adventuresome—even if you've never done it before, try making your own preserves or a relish and you'll discover the thrill of accomplishment at well as a taste treat for the entire family. (A gift of your own preserves is a wonderful way of saying you care.)

The following recipes need only a kettle or Dutch oven with a rack and need NOT be pressure canned.

WATERMELON PICKLES
2 pounds watermelon rind
¼ cup pickling salt (Use pure granulated pickling salt or uniodized table salt—do not use iodized table salt)
4 cups water
2 cups sugar
1 cup white vinegar
1 tablespoon broken stick cinnamon
1½ teaspoons whole cloves
½ lemon, thinly sliced
5 maraschino cherries, halved (optional)

Trim the dark green and pink parts from watermelon rind. Cut rind in 1-inch cubes; mesure 7 cups. Soak rind overnight in a solution of pickling salt and water. (If it takes more to cover, use the same proportion salt to water) Drain; rinse watermelon rind. Cover rind with cold water. Cook just till tender. Meanwhile, in 6 to 8 quart kettle or Dutch oven combine sugar, white vinegar, stick cinnamon, whole cloves, and 1 cup water.

Simmer mixture for 10 minutes; strain. Add drained watermelon rind, lemon slices, and maraschino cherries, if desired. Simmer the mixture till watermelon rind is clear. Fill hot jars with rind and syrup mixture, leaving ½-inch headspace. Adjust lids. Process in boiling water bath (pints) for 5 minutes. Makes 2½ pints.

CHOWCHOW
3 large onions
5 green tomatoes, stem ends removed
6 green peppers
2 cups green beans, cut in ½-inch pieces
2 cups cauliflower broken into small buds
2 cups fresh corn kernels
¼ cup pickling salt
3 cups sugar
2 cups vinegar
1 tablespoon mustard seed
1½ teaspoons celery seed
¾ teaspoon turmeric

Using coarse blade of food grinder, grind onions, tomatoes and green peppers. In large bowl combine ground vegetables, beans, cauliflower, and corn. Sprinkle with pickling salt; let stand overnight. Rinse and drain. Combine sugar, vinegar, mustard seed, celery seed, tumeric and 1 cup water; pour over vegetables. Bring to boiling; boil gently for 5 minutes. Ladle into hot jars, leaving ½-inch headspace. Adjust lids. Process in boiling water bath (pints) for 15 minutes. Makes about 6 pints.

JELLIES, JAMS AND MARMALADE: PEACH-CANTALOUPE CONSERVE
3 cups chopped peaches (about 6 peaches)
3 cups chopped cantaloupe (1 med. cantaloupe)
4¼ cups sugar
3 tablespoons lemon juice
one-third cup slivered blanched almonds
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon grated orange peel

In 8 to 10 quart kettle or Dutch oven mix peaches and cantaloupe. Bring mixture to full rolling boil; stir constantly, Add sugar and lemon juice. Bring mixture again to full rolling boil. Boil, uncovered, for 12 minutes. Add the slivered blanched almonds, nutmeg, salt, and grated orange peel. Boil hard, uncovered, till syrup sheets off metal spoon, 4 to 5 minutes. Remove from heat; quickly skim off foam with metal spoon. Pour at once into hot sterilized jars; seal. Makes 7 half pints.

STRAWBERRY BANANA JAM
4 cups prepared fruit (about 1½ qt. fully ripe strawberries and 3 ripe bananas)
2 tablespoons lemon juice (1 lemon)
5 cups (2¼ lb.) sugar
1 box (1-¾ oz.) powdered fruit pectin (Sure Jell)

First prepare the fruit: Crush completely, one layer at a time, about 1½ quarts strawberries. Mash 3 bananas to a fine pulp. Combine fruits and measure 4 cups into a large saucepan. Add lemon juice.

PREPARE JAM: Measure sugar and set aside. Mix fruit pectin into fruit in saucepan. Place over high heat and stir until mixture comes to a hard boil. Immediately add all sugar and stir. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard for 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and skim off foam with metal spoon. Then stir and skim for 5 minutes to cool slightly and prevent floating fruit. Ladle quickly into glasses. Cover at once with ⅛ inch hot paraffin. Makes about 5½ cups or 7 (6 fl. oz.) glasses.

Mothers of Twins are holding annual national convention

The 14th annual convention of the National Organization of Mothers of Twins Clubs, Inc. is being held July 23-27, at the San Diego Hilton Inn, California.

The Dedham Regional Chapter, through its affiliation with National, is represented by its delegate, Mrs. Irving August of Framingham.

Items of business presented to the delegation in attendance at the convention include proposed bylaw changes, reports by members of the executive committee and 1976 convention site selection. Also, club orientated workshops are being held.

Several guest speakers are featured including: Mrs. Dorothy Briggs, author of the book, "Your Child's Esteem-The Key to His Life." Dr. Thomas N. Rusk, medical director of the Western Institute of Human Resources and associate clinical professor of psychiatry at the University of California, San Diego, will speak on "Behavior Training"; and Dr. Herbert L. Collier, psychologist and author of the book, "The Psychology of Twins," will speak on "Teen-Age Years." He is the father of 13-year-old twins.

The National Organization includes 224 clubs in 44 states with over 8000 members. It's purpose is to broaden the understanding of those aspects of child rearing and development that relate especially to multiple birth children. This is done by an inter-change of ideas between parents, doctors, educators, researchers and others with a like experience and similar interest.

Mothers of Twins Clubs also involve their members and children in many research studies through the National Organization such as: the Diabetes Study by the Joslin Laboratories, Boston, Mass.; Twin and Sibling Study conducted by the National Institute of Mental Health; and Hereditary Heart Disease.

Between 400-500 are in attendance at this convention representing Mothers of Twins Clubs across the country.

Ecology House tours aid children

A demonstration of solar heating is an added feature this year at Ecology House in Marstons Mills on Cape Cod.

Designed to conserve landscape and reduce energy consumption, Ecology House has been featured in national magazines and received inquiries from all over the United States and foreign countries. Governor McCall of Oregon and the mayor of South St. Paul, Minn. are pushing for future building in their states, while two-bedroom Ecology houses are already under construction in Kingston, R.I., and Eastham, Mass.

For the second year proceeds from Ecology House tours will be presented by the Friends organization to the New England Home for Little Wanderers. Designer-Architect John E. Barnard, Jr., A.I.A., and his wife Barbara presented a $5000 check to the Home last December.

Friends Chapters throughout the Greater Boston area assist the New England Home for Little Wanderers through fund raising, sewing, knitting and finding families for children at the home.

Officers for the Mother's Rest Club, Newton Chapter 15 are: Mrs. Ross L. Trenholm, president; Mrs. James S. Munro, vice president; Mrs. K.D. Lippincott, treasurer; Mrs. Charles Corkum, corresponding secretary and Mrs. Henry C. Cummings, recording secretary.

Miss Freudberg at music camp

Audrey Freudberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Fruedberg of Aubrundale, recently appeared in the weekly student recital at the New England Music Camp in Oakdale, Me., where she is a camper.

The Friday evening recitals present students in ensemble groups, solos and as accompanists.

The New England Music Camp is a non-profit, educational association dedicated to a balanced summer program of music and recreation for people ages 10-18.

At the camp, Audrey is studying piano with Deborah Moriarty of the New England Conservatory of Music. She also performs in the choir.

At home, she studies with Saul Stern of Newton Centre.

Teaching tools

A number of newly developed teaching tools are available now from the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association.

Included in this series on "Understanding the Lung and Its Diseases" are:

1) A 16-page pamphlet entitled "In Defense of the Lung" featuring electron microscope photographs of the lungs;

2) A set of 13 Electron Microscope Slides of the lungs;

3) A set of twelve 8x10" photographs of the lungs.

The photographs and slides were taken by a new technique developed for the scanning electron microscope, so that three-dimensional surfaces of the non-conductive, soft tissues can be seen.

Persons who might be interested in these items include: physicians, nurses, therapists, science and health educators, occupational health and environmental groups.

For more information people may contact the Lung Association at 326-4081.

City and suburban children at Mt. Ida

For six weeks this summer, a small group of children, 6-10 years old, from various racial, ethnic and social backgrounds, are enjoying a different kind of summer program on the campus of Mount Ida Junior College.

They are enrolled in the Mt. Ida-Roxbury Language Arts Day Camp. The program was begun in 1968 by Mrs. F. Roy Carlson, wife of the college's president. Its primary objective at that time was to be a remedial program mostly for urban children.

The focus of the program has now been extended. It is a cross-cultural program for both urban and suburban children. The number of children enrolled in the program is kept small to enable the adults and children to become acquainted easily and to work on the needs of the children who come as campers.

The children explore various ways of working and playing together in a communications workshop, a multi-media studio, and a recreation program. Workshops give children exposure to the use of various art materials, music, nature and science, animal lore, and simple photography. One of the highlights of the program is exposure to the various cultures the children represent.

The adults in the program also come from urban as well as suburban communities. The workshop leaders for this season are: Mrs. Suzanne Smith, Auburndale, recreation; Ms. Debbie Weisberg, Malden, studio workshop; Mrs. Riga Winthrop, Wellesley, communications workshop.

Mrs. Eunice Perry is director of the program. She is a member of child study department at Mount Ida.

Price of rooms up at hospital

At its April 30, 1974 meeting, the Board of Governors of Newton-Wellesley Hospital approved a room rate increase reportedly necessitated by the combination of a salary adjustment for hospital employees and substantial increased hospital operating expenses.

On July 15, the hospital implemented the approved room rate adjustment of $5 per day together with rate adjustments in selected ancillary services.

Administrative Vice-President William S. Brines indicated that the approved rate increases represented a 4.5 per cent increase in the hospital rate structure. He noted that this adjustment was made as a result of a general salary increase to hospital employees combined with substantial increases in the costs of providing services. Brines noted the spiraling costs of all utilities, disposable items, and medical equipment and supplies in the current fiscal year.

New day care facility in Newton Centre to open so:n

The Newton Day Care Committee has announced the opening of a new day care facility at 80 Cresent Ave. in Newton Centre in the former Sacred Heart School.

Negotiations with the parish of the Sacred Heart have come to a successful conclusion and the center will open as soon as some minor alterations required by the Health and Building Departments of the city have been completed.

The new center will accept children between the ages of two years nine months and six years in its pre-school seciont and children in grades 1 through 4 in its after school department.

Tuition in the pre-school center is $40 a week and in the after school center $25 a week. There is a registration fee of $10. Part time attendence may be negotiated if the registration load permits. The center will be open from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

For further information about program and registration people may call Edith Babkey, director of the Day Care Services, at 969-5907.

The Newton Day Care Centers are sponsored by the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc., a non-profit agency.

A pre-school center has been operated at capacity for the last four years in the United Presbyterian Church in Newton Corner; an after school program opened last September at Pomroy House, and a new unit which includes pre-school children with special needs has just started.

The new opening in Newton Centre is in response to constant community demand for more day care space. It is also a very expensive undertaking for a non-profit agency. The community is therefore invited to support the inauguration of this service in any way possible. There is need for money for the initial staffing, equipment of all sorts, arts and crafts materials, rugs, pillows, games, kitchen and office equipment, small scale furniture.

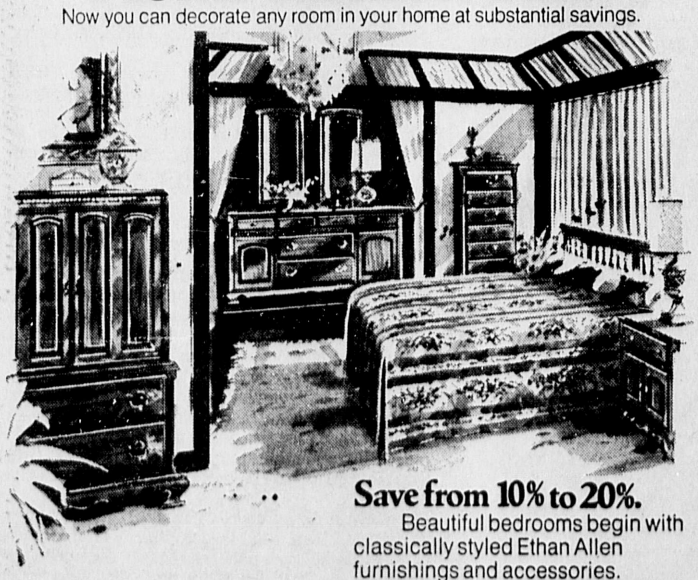

Anyone interested in helping and wishing further information may call Lilo Willoughby at 969-3486.

Songwriters

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — Generations of schoolchildren have been saddened by stories of the penniless Mozart buried in a pauper's grave and Stephen Foster dying destitute while the world played their music and sang their songs.

It couldn't happen here and now. But it isn't because the enlightened citizens of today have acquired the same respect for intellectual property—a symphony or great melody, for example—that they always have had for a table or chair.

Far from it. The United States in some ways treats its songwriters like second class citizens, worse in fact than any other nation of the western community, according to discussions at the International Music Industry Conference (IMIC) here.

Edward M. Cramer, president of Broadcast Music Inc. (BMI), one of the organizations most vigilant in defense of U. S. songwriter rights, said songwriters are still being paid a maximum of two cents per record, a fee fixed by Congress in the Copyright Act of 1909.

That's 65 years without a raise.

"No where else in the Copyright Act," Cramer said, "is there a limit set for anything else."

But that isn't all, he said. Under the same act the 500,000 juke boxes in the U. S. are not required to pay for the music that is their life blood. Then there is the provision that composers need not be paid if a performance is not for profit.

From many examples Cramer mentioned Public Broadcasting, which pays musicians, conductors, technicians, actors but not the fellows who write the music. And the composer receives no money for the use of his film music in motion picture theaters.

Despite all this (and massive piracy of records, illegal photocopying of sheet music and taping of music from radio and tv) some songwriters manage to make a good living.

A lot more could do better.

Cramer's BMI and another great American royalty collection agency, ASCAP, have been fighting a long battle to win for American songwriters all the rewards at home which are automatically theirs in foreign countries.

Cramer said European societies, with which BMI and ASCAP have alliances, are not too happy at what amounts to a one-way traffic in some forms of income. They collect the money earned by American songs in European cinemas and juke boxes and ship it to the U. S.

Transportation report

Will Newton get dial-a-ride?

By MARCIA SMERLING

(Editor's note: The following is an abridgement of a study prepared for the Mayor's Advisory Transportation Committee by Ms. Smerling in a course at a Newton College. Some of the report will be incorporated into a final report to be submitted to the mayor this fall.)

The function of Newton's municipal government is to deliver services to assist its residents to improve their lifestyle so they may travel to work, school, medical facilities and recreation without a dramatic struggle against the elements.

Today, with energy and pollution problems of paramount importance to the community, Newton must address the needs of the city relative to transportation within its borders.

Newton is serviced by intercity transportation modes radiating from Boston. However, access to these arterial transportation lines with Newton is inadequate. Newton must develop a means of facilitating the exchange of social and commercial movement within the city.

The basic problem today is to replace the automobile. The public has been brainwashed since 1920 by the auto industry to use cars, and the federal highway program has built the finest road network in the world. Will the driver be willing to switch the automobile's high service characteristics for mass transit?

Automobiles

In Newton, virtually all travel is accomplished by use of private automobiles, of which there are about 54,000. The total mobility provided to individuals by the car is unsurpased by any other system of transportation. Auto travel is fast, and definitely more reliable, plus being more private and comfortable.

Despite these individual benefits, the automobile extracts a very high social cost from Newton residents. Newton has 301.23 miles of roads. We cannot estimate the per centage that is devoted to parking and support facilities. In addition, automobiles contribute a majority of our total air pollution.

Traffic noise intrudes on many human activities.

Traffic accidents take a substantial annual toll in deaths, severe personal injuries and property damage.

Traffic congestion makes moving around the city an unpleasant chore at times. Cars, not people, seem to dominate much of our community living and activity space.

Finally, the automobile is expensive, costing between $1,000 and $1,500 yearly to run.

Those without access to automobiles—the poor, the handicapped, and the elderly—are deprived of its mobility benefits.

If the emphasis of Newton's public interest can be shifted, increasing the relative importance of public transportation, while decreasing citizen dependence upon the automobile, substantial community benefits may be realized. This change in emphasis can be more readily accomplished if a public transportation system which approaches the automobile in comfort, convenience, reliability and speed can be implemented.

Such a system could follow modified demand-response or demand-adaptable concepts, with the possibility of picking up and discharging passengers all over the entire city.

Demand-adaptive Transportation

Demand-response or demand-adaptive transportation systems, which respond to calls from consumers (such as taxis, dial-a-ride, dial-a-bus, jitney) are simply personalized public transportation services. Typically, a fleet of small vehicles serves customer requests as they are received. There are no fixed routes and schedules.

A customer telephones the local office and informs the operator he wishes to make a trip, giving such information as his origin, desired destination, and number of passengers.

The dispatcher or computer must organize the information and in a few seconds be able to estimate the pickup and delivery time and the cost of the trip and so notify the customer. After the customer boards the vehicle and while enroute, the vehicle will make minor detours to pick up and drop off other passengers. The customer can pay on board or be billed monthly.

Ideally, these systems should complement conventional fixed routes and scheduled systems. In low and medium-density areas, they can provide a total transportation service where conventional, fixed-route buses are not economically feasible. In high-density areas, they can provide feeder service to major transportation nodes and thus fill the existing void between conventional transit and taxi service.

There is little doubt that Newton could utilize either system to transfer its citizens to the MBTA at major transportation nodes, as well as to its many shopping centers and other major activity centers.

Dial-a-bus is one possible demand-responsive solution. The private automobile is the mode over which the user exercises the most direct control. Dial-a-bus is an attempt to create a form of public transit that is controlled by its users, transit that is demand-responsive. It is for this reason that dial-a-bus can compete with the private auto.

Dial-a-bus is demand-responsive in a broader sense. By coordination of requests through dispatchers, traffic may be reduced. In addition to reducing pollution and congestion, dial-a-bus can serve those sections of the population that do not have access to private cars.

Dial-a-bus is basically a hybrid bus and taxi system, designed to fill a need not met by other available transportation modes. It combines the door-to-door flexibility of private automobile travel with the economy of public transit and provides mobility to persons who would otherwise lack the opportunity to travel. It can be grafted onto existing systems either by replacing some bus routes suffering from low patronage or by adding more convenient feeder access to other conventional lines.

Unlike less flexible transit modes, dial-a-bus needs no fixed routes and because small buses or taxis can be used, narrow, winding streets are not out-of-bounds.

There is one segment of the public which is in dire need of transportation—the aged, the blind and the handicapped, who are isolated in, and denied full participation in, the community.

For this group of people, a demand-response system would be a necessity. It could give them the door-to-door service required. The price would have to be reasonable and the vehicle of barrier-free design.

If the demand-response system were to use the present taxi vehicles and maintenance, a computer system would seem to be the only necessary change. Computer costs amount to 5-20 per cent of the cost of operation of demand-response systems in selected community studies.

Taxis

In the city of Newton there are four private taxi companies. The taxis are the last form of transportation running without a subsidy. The MBTA would have to charge $1 per head to operate without a subsidy and to clear its present deficit.

The taxi companies are having a difficult time existing and cannot absorb another operation such as demand-response without a subsidy. Costs would include new vehicles, gas, maintenance garages, insurance, additional employees, a computer system and a myriad of other expenses.

Representatives of the taxi companies have already voiced their opposition to this plan, stating that residents of Newton will not support the system well enough to make it profitable.

In Davenport, Iowa, a city of 125,000 inhabitants with one bus company and one taxi company, the cab company operates a demand-response system with 21 cabs and is heading for 40 vehicles.

The company is installing the largest computer system that can be built for their needs. The computer will search a file for a taxicab closest to the pickup point, the profitability criterion then determining which of several cabs heading in that general direction will gather more revenue per mile by taking this trip.

Demand Response in Ann Arbor, Mich.

Another town which bears a resemblance to Newton's size and population is Ann Arbor, Mich., which has 100,000 inhabitants and a land area of 21.8 square miles. This city is well located with major transportation systems, and is also on the Penn Central railroad line between Chicago and Detroit and within a 20-minute drive to the Detroit airport. The history of Ann Arbor transit system and its location to the inner city is similar to that of Newton.

The city of Ann Arbor offered a comprehensive proposal to local taxicab operators wherein they would contract for operations of dial-a-ride systems on behalf of the Ann Arbor Transportation Authority.

Both taxi companies elected to respond to the proposal and jointly filed for a court injunction against operations of the service. Consequently, the case was heard following a motion submitted by the city of Ann Arbor requesting summary dismissal. The authority proceeded with the plans to operate the system.

If the system is approved the authority must hire and train system personnel, procure a site and build a garage and maintenance facilities, as well as obtain vehicles and other equipment.

As of this writing, there are approximately 20 operating dial-a-ride systems in North America and four in Great Britain. Several more in the United States are known to be planning. All are relatively small systems, with fewer than 10 vehicles.

What Will We Choose?

At last, our environmentalists, municipal officials and urban experts agree that inproved mass transit is one answer to the automobile-associated ills that have been plaguing our society—congestion, pollution, resource depletion and decay of the central cities.

The public would have to be shown that the years of neglect of rapid transit systems, its poor service and deplorable conditions at stations and on vehicles, would vanish forever. Reeducating the public would be costly and would take many years to accomplish.

Is it worth the effort to save energy, have clean air, stop congestion and noise pollution, to have more open space, remove the transportation tax burden on overtaxed citizens, to have fewer traffic accidents, injuries and fatalities?

Three named to key posts at Star Market

The promotion of three employees to key posts in Star Market Distribution and Warehouse Center was announced this week by Richard Johnson, vice president.

Bruno Gianelli of Franklin has been promoted to the newly-created position of meat distribution specialist.

Janice M. Sullivan of Framingham has been named as planning and control coordinator of grocery warehousing.

Robert W. Swanstrom of Melrose has been made shift supervisor in the grocery warehouse.

Gianelli and Swanstrom have been identified with Star Market for more than a decade.

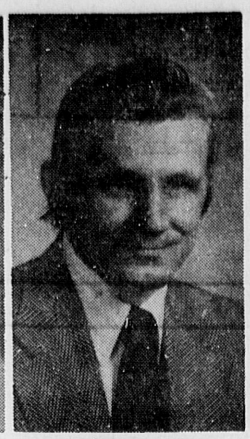

Miss Sullivan, a 1971 graduate in business administration at Simmons College is a product of the Star Market management program. She is a former Star Market service department manager.

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Third baseman Brooks Robinson of the Baltimore Orioles, batting .310 this year, will appear in his 18th consecutive All-Star game Tuesday night in Pittsburgh to tie former Boston great Ted Williams for total games played.

Named manager of Mall at Chestnut Hill

James J. McDonough has been named manager of The Mall at Chestnut Hill, it was announced today by John W. Silva, vice president of C & R Management Corporation, developers and owners of The Mall.

For the past eight years, McDonough has been associated with R. H. STearns Co., most recently as the manager of its store in downtown Boston. Prior to his Stearns association, he was sales manager for Retail Stores with S.S. Pierce Co.

McDonough has been associated with the Chestnut Hill area since 1950, when he became the first manager of the S.S. Pierce store there.

Together with his wife, Christine, McDonough resides in West Roxbury.

Annual pet show in No. Falmouth Aug. 3

Dogs, cata, rabbits and other fourfooted or feathered friends are invited to compete for blue ribbons in the Animal Rescue League of Boston's annual pet show, 10 a.m., Saturday, August 3, at Nye Baseball Field in North Falmouth.

The only requirement for eligibility, according to the League's announcement, is that each participating pet must be accompanied by its young owner — a boy or girl between the ages of six and 15.

In addition to an overall Best of Show award, prizes will be given in nine different pet categories, including one for the best tail-wagger. All dogs must be on leashes, and cats must be on a leash, in a ventilated box or carried in the arms. Chickens, ducks, pigeons, mice, hamsters or other small animals should be in well ventilated cages or boxes that allow the judges a good view of the pet.

Children who wish to enter their pets in the show should bring them to Nye Baseball Field no later than 9:40 a.m. The grand parade of pets will take place at 10 a.m., followed immediately by judging and award presentations.

Board investigates

McDonald's was coming back, but then said he had told Tennant "between June 10 and June 18."

"I told my father that the Board ought to know. It was in the papers — Tennant had some knowledge of McDonald's coming back. He didn't just make a wild guess," Richard Bram said.

Tennant again this week denied that either Bram's father or son had been in his office to tell him about McDonald's, and neither had told him that definitely.

"If they did tell me," Tennant said, "it was quite likely by a telephone call. There was no definite statement that McDonald's was coming back. They must have said there was a 'possibility' that McDonald's was coming back."

The application for the building permit came July 1. Larson said at the July 11 special Board meeting that several aldermen had been informed of the application by July 3.

There was no reason not to issue it, Larson explained, since everything appeared to be in order.

But at the July 18 meeting, several aldermen questioned the propriety of the last-minute changes by McDonald's architect made in Larson's office on July 13, the day the permit was issued.

The on-the-spot changes reduced the seating plan from 168 to 148 seats to avoid the state requirement that call fo special facilities for handicapped persons in restaurants seating more than 150. Larson had, according to McDonald's representatives present, said he could not issue a permit for 168 seats because of the absence of such facilities, but could do so immediately for 148 seats.

Another alleged fault with the permit application was the absence of an affidavit from an officer of the McDonald company, and on that grounds the permit was revoked.

James Kickham, attorney for McDonald's, said Tuesday that McDonald's has not decided on what the next step will be. Last week a McDonald representative said McDonald's "would certainly go to court" to gain the right to establish the restaurant.

Kickham outlined two possible courses — to sell the property or to bring action against the city to obtain the building permit.

Several factors would enter into the decision, Kickham said, including "cost factors" and the probable outcome of a court case, which is being researched now. He expects that a decision on what course to take will be reached within a week or less.

A byproduct of the controversy about McDonald's has been a widening rift between some members of the Board of Aldermen and the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce.

The Chamber's executive board last month approved and disseminated a storngly worded letter in support of McDonald's, taking to task the Board of Aldermen for their handling of the McDonald situation and for their part in causing fear among the business community about the proposed parking requirement.

Ald. Joseph McDonnell, chairman of the Land Use Committee, had earlier made a remark at a Board meeting implying that the Chamber was exerting too much pressure against the proposed zoning amendment, and said, "This is a Land Use matter, not a Chamber of Commerce matter."

Reorganization

of construction of facilities and maintenance of its grounds and buildings, and will have solely the task of creating programs and running the activities within those programs.

Mann's reorganization plan essentially puts like functions together, such as care of land and trees, into one department instead of splitting them up according to department.

The reorganization will cost, according to one calculation in the draft, $16,427 more in annual salaries.

The largest proposed increase will go to Gene Larson, currently the Public Buildings Commissioner at $22,680 a year. As Public Works Commissioner, his salary would be increased to $27,000 under the reorganization.

Other modest salary increases are included, and one salary cut of $880 for the present Street Commissioner, who would become Director of Sanitation.

Two new positions would be created, Deputy Director of Public Works and Director of Parks nnd Grounds, at $20,000 and $18,500, respectively, for which new employees would be recruited.

The net effect of the proposed reorganization would be the deletion of nine and the addition of 10 high-level jobs.

Clerical and other staff positions are not dealt with in the proposal. Present assignments to departments may be changed later, as may assignments to specific locations within departments, as the reorganization itself gets into operation and the final needs of each department are manifested.

After the final plan is submitted by the mayor to the Board of Aldermen, the Board must by charter hold a public hearing on the reorganization within 30 days. Within 10 days after the hearing, the Board must either approve or disapprove the plan.

According to Board of Aldermen President Eliot Cohen, about 25 new ordinances will be required to effectuate reorganization.

Aldermen

vestigate the feasibility of Newton, Waltham and other communities forming an operating, joint disposal district. The RRDD has recently issued a report recommending a short-term disposal method while the district tries to form a larger district that could participate in a regional resource recovery operation.

Although the RRDD has issued several reports, including the comprehensive study by its consulting firm of Camp Dresser & McKee, some aldermen opposed the extension of time for the district because, they said, they did not have enough information on the subject.

The RRDD has been meeting frequently since its start last year.

The extension of time was requested so that the district could help the state in formation of a regional system. According to RRDD co-chairman Ald. David Jackson, the district has been promised minimal financial aid from the state for secretarial and office expenses if the original grant from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency runs out.

The district goes out of existence Aug. 31 if extension is not granted by the Board of Aldermen. Waltham's city council has already agreed to the extension.

McGrath's reconsideration motion will be acted on at the Aug. 12 meeting of the Board.

In other action the Board approved an increase in taxi fares, approved the reappointment of Daniel MacLaren and Willard Pratt to the Newton-Waltham RRDD, and denied a petition to restore Hull Street to two-way traffic.

In spite of midsummer doldrums, the meeting was attended by 22 aldermen. Ald. Matthew Jefferson and Joseph McDonnell were absent.

Tom Etre, normally primary unit coordinator at Franklin School, is presently summer principal at Emerson, where similar programs are run. Emerson has both the ECHO and Boston State programs, and also has junior high and high school students teaching a group of mini-courses. Courses include photography, ceramics, candlemaking, and model railroading. Emerson has also kept a reading lab open for upper grade children. There is an instrumental music program for children in grades one through six.

George slept here

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Do you know that half of George Washington's army stayed behind when he made the famous crossing of the Delaware River because there weren't enough boats?

Or that the Battle of Bunker Hill in Massachusetts actually was fought on nearby Breed's Hill?

With the nation's Bicentennial approaching, Donald Magee thinks the realities of the American Revolution should be made known —and shown —to people.

Magee is coordinator of a summer program at Salve Gegina College, which he said is designed "to take the 'history' out of history books and blow tte dust off our Colonial past.

"Too many people think of history in 'founding father' terms rather than in terms of the real people and issues involved," he id. "We hope to give our stu nts a genuine insight into th personalities — Washington had a terrible temper —and the events of our Revolution by humanizing history."

The four-week course entitled "The Phenomena of a Revolution" includes a schooner trip to Mystic, Conn., and visits to battle sites at Saratoga, N.Y. and Bennington, Vt.

The course will begin with a Revolutionary War musicale of sea chanteys and slave music.

The course is one of 76 major activities sanctioned by the Rhode Island Bicentennial Commission which stands out with conspicuous success compared to commissions in some other states.

Rhode Island is believed to be the only state in the nation in which every city and town — there are only 39 —has a local bicentennial group worcing on activities leading up to the national celebration two years hence.

Breathing problems can cause insomnia

Counting sheep cures some kinds of insomnia. But sleepless nights can be cuased by unrecognized breathing problems, reports the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association.

A sleep researcher at Stanford University, Dr. William C. Dement, said results of his three-year study of 300 patients indicated that as many as one in ten patients with sleep disorders may be suffering from undetected respiratory abnormalities. According to Dr. Dement, difficulty in breathing among sleep-disturbed patients was accidentally discovered less than two years ago by a colleague who noticed that some insomniac patients seemed to have stopped breathing before waking abruptly.

As a result, Dement began to monitor respiratory measures during sleep in a variety of patients with insomnia. In one tenth of his sample, which happened to be all-male, he found this pattern: shortly after the person falls asleep, his diaphragm stops moving; then after 15 seconds to three minutes of breathing problems, he wakes up, breathes deeply, and falls asleep again. "This cycle repeats itself hundreds of times during the night," Dr. Dement said.

An interesting thing about the situation is that these patients report that sleeping pills make their insomnia worse. And their blood pressure rises sharply during sleep. "Since sleeping pills are respiratory depressants," Dr. Dement said, "this becomes perfectly understandable." The doctor advises other physicians not to prescribe sleeping pills to any patients with insomnia unless they first check out the possibility of a respiratory problem.

To find out more about breathing problems, people may contact the Lung Association, a Christmas Seal Agency, at 326-4081.

Students explore Beth Israel

Windsor students tour Beth Israel

With a delightful group of sixth graders from the Winsor School toured the dietary and radiology departments at the Beth Israel Hospital recently, the result was a kid's eye view of the hospital, a perspective worth sharing:

"As I stepped inside the door of Beth Israel, my whole idea of a hospital was changed," said Megan Ryan. "I thought hospitals were cold and unfriendly. Of course, I had been in a hospital before, but only when I was very young. Beth Israel was full of life."

"Our first stop was the kitchen. The tour guide asked up to put on net-like hats for sanitation reasons," Megan said. But classmate Pongi Dabcovitch insisted "We had to put them on because they didn't want us to get hair in their food."

"The kitchen shocked me," Megan continued. "It was huge and filled with busy people. It was divided into sections for special diets such as kosher food, salt-free food and normal food. Do you know why three hours during the day are called 'rush hours'?"

Answering her own question, Megan explained that "one hour before each meal all the workers take a certain food and line up in front of the conveyor belt. Then as menus are presented they glance down to see if their food is wanted and place it on the tray."

"It's very nice that the hospital gives the patient a menu and a choice," Hillary Brown observed.

Sue Silver was surprised that "one man knew exactly how much each meal would cost per person" and "each bit is counted," Tracey Leavitt added.

"I really don't see why people say hospital food is bad," mused Yvette Bigelow, "because it seems quite good."

Agreeing with Yvette, Heather Cook said "the turkey salad, cakes, chicken soup and sandwiches made my mouth water when I saw and smelled them being prepared."

Just as impressive as the look and smell of the food was the kitchen gadgetry used in its preparation including "a giant-sized steam oven and a tremendous garbage disposal that looked as if someone stuffed a fork into it," according to Lisa Sharf, daughter of Trustee Frederick Sharf.

"I like watching people do their jobs right in front of us so we could really see how it was done," said Jane Hunnewell. "It's lucky for the hospital to have so many devoted employees especially to do jobs like spooning jello into dishes or wrapping silverware into napkins and putting them on trays," Hillary Brown said.

In radiology the class was met by Dr. Ferris Hall whose presentation of the "x-rays of little babies and a man swallowing barium," and demonstration of radiologic equipment had every child in the room spell-bound. Even his colleagues who drifted in to investigate the unfamiliar sounds of girlish "OO's" and "ah's," found themselves unable to leave.

After looking at Dr. Hall's x-ray collection, Shannon Johnson got a ride on the x-ray table.

"It looked like a dentist's chair gone 'berzerk'," said Yvette Bigelow. "I really envied Shannon, but I don't think I'd envy a person who had to be on the table for a broken leg or something.

Softball Pitcher Jean Cole of the Troubadour Jesters winds up and delivers in Newton Women's Twilight League action.

Little League teams lose

Newton West and Newton North both lost to West Roxbury teams in the semi-final round of the District XI Little League playoffs last week.

Newton West could get only two hits off of Parkway Central pitcher Tom Murphy and suffered a 5-3 loss. A two-run homer by Roger Carmel provided two of the Newton West runs.

Parkway Central scored two runs in the fourth inning and three in the fifth. Newton West had scored in the first on a passed ball. Carmel's home run came in the sixth inning.

Parkway National hasd 14 hits in a 12-1 victory over Newton North. The winners scored in four of the game's six innings. Newton North's lone run came in the sixth inning when Jim Corsi doubled home Gary Frechette.

Pony League in third season

The Newton Summer Recreation Pony League began its third season in June. The league, directed by Austin Moore, features many talented athletes competing in a 12-game schedule with playoffs.

This year's league is highlighted by some well-balanced competition. The Hawthorn Lakers, "A" Team, the defending champions, coached by Joe Siciliano, is leading the pack at 4-1. A real tough defensive team, it is led on offense by Keith Russell.

Tom McNiff's Our Lady's squad is 3-1. Tony DePasquale has controlled the boards for the Lancers and is complemented by the floor work of Steve Shepard and Dan Taylor.

New league entry Bigelow is 4-2. Coach Ed Hinchey has his team playing aggressive basketball. John Demembro and Kevin Hinchey have played well.

Bob Worden's Newton Centre club, after bowing in its first game two games by two points each time, have rebounded to 2-2. The pressing Centerites are led by Mike Stoller, Andy Linn, Pete Deasy and a fine supporting cast.

Weeks, coached by Ed McCarthy and Warren, coached by Phil Levoff, are 1-3. Brian Kinsella of Warren is the league's top scorer and has really blossomed this summer. Gary Simon has been a standout for Weeks. Hawthorn "B" is 1-4, but improving each game. Steve Burke has paced the attack for the "B" Team.

Games are played every Tuesday and Thursday, 8-10 p.m. at Sacred Heart and Sundays, 6-8 p.m. at Our Lady's. Both churches have been very cooperative in lending their facilities.

City comptroller has good stats

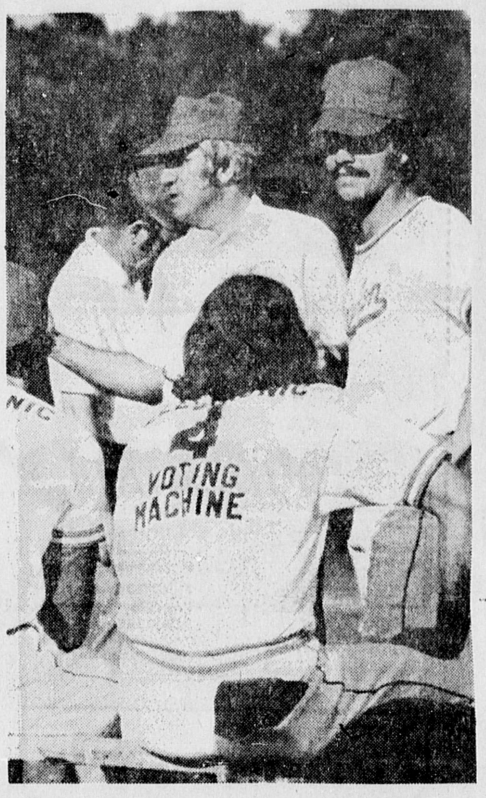

Larry Marino, Newton's youthful comptroller, is equally at home on a baseball diamond or at a computer.

Marino is currently playing in the outfield and filling in occasionally behind the plate for the Newton City Club in the Stan Musical League. His team is in a dogfight for first place with Randolph and the Fucci Club of Waltham.

Day-to-day problems with bond issues, expense sheets, and accounting problems have not dimmed Marino's hitting eye as he is currently batting a heady .380.

The mustachioed Marino has strong baseball credentials, having been the first-string catcher on the 1967 Boston College baseball team which was invited to the NCAA tournament in Omaha, Neb.

When not slashing line drives, sliding into bases, or chasing down line drives, Marino keeps in shape by playing tennis and uskiing.

Newton win streak stopped by Concord

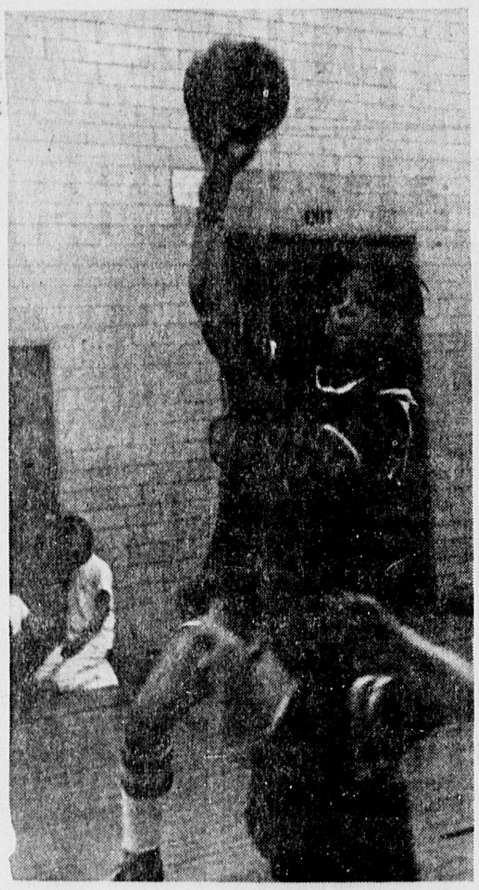

Twice-beaten Concord snapped a three-game Newton Football Club win streak this week with a 2 to 1 victory at Allison Field, Newton.

The two Eastern Mass. Twilight Soccer League teams battled to a 1-1 tie in the first half. After Concord scored first, George Collins tied the game for Newton.

Concord's game-wicning goal came with approximately three minutes remaining in the second half. It followed a series of shots on Newton goalie Gary McGrath. Newton was unable to clear the ball past midfield during the several minutes preceding the goal. McGrath had stopped a penalty kick in the first half.

Newton had several fine scoring opportunities in the game. Both Sid Mazzola and player-coach Skip Stearns came close to scoring. Mazzola and Collins showed deft footwork on offense for Newton.

Newton's record dropped to 3-4.

Taygan wins in Junior Clay Court tennis

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — The top three seeded players all won second round matches Tuesday in the boys 18-and-under division of the National Junior Clay Court Tennis Championships.

Top-ranked Ferdi Taygan of Framingham, Mass., beat David Benson of Englewood, Colo., 6-2, 6-2; second-seeded Bruce Manson of North Holywood, Calif., downed Mark Vines of Richmond, Va., 6-4, 6-3, and No. 3 seed Bruce Nichols of Arizona defeated Cary Leeds of New York City, 1-6, 6-3, 7-6.

In upsets, unseeded Mike Newberry of La Jolla, Calif., beat eighth-seeded Howard Schoenfield of Beverly Hills, Calif., 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, and Chris Delaney of Potomac, Md., defeated the No. 16 seed Harry Wright of Beverly Hills, Calif., 6-4, 6-3.

Yancy to play in Sammy's Open

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Bert Yancey and John Mahaffey have added their names to the list of golfers who will play in the Sammy Davis Jr.-Greater Hartford Open that begins Aug. 14.

Mahaffey, a collegiate golfer who joined the pros in 1971, is ranked 10th in the PGA tour, having earned more than $100,000 in prize money this season.

He won the 1973 Sahara Invitational and placed third in the Walt Disney Golf Classic and fourth at the Kaiser International.

Yancey, a 10-year veteran of the pro tour, won the 1972 American Golf Classic. His winnings so far this year are $55,000.

CLASSIC ENTRIES

SUTTON, Mass. (UPI) — Former PGA champion Dave Stockton, winner of the Massachusetts Golf Classic at Pleasant Valley Country Club in 1971, has joined the entry list for the Pleasant Valley Classic Aug. 1-4.

Marc Picardi gets MVP award

Marc Picardi of 43 Kendall Rd., Newton Centre recently completed his third year at the Ted Williams Baseball Camp in Lakeville, Mass.

Picardi was awarded the most valuable player trophy for his age group, and was chosen to an all-star team for the second year.

In previous years, Picardi received a Ted Williams college scholarship and was awarded a best infielder trophy.

Picardi has played for the Newton South Braves major league team coached by Ed Lafferty.

Pats' promise "competitive" pre-season

AMHERST, Mass. (UPI) — The New England Patriots vowed Tuesday to have "a competitive team" on the field for its first pre-season game despite the NFL players strike, but offered to give refunds to fans who feel they wouldn't be getting their money's worth.

"In view of the impasse that has developed between the NFL and the Players Association, we want to give our fans as much advance warning as possible concerning the status of our preseason games," coach Chuck Fairbanks told newsmen.

"At the same time, I want to impress upon our fans that we will field a competitive team from the athletes we now have in camp for our preseason games. But we feel the refund decision is up to our fans," he said.

The Patriots play their first exhibition Aug. 11 against the New York Giants.

Soccer school

A soccer school for boys 10 to 18 will be held at Brandeis University from Aug. 18-24.

The school will be directed by Newton North soccer coach Mike Buzzi and Brandeis coach Mike Coven.

Soccer clinic

The Boston Minutemen will hold a soccer clinic at Newton South High School on Monday, Aug. 5 from 1-3 p.m. The clinic will be open to any Newton youth.

Diving lessons

Beginning July 29, Gath Pool will be offering diving lessons. Anyone over the age of nine will be given the opportunity to learn anything from a jacknife to a two and a half front somersault.

The first two week session starts Monday, July 29 and the second two-week session starts Monday, Aug. 12. Classes meet every day Monday through Friday.

The class schedule is as follows: 9 a.m., beginner diver; 10 a.m., intermediate diver; 11 a.m., advanced intermediate diver; noon, expert.

Classes will be limited to 10 students and in the event of overcrowding the 10 most promising will be picked. Students may register at the pool daily Monday-Friday.

Chestnut Hill holds golf tournaments for women

Dotty Sternburg and Laura Woodworth combined for an 81 to win low gross honors in a women's member-guest tournament held July 16 at Chestnut Hill Country Club.

Gloria Kolikof and Cathy Sarris shot a 59 for the first low net. Arlene Geller and Stella Myshrall tied with Zelda Rosenthal and Betty Finkelstein for second low net. Both teams shot 62.

Two teams also tied for third low net. Roddy White and Dotty Ash, and Barbara Wortif and Fran Foster shot 64s.

Libbie Lipman was the A Flight winner of a Cup Tournament held in June. Miki Marnoy was the winner in the B flight, Charlotte Rosenberg won the C flight, and Dotty Fox was first in D. flight.

In a spring four-ball tournament, Sylvia Kaufmann and Ellie Sokol were victors in the A flight. Miki Marnoy and Betty Plotkin were winners in B flight, and Ellie Oshry and Marilyn Cohen were first place finishers in C flight. Bernice Snyder and Harriet Grobman were winners in D flight.

Ethel Young had a hole in one on the 17th hole. Ellie Oshry had an eagle on the 14th hole.

Pre-game sales for Lobsters up

Ray Ciccolo, owner of the Boston Lobsters, has been negotiating with prospective investors.

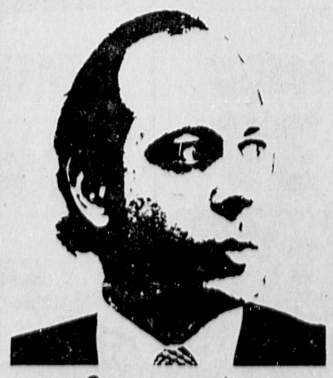

"We have been contacted by several groups who are interested in moving the team to other cities. However, I have no intention of moving one of the league's most succesful franchises out of Boston," explained Ciccolo. "We are talking with people who are interested in participating in team ownership," he added.

Ciccolo noted that this keen investment interest demonstrates the viability of World Team Tennis. Attendance trends are clearly higher for the second half of the season with Lobsters' pre-game sales up 30 per cent from the first half. The Lobsters have sold out for the Philadelphia Freedoms match, Sunday July 28 and anticipate a sell-out crowd for an Aug. 15 match with John Newcombe and the Houston EZ Riders.

Ciccolo is the president and owner of Boston Volvo and Volvo Village, the oldest and largest Volvo dealership in New England. A resident of Lexington, he is also president of the National Volvo Dealers Council and maintains land trust in Florida and Martha's Vineyard.

sports spice

The game's the same but not the names

Commentary by Mark Witkin

A late arrival on the sports scene might conclude that contract squabbles between employers and their hired hands are something new. Yet, we have survived such catastrophes before. In 1934 when Dizzy Dean became the last National League pitcher to win thirty games in one season, he held out for a salary increase halfway through the year.

In sports the terminology might change with the fashions, but the essentials remain the same. A fast ball is still a fast ball, a sore arm still aches; and changes in description are simply old wine in new bottles. Medical science now is no closer to a cure for the common sore arm than it was twenty years ago. In the 1950's though, a sore arm was labeled simply a sore arm and treated with hot linament, rest and an occasional miracle trip to the dentist. The dentist would pull about three of the pitcher's teeth, their eliminating from his "system" the 'poisons' which caused the sore arm.

In the 1970's, however, trainers have enough public relations sense to use the nice scientific sounding word "Tendonitis," and to prescribe treatment, which ranges from ice to acupuncture. Yet, the number of cures seem no higher than before. In fact, the naming of the disease seems to have caused an epidemic. It's almost impossible to read a sports page without being confronted with a medical bulletin indicating "Tendonitis" has struck again. Baseball pitchers, of course, have it in the arm and shoulder. Basketball players get it in the knee. Even racehorses get it in the forelegs, withers, or some such place. Maybe if we stop using the word it will go away.

Science has had other cosmetic effects on sports. The use of the computer to scout new talent has affected its language, as practitioners seem to take refuge in pseudo scientific jargon hoping perhaps that the use of quantitative words will somehow keep errors of judgment to a minimum. Thus, pitchers and their fast balls now possess 'velocity'—as in "That kid's got good velocity on his fast ball." Football players don't block and tackle, they 'execute'—as in "We just didn't execute today." "They just outexecuted us." Punters, of course, don't just punt the ball high in the air, they instead have excellent "hang time."

Football with all its fashionable chatter remains the perfect example that the essential nature of a sport doesn't change with the updating of its jargon. The Miami Dolphin's latest Super Bowl victory was a virtual textbook of how winning football has always been played. Slow motion video taped replays show the opening of holes in the Minnesota Viking Defensive line to be as inexorable as a nature sequence filmed using time lapse photography. The cause, of course, was no modern miracle technique, but simply quick, strong men pushing other slower men to the rear and side while a ball carrier ran past. Nothing new there.

So however crisis ridden the sports page seems to be, any particular crisis has probably happened before in slightly altered form. After all, the more things change the more they remain the same.

Harry Sher honored for years of servce to March of Dimes

Boston philanthropist Harry Sher was honored at the Sidney Hill Country Club, with a dinner in his honor sponsored by The National Foundation of The March of Dimes, for 25 years of devoted service.

Harry Sher

Joseph R. Nee, president of the Foundation, stated that "Mr. Sher has shared in the tragedy of epidemic crises of poliomyelitis, the joys of magnificent accomplishment in the Salk vaccine and, now, hope for even greater conquests are being sought through his dedication and support in the fight against crippling birth defects."

Sher is treasurer of the Massachusetts Bay Chapter of the National Foundation, a post he has held for the past 15 years. He has been an active member for more than 25 years and has held every major office in this local organization. He was also responsible for producing the first TV Auction ever held in this area as a benefit to The March of Dimes.

Rubin Epstein, president of the City Bank & Trust Company in Boston cited Sher for his interest in a "host of charitable causes and an ardent supporter of numerous voluntary health agencies."

Sher has also been an active, important leader in a variety of philanthropic projects, including major gifts and endowments at Brandeis University; leader of The Realty and Bankers Lodge of the Boston B'nai B'rith; YMCA; Boston College; contributor and major fund raiser for The State of Israel. Sher is president of The Banker's Mutual Trust Company, Chestnut Hill, and lives in Jamaica Plain, Massachusetts with his wife Ida.

Women's Lib

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — To further underscore the women's equal rights movement, the University of California has put major emphasis on its Women's Center.

The center, now in its second year, was originated to help women find what they can do best and how to translate their talents into rewarding careers, according to the university.

"Our most important goal is to provide women with enough information so that they have genuine freedom of choice in planning their futures," said May Diaz, the center's director and also a professor of anthropology at Berkeley.

Because they often do not have enough information, women may make decisions that later "lock them out" of opportunities or options," Mrs. Diaz said.

"For instance, if a woman does not take enough math courses early in her educational career, she has handicapped herself for entry into many interesting and well-paid fields.

"Many of the women who come to us have no idea of the options open to them," Ms. Diaz added. "Sometimes it takes a lot of talking before we can help women see what they've really been interested in and what else there is to do.

"We find it very helpful to ask women what they really wanted to do in their wildest dreams. Then we work from there to find practical ways their interests can be used in the job market."

Counseling workshops are offered at the center for women who want to return to school, undegraduates trying to make decisions on career objectives and graduate students.

New look

Artist Louis Salvin of Newton Highlands is the man responsible for the new look of the Boston Red Sox program covers. Salvin said his cover concept "depicts the hopes and dreams of young people" and is also an accent on the youth of the Red Sox team itself. Liaison and technical work was done by another local artist, Dorothy McDonald of Newton Centre.

Ballet enthusiasts to visit New York

Ballet enthusiasts are invited to join a field trip by chartered bus to New York City to see the American Ballet Theatre Company's third act "Sleeping Beauty." This was recently performed by the Metropolitan Civic Ballet Center Company of Newton at Newton's Springthing '74.

Also to be seen on the trip are a full-length "Giselle" danced by Natalia Makarova, "Petrouchka," and "La Bayadere."

The trip, directed by Miss Marcia Jenney of Weston, will leave from the Metropolitan Civic Ballet Center, 417 Lexington St., Auburndale, at Commonwealth Avenue at 8 a.m. Saturday, July 27. It will arrive back in Newton around 3:30 a.m. Sunday.

For $18 the Metropolitan Civic Ballet Center is able to supply a roundtrip bus ticket and a matinee and evening ticket to the Ballet Company. People may bring a lunch or eat in New York.

There will be time for ballet buffs to take a class between the matinee and evening performances, Meals and class are not included in the $18.

Only one bus is being chartered for the trip. Children under 18 will need to pick up or be mailed a field trip responsibility release for a guardian to sign, and all money must be in before the trip to ensure a place.

Interested people may call 969-2135 or write to the Metropolitan Civic Ballet Center, 417 Lexington St., Auburndale, Mass., 02166.

MORE SHELL GAMES

BOSTON (UPI) — Boston University's four-oared women's shell, the national champion, has received an invitation from the U.S. Olympic Rowing Committee to participate in the World Rowing Championships Aug. 29-Sept. 1 at Lucerne, Switzerland.

Theatre group to debut with Simon play

The Ward Street Players have announced that their premiere production will be a Neil Simon comedy, "Come Blow Your Horn."

The show concerns the zany situations that two brothers encounter while trying to live independent lives away from the old-fashioned ideals of their parents.

The cast includes Gary Kaplan as Alan, the older brother, and Kenny Werther as the younger brother, Buddy. The parents will be portrayed by Cheryl Kaplan and David Frutkoff. Two of the females in Alan's life, Connie and Peggy, will be played by Karen Mitchell and Leslie Golov, respectively. The production is under the direction of Andrew L. Golov, currently attending Boston University School of Fine and Applied Arts.

The performances will be given Monday through Thursday, Aug. 12, 13, 14, and 15, at 8 p.m. in the Temple Emanuel Community Hall, 385 Ward Street, Newton Centre.

Tickets can be purchased now, or at the door, the evenings of performance. All tickets are $2 and advance purchases may be made by calling 332-1393 from 3 to 6 p.m. daily. Group rates are available. For further information, people may contact Amy Burack at 332-2955, or Leslie Golov at 965-2039.

Books

Emlyn, by Emlyn Williams. (Viking, $10) The young manhood of the famous Welsh actor and playwright seems almost like fiction out of the last century. In this charming autobiography, he writes with a vitality and enthusiasm about the years 1927-1935 that is almost out of date although certainly mourned by many in these cynical times. But those were marvelous days for the theatrical world with Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Charles Laughton and John Gielgud, among others. A yeasty, spirited entertainment.

Goldman to speak at Underwriters' institute

Yale Goldman of Newton will be the lead-off speaker for the Society of Chartered Property and Casualty Underwriters' "Producer Institute" to be held at the Crown Center Hotel, Kansas City, Missouri, July 29 through July 31.

He will participate with Dr. Hank Scharles, CPCU and Dr. James J. Chastain, CLU, CPCU on a panel entitled "Agency Management-Personnell." Goldman will speak on the hiring and training of employees.

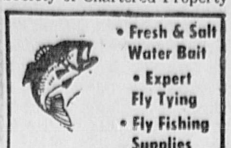

Yale Goldman

The Society of Chartered Property & Casualty Underwriters is a non-profit organization. One of its purposes is to foster the higher education of those engaged in insurance and risk management.

Goldman moderated a seminar in May of 1974 on the subject of liability insurance for the Insurance Agents of Newton and was an instructor, during the fall of 1972, at Northeastern's Insurance Institute. He is a contributor to professional magazines dealing with insurance and risk management, is one of less than 350 individuals in the United States holding both the CLU and CPCU designations, and is one of less than 25 individuals fully licensed as an insurance advisor in Massachusetts.

Born in Boston, Goldman was graduated from Boston University's College of Liberal Arts with a B.A. in chemistry in 1947, has had his own office in Newton since 1957, and has been a member of the National Association of Securities Dealers since 1960. Goldman is married, has two children and has lived in Newton since 1952.

Schell joins Science Center

Don H. Overly and Theodore H. Schell, Washington, D.C., have joined the University City Science Center as co-directors of Washington programs, it was announced by Dr. James L. Gumnick, vice president-programs.

The research specialists will devote full time to Science Center programs and will maintain offices in Washington, Dr. Gumnick stated.

"Don Overly and Ted Schell, who have gained distinction for their excellent research and assessment studies in a wide variety of fields, will provide strengthened capability to the Science Center's expanding programs of applied research," he said.

"In addition to responsibilities for specific programs, they will also devote some time to developing new proposals for research needs. Having these staff members in Washington will enable the Science Center to respond promptly and with competence to the project funding agencies and organizations clustered in the mnation's capital," Dr. Gumnick noted.

As a team, Overly and Schell have designed and carried out research projects in community planning, medical technology evaluation, law enforcement and criminal justice, urban transportation, energy policy analysis and technology assessment and solid wastes and effluents disposal handling.

Since joining the Science Center, they have completed, with other staff members, projects for the States of Michigan and Pennsylvania, the Federal Energy Office and the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. Before joining the Science Center, a science-oriented complex in Philadelphia, they were partners in Overly, Schell Associates which they formed after a four-year association as senior staff members at International Research and Technology Corporation.

Schell, a native of Newton, holds B.A. and M.A. degrees from Johns Hopkins University and in 1970 completed Ph.D. course studies at Brandeis University, majoring in urban politics and social science methodology. He has also taken specializing training in Russian language at the University of Kansas and Leningrad State University.

His areas of expertise include social science methodology and statistics, urban studies, international economics, international and comparative politics.

Stone & Webster picks Thompson

Thomas C. Thompson of 240 Mt. Vernon St., West Newton, has been appointed assistant chief power engineer at Stone & Webster Engineering Corp. in Boston.

Thompson received his bachelor of science degree for the U.S. Coast Guard Academy in 1946 and his master of science degree from MIT in 1957. He is a registered professional engineer in Massachusetts.

Thompson is the vice president of the West Newton Neighborhood Club and president of the MIT Club of Boston. He and his wife Caroline have four children.

Van Londen to manage Sheraton Tara Hotel

John Van Londen has been named general manager for the Sheraton Tara Hotel in Framingham, Mass., a division of the Flatley Company. In his new position he will be responsible for total operation of the hotel complex.

A native of Holland, Van Londen graduated from hotel management school in the Hague, and worked for several years in deluxe hotels throughout Holland and Belgium.

He first visited the U.S. in 1961 on an exchange program sponsored by the Netherlands-America Foundation, receiving American hotel training at the Roger Smith in White Plains, N.Y.

Since he became a permanent resident of this country in 1965, and a U.S. citizen in 1971, Van Londen has been on the staffs of the Americana in New York City and the Senesta in Cambridge, and spent four years with the Sheraton Hotels throughout New England.

Most recently he managed the Sheraton Airport Inn, Philadelphia, which opened in April of this year.

Van Londen plans to make his home in Framingham.

GUIDELINES ON ALCOHOL PROBLEMS

NEVER BIG TROUBLE FOR BEER DRINKERS?

Not true! Beer contains alcohol just as wine and whiskey does. It depends on how much beer you drink . . . how often . . . and how fast.

Beer contains 4½% alcohol by volume; 86 proof whiskey has 43%. Thus a 6-pack actually has little more alcohol in it than a half-pint of whiskey does. Two 6-packs have more than a pint of "hard stuff."

Most beer drinkers do not drink too much beer at one sitting, or drink it at a rapid rate. But, for those who do, kid yourself not . . . there is plenty of alcohol in a 6-pack . . . or in 2, 3, or 4 quarts . . . enough to cause big problems!

Religious educators now approaching theology through reality at Boston College

"When we talk about religious education, we're not talking about memorizing the Baltimore Catechism. We're talking about any kind of education that helps people break out of the Archie Bunker mentality to reach out to a wider family and community," says John R. McCall, S.J., director of Boston College's Institute for the Study of Religious Education and Service.

"What we're trying to do in our program is train people to help others realize that there is more to life than being a proud Irish Catholic from Lawrence, Mass.

Religious education as Fr. McCall defines it seems to be catching on. The Institute, which offers an M.A. in religious education in four consecutive summer sessions as well as a post master's certificate and weekend seminars, is the largest program of its kind in the country with 480 full time and 70 part time students.

About 10 per cent of the participants are lay people. When the Boston College program got off the ground in 1971, there were only six others like it in the nation. There are now about 20.

Scheduled to graduate from the program Friday, July 26, are Sister Barbara Bowe of 860 Beacon St., Newton Centre; Frank McFarland of the Catholic Television Center in Newton and Mary Marcella Shanley of 370 Austin St., West Newton.

The rapid growth of M.A. programs in religious education is in part, a response to the demand for "good modern theology," the "Vatican II kind" on the part of priests, nuns and lay people who have been teaching in parochial and diocesan schools and who feel the need to widen their horizons.

The popularity of the Boston College program may be attributed to what one student calls, "the incredible line-up of people teaching here. You've got the Babe Ruths-Lou Gehrigs and Joe Namaths of theology here. Pick up any one of the theological trade journals, and you'll find at least one article by one of the buys teaching here. It's an all-star cast."

Among the "stars" teaching at Boston College are Avery Dulles, S.J. of Woodstock College, New York, known for his work in the theology of revelation and faith; Richard McCormick, S.J. of Georgetown University an expert in current moral principles and religious education; and Gabriel Moran, FSC, of the New York Theological Seminary, known for his eight books and more than a hundred articles in the area of scripture and tradition.

With more parochial and diocesan schools closing each year, a number of teachers view the M.A. program as a way of recycling themselves for jobs as parish coordinators of religious education.

In some dioceses like that of Green Bay, Wisc., 50 per cent of the parishes now have staff coordinators responsible for organizing programs in religious education for the entire community. And in some parishes across the country the job is paying as much as $15,000 a year.

"We are having no trouble placing people from our program as parish coordinators. There are many more of these jobs available than there are people trained to fill them," McCall said. Apparently, a number of parish coordinators are finding the job a tougher one than they had anticipated. According to Fr. David Kasperek, diocesan director of religious education for Green Bay, who is co-teaching a course in team ministry at Boston College this summer, "Many coordinators are quitting at the end of a year because of the work overload. In addition to running religious education programs, coordinators are finding themselves swamped by other responsibilities such as fundraising, trying to introduce changes in the liturgy, working with the sick and the poor in the parish, and trying to organize adults in the community into social action groups.

"So, what we are trying to do in both Green Bay and in the program here at Boston College is to prepare people to work in teams, carefully delineating what each person wants to do and can do."

The major emphasis of Boston College's M.A. program is the new theology which stresses experience as opposed to dogma, the lived faith as opposed to doctrine.

"A number of our students were shocked by this new theology when they started here, said McCall, "but they aren't any longer.

"In order to change, people have to go through psychological and emotional pain.

Obituaries

Dr. Harvey Shein

Services were held Sunday (July 21) in Providence, R.I., for Dr. Harvey Shein.

Dr. Shein, 41, of 448 Ward St., Newton Centre, died Thursday (July 18) in Newton-Wellesley Hospital after suffering a heart attack at home.

He was a professor of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School and clinical director at McLean Hospital in Belmont.

Educated at Cornell University and Harvard Medical School, he did fundamental work as a research fellow in tissue culture in association with Nobel Laureate Dr. John Enders.

Dr. Shein was the president of the National Association of Residency Training Directors.

The doctor is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elva Shein; a son David; and two daughters, Susan and Elizabeth; his parents, Stanley and Thelma Shein and two brothers, Donald and Richard all of Providence.

Dr. Hyman Shrier

Services were held Monday (July 22) in Brookline for Dr. Hyman Shrier, for many years chief of surgery at Longwood Hospital in Boston.

Dr. Shrier, 72, of 333 Brookline St., Newton Centre, died Saturday (July 20) in the Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for the Aged after a long illness.

A lifelong resident of Newton, he was a graduate of Tufts University and Tufts Medical School.

Specializing in abdominal and gynecological surgery, he cofounded the American Board of Abdominal Surgeons. He was also a 32nd degree Mason.

Dr. Shrier is survived by his wife, Mrs. Pauline Shrier; two sons, David B. of Newton Centre, and Dr. Peter R. of Rockland, Me.; a sister, Mrs. Goldye Leavitt of Lynn and two grandchildren.

Burial is in Rabbi Isaac Elchonin Cemetery in Everett.

Maria Nicolazzo

Mrs. Maria (Scholastica) Nicolazzo, 92, of 655 Watertown St., Newtonville, died Thursday (July 18) in Youville Hospital in Cambridge after a long illness.

Funeral services were held Tuesday (July 23) with a mass in Our Lady's Church. Burial is in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Born in Calabria, Italy, Mrs. Nicolazzo had lived in Newton for more than 70 years and was the widow of Antonio Nicolazzo.

Mrs. Nicolazzo is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Yolanda Pitieri of Watertown, Mrs. Jennie Natale of Newton; three sons, Victor A. of Newton, Albert O. of Watertown, and Salvatore of Wayland; and many grandchildren.

Christopher Marcus

Funeral services were held Wednesday (July 24) at the Greek Orthodox Church in Watertown for Christopher Marcus.

Mr. Marcus, 81, of 32 Newell Rd., Auburndale, died Sunday (July 21) in Waltham Hospital after a brief illness.

Born in Greece, he had lived in Auburndale for the last eight years and was a retired employee of the J. L. Thomson Co. in Waltham. Husband of the late Loretta Marcus, Mr. Marcus is survived by three sons, Daniel and Paul of Waltham and Joseph of Central Fall, R.I.; four daughters, Mrs. Agnes Whitman of Burlington, Mrs. Ruth DiCicco of Framingham, Mrs. Kathleen Berube of Auburndale and Mrs. Mary Baker of Newtonville; 34 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Burial is in Calvary Cemetery, Waltham.

Sidney S. Bronstein

Services were held in Brookline Friday (July 19) for Sidney S. Bronstein.

Mr. Bronstein, 50, of 1388 Walnut St., Newton Highlands, died Thursday (July 18) at his home. A resident of Newton for 15 years, he was assistant manager of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union in Lowell.

A World War II veteran, Mr. Bronstein was a graduate of the University of Massachusetts, president of the Lowell Central Labor Council, past regional vice president of the Jewish Labor Committee, a lifetime member of Branch No. 711 of the Workmen's Circle and an active supporter of Histadrut.

He had served as the chairman of the Ward 8 Democratic Committee and was a founding member of Temple Beth Avodah. He was a past state treasurer of Americans for Democratic Action and a member of the Massachusetts Consumer Association.

Mr. Bronstein is survived by his wife, Mrs. Helen Bronstein; two daughters, Janice and Nancy; a son, Adam; his mother, Mrs. Sarah Bronstein of Chelsea; a brother, Paul of Newton; and one sister, Mrs. Edna Liberman of Chelsea.

Burial is in Chevra Thilim Cemetery of Chelsea.

Daniel Ward

A funeral mass was said Wednesday (July 24) in St. Bernard's Church for Daniel J. Ward, a druggist in Wellesley Hills for 38 years.

Mr. Ward, 73, of West Newton, died Saturday (July 20) in Newton-Wellesley Hospital. His store, Ward's Apothecary, has been in business since 1936.

Mr. Ward lived most of his life in Newton and was a 1922 graduate of the Massachusetts College of Pharmacy. He also studied law and graduated from Boston University Law School in 1933.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Marion Ward; two daughters, Mrs. Ronald Armstrong of Auburndale and Mrs. David Croawford of Woburn; a brother, Alfred of Framingham, and seven grandchildren.

Burial is in Newton Cemetery.

Elizabeth Tully

Elizabeth Tully, 93, of Hopkinton, died last week in Cushing Hospital in Framingham.

Services were held for her Tuesday (July 16) in Newton Cemetery Chapel.

A native of Newton and a long time resident of Newton Upper Falls, Mrs. Tully, while living here, had been an active member of First Methodist Church.

Widow of James E. Tully, she is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Florence Davis, four grandchildren, 10 great-grandchildren and one great-great-granddaughter, all of Hopkinton.

Burial is in the family plot in Newton Cemetery.

Samuel Epps

Funeral services were held in New York City Monday (July 22) for Samuel Epps.

Mr. Epps, 65, of 47 River St., West Newton, died Thursday (July 18).

A resident of Newton for 40 years, he was employed as a chef in West Roxbury.

Mr. Epps is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Epps; a son, Anthony of Florida; a daughter, Mrs. Mary Rolle of New York; and his sister, Mrs. Evelyn Coaxum of New York.

Burial is in Silver Mount Cemetery, Staten Island.

Brand new home at Museum for Spooky, the great horned owl

Summertime, and the living is easy. That's especially true for Spooky the Great Horned owl, who has just moveed into a brand new home at Boston's Museum of Science.

A familiar feathered friend to Museum visitors for the past 23 years, Spooky is settling into a larger, more authentic home in a redesigned live animal area. His new case features floor-to-ceiling glass, a special boon to small admirers who now have no difficulty looking up at the big bird. The dim lighting of the area accentuates the authenticity of the case, conveying the fact that owls are nocturanal creatures.

His realistic pech is a tree branch attached to a simulated tree covered with cork bark. From this vantage point, Spooky spends his days keeping a watchful eye on summer crowds, sometimes descending to the bark mulch floor to take a closer look at the younger visitors.

Spooky appears on stage every day, too, in 15-minute demonstrations that explain more about him and his species.

Is he the epitome of the "wise old owl"? Old he is. In fact, he is the oldest owl known in captivity. (In the wild, an owl's life expectancy is much shorter because of the hardships of survival.)

Excursion train to lake region

A special excursion train to Lake Winnipesaukee in New Hampshire will leave from Boston's North Station at 8 a.m. on Saturday, August 17, for a one-day "mini vacation" featuring a three-hour cruise on Lake Winnipesaukee aboard the M.V. Mount Washington.

The train will have a complete snack bar, a souvenir car and an entertainment car for the convenience of the passengers.

Fares are $20 adult and $16 child under 12 (under five free). For further details please write: M.V.R.S.; P.O. Box 32; Mattapan, Mass. 02126.

Public hearing is scheduled for children's rights July 30-31

The Children's Campaign, a non-partisan campaign for children's rights, is holding a public hearing in Boston at The George Sherman Union Auditorium at Boston University, 775 Commonwealth ave., on Tusday and Wednesday, July 30th and 31st, from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. On Wednesday only there will be an evening session, from 7-9 p.m.

SECRETARY

Instron Corporation is seeking an unusual secretary — one with initiative, follow-through, and the ability to juggle several balls simultaneously without dropping any. This person will perform a variety of secretarial duties for the Product Manager in our Marketing Department. We manufacture precision materials testing equipment, and therefore the dictation involved is of a technical nature.

An additional responsibility will be to coordinate our Customer Training School enrollments. In this capacity you will write confirming letters, arrange hotel reservations, student (customer) dinners, etc. A gracious and poised telephone manner is most important in this regard.

The number of years of experience is not so essential as the right person for the job, although prior exposure to an engineering environment would be an asset. Poise, good judgment, a good head for figures, and above-average secretarial skills are required.

In return, Instron offers a congenial atmosphere and beautiful surroundings in which to work. Our liberal benefits package includes Blue Cross/Blue Shield Master Medical, Company Cafeteria, Company Garage, 10 1/2 paid holidays, Company-paid medical program, and many other benefits. Most important, we offer the successful applicant an opportunity to develop and grow with an expanding and dynamic company.

Family medicine

Recently, while visiting in New York, I was interviewed by a representative of a radio network. In an effort to define for his listeners (and himself) just how the specialty of family medicine works together with the more limited traditional specialties, he asked me what the usual routine was in handling two patients —one with a heart attack and the other a lady with a lump in her breast.

Relating to him the usual routine for such cases, he seemed very surprised that it was not necessary to bring in a cardiologist for the patient with the heart attack.

He was equally surprised to hear that the initial biopsy to determine if the breast lump was malignant would be done by many family physicians, with the surgical consultant being called in only if the biopsy proved to be malignant.

Further discussion showed that he had no idea that half of the babies born in this country are delivered by family doctors. Most pediatric care is done by them, and over 90 per cent of ambulatory psychotherapy comes from this same kind of physician.

Family Doctor Able

After thinking this conversation over, I began to wonder just how many other people really aren't aware of what a great proportion of health care services delivered in this country stem from the family doctor.

Your family physician is capable of handling competently and completely at least 85 per cent of the reasons that people go to doctors. He will not have to call in consultants for this percentage because the care he gives is as good, and often better, than would be obtained from limited specialty physicians.

The remaining 10 to 15 per cent will require facilities or skills which the family doctor doesn't possess. The family physician will refer his patients to the proper physician for the needed treatment.

There are many advantages to the family who receives its health care from a family doctor. First —the doctor who is acquainted with all the members of a family can do a better job of relating the impact of disease in one of them to the health status of the others. As approximately 25 per cent of all doctor visits are prompted by symptoms which are psychogenic in origin, the importance of knowing the entire family is underscored.

Specialist Needs Time

In addition, the family doctor takes care of a family over a period of years and builds up a backlog of information about the family and it's tendencies toward certain types of illness —ulcers, allergies (especially asthma and hay fever), and diabetes, just to name a few. This helps him to watch for symptoms of these diseases and to diagnose them more promptly when they do occur.

A third and very valid reason is that the family doctor will have available consultants in all of the other major specialties should one of those cases arise where special knowledge is required. Usually, this consultant will know your family doctor and will work with him. Your family physician will be informed as to the course of an illness and will carry out the recommended treatment during the convalescent period.

The charges made by a traditional specialist are somewhat higher than those of the family physician. This is because the traditional specialist needs more time to serve those patients with rare diseases. The family physician is able to see more patients in a day and can therefore pro-rate his fees at a lower level.

Is he trained well? The length of the residency training for a family physician is exactly the same as for most of the other major specialties. He has a broader scope of knowledge than does his limited specialist colleague. However, he does not possess the depth of knowledge concerning rare diseases that they have. Since most people don't have rare diseases, this works out well for the patient.

Do you have a family physician? Anyone desiring the names of several in his particular area can obtain a list by writing the American Academy of Family Physicians, 1740 West 92nd St., Kansas City, Mo. 64114.

Books

The Encyclopaedia Britannica" Fifteenth Edition.
Britannica Society, $600.

An encyclopaedia almost by definition includes both less and more than people want to know about a given subject. The Fifteenth Edition of the Britannica doesn't solve that problem, but it goes a long way toward ameliorating it.

Previous Britannicas have simply plunged alphabetically into a vast sea of knowledge, coming up on the opposite shore with the Zs in their mouth. For slightly smoother sailing, there was an index.

The new Britannica comes instead in three sections. First there's the one volume Propaedia, which is translated as "pre-learning." That's the index, in effect—a grouping by general topics instead of along A-B-C lines. There are 10 areas involved—Matter and Energy, The Earth, Life on Earth, Human Life, Human Society, Art, Technology, Religion, The History of Mankind and the Branches of Knowledge.

Next comes the 10-volume Micropaedia, an encyclopaedia in brief with no entry longer than 750 words, invaluable for quick reference but without more scholarly wordage.

Finally, there's the 19-volume Macropaedia, with long and surprisingly well written articles for whose who want considerable information.

The convenience aspect is obvious—if all you want is to clarify just where the third pharaoh from the left fits into the general picture of Egyptian history, the Micropaedia is for you. If you want to learn about the theory of number in readable style but with scholarly detail, go to the Macropaedia.

Recreation notes

Adult tennis tournament to begin on Aug. 5

ADULT TENNIS

The city-wide adult tennis tournament sponsored by the Newton Recreation Department for Newton residents only, will begin on Monday, Aug. 5.

Registration for the tourney will be held at the Burr Park Field house between 6 p.m. and 8p.m. from July 24 through Aug. 1. Those who sign up should report to Burr Park on Aug. 5 for the schedule of courts and pairings. There will be singles and doubles competition for both men and women entries. There is a $2 fee for each event and players should bring three new tennis balls.

The matches will be played evenings at courts designated by the tournament director. There can be no postponements, or switches, except those forced by inclement weather.

No player who holds a ranking from the New England Lawn Tennis Association, or who has won any of their sanctioned tournaments will be eligible for this Newton tournament.

FIELD TRIPS

Field trips play a large part, in the Recreation department's summer program. Since the opening of the Bowen School Day Camp the first of this month, campers have been on the go. They have gone to the Larz Anderson Park, the Children's Museum, bowling and "out to eat." Trips planned for the remainder of the season include a cruise and picnic in Boston Harbor, a visit to the Children's Zoo, the Aquarium, an auto museum, and an ice cream factory.

Staff members include, Elinor Weiner, Janet Kaufman, Leslie Chin, Bob Meek, Rochel Schneider, Marcia Stein, Bill Henderson, and Lynne Blackman. They are assisted by volunteers, Leila Brandwein, Susan Carr, Susan Shapiro, Joan Flannagan, Joyce Ulder, Teresa Nazzaro, Michele Gittens, Marilyn Levine, Liza Dunders, Lisa Unina, Rebecca Abrams, Audrey Gannet, Ruth Ann Schill, and Susan Lerbinger.

The campers also take part in a swimming program at Crystal Lake three mornings a week. This includes Red Cross swimming instruction.

MASON-RICE CAMP

Last Thursday, Mason-Rice campers went to the Brigham Factory in Arlington, and the previous Tuesday, went to the McDonald's restaurant in Brookline. Thet have also gone to Natick for a day's bowling at the Fairway Bowling center.

In addition to crafts programs and recreation activities, the Mason-Rice campers also swim at Crystal Lake a few days a week.

AUBURNDALE PLAYGROUND

Some 95 children and parents recently spent a day at Lincoln Park in New Bedford where they enjoyed the rides, amusements and refreshments. The group was accompanied by Director James Ryan, Kathy Sweeney, Ed Barry, and Diane Astone.

HAMILTON SCHOOL

A morning of bowling, miniature golf and roller skating was the program for 45 Hamilton School children and leaders who went to the Wallex Recreation Center last Friday. Director Ed Carey is assisted by Sue Ekizian.

FRANKLIN SCHOOL

A recent Jazz Concert by the Newton High School Jazz Ensemble, under the direction of Tommy Leonard, at the Franklin School was attended by over 200. Following the concert, the summer film program continued with several Charlie Chapiin classics.

NATIONAL LEAGUE BASEBALL

The National League was to begin its playoffs this week. Three out of five series will be played by the top teams. Leaders are the Newton Boys' Club, St. Bernard's, Newton Centre and the Matthews Club.

DRAMA PROGRAM

Mrs. Marilyn Karssin, a drama specialist, will visit Newton playgrounds from 9:30 to 11 a.m. Monday through Friday. Playgrounds already scheduling the program, include Newton Centre, Boyd and Memorial. Mrs. Krassin works with the children on improvisations, mime and TV commercials.

July 30, Emerson School, 2 p.m., puppet show and demonstration by Eleanor Boylan; July 26, Albemarle Playground, 2 p.m., Newton High Jazz Ensemble; July 25, Franklin School, 10 a.m., children's illustrated workshop by David White; July 31, Albemarle Playground, 8:45 - 10 p.m., "Music Night" featuring a film program: "Bolero", "Roberta Flack" and "Street Musique."

Hospital to soon have hemodialysis service

Hemodialysis service for acute kidney failure patients will soon be available at Newton-Wellesley Hospital following receipt of a certificate of need from the Department of Public Health. The acute dialysis capability is located in the hospital's Usen Intensive Care Unit.

Hemodialysis services will be provided for the following categories of patients: acute renal (kidney) failure patients, chronic patients during a period of acute hospitalization, and initial chronic dialysis during a medically unstable period prior to a patient's placement in a chronic dialysis program.

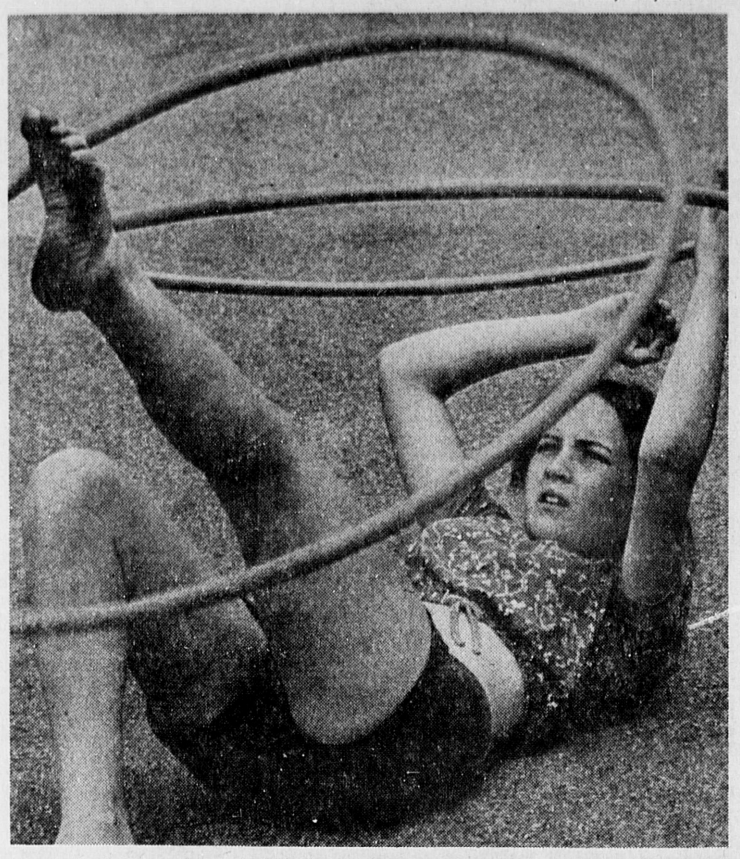

Serving a population of 130,000 residents in the Newton, Wellesley and Weston communities, the hospital anticipates that the hemodialysis program will assist patients primarily from this area and contiguous communities.

Reportedly, no other facilities currently exist to meet the needs of acute renal dialysis patients in the western suburbs.

The initiation of the acute hemodialysis program at Newton-Wellesley Hospital will mean that hemodialysis patients will no longer be forced to leave the community for care. Rather than being transferred to a Boston facility, they can receive treatment within their community.

In addition, acute dialysis capability at Newton-Wellesley Hospital means that physicians will have an alternative to the peritoneal dialysis technique. Hemodialysis generally is preferable to peritoneal dialysis.

The program is under the medical direction of kidney specialist, Dr. Henry Yager, chief of nephrology.

Boys and girls vie for hula hoop and frisbee titles

The Newton Recreation Department's annual Hula Hoop and Frisbee Championships were held at Dickinson Stadium in Newtonville on July 18. Playground winners from throughout the city competed in both events. The competition was so close that wo events ended deadlocked, necessitating playoffs.

In the Frisbee competition, Jimmy Schmidlein continued a family tradition by taking the City Championship, edging out Kenny Rubin in the boys event. Jim's two brothers have gone on to the national finals in recent years, one becoming the national champ, and the other the runner up. Newton's girl frisbee champion is Carol LeConti. Second was Sue Bontempo.

The Hula Hoope competition was fiece with Mark Torchia and Jeff Sampson forced to a playoff in the boy's event. Torchia was the winner. Not to be outdone, the girls also were tied at the end of the regular competition. In a playoff, Karen Torchia defeated Wendy Murphy by a single point to take the title.

The Hula Hoop winners will report to French's Common in Braintree at 1:30 p.m. on July 25, while the Frisbee champs will report to Lynch's Park in Beverly at 1:30 p.m. on August 5.

Plyground champions who competed in the city-wide frisbee events were Mike Bauchan, Franklin; Carol LeConte, Franklin; Joanne Nastantuono, Burr; Tara Arthur, Hyde; Marc Abend, Highlands; Tom Irvine, Thompsonville; Mark Torchia, Wellington; Jim Schmidlein, Angier; Heide Maguire, Angier; Randy Wong, Newton Centre; Sue Bontempl Stearms; Cindy Kelly, Burr; Dave Birmingham, Richardson; George Garabedian, Burr; Mike Duffy, Richardson; Mike Caira, Stearns; Laura Lupien, Emerson; Debbie Simmons, Newton Centre; Ellen Claflin, Newton North High; Kenny Rubin, Newton Highlands; Mark Boudreau, Burr; Frank Brilliant, Newton North High; Steve DeLacy, Hyde; Coleen Crowley, Upper Falls; Diana Prioa, Cabot; Chuck Venetian, Cabot; Mark Sampson, West Newton and Allen Stern, Upper Falls.

Hula Hoop playground champions were, Cheryl Brashcars, Stearns; Angela Dea, Memorial; Kathy Medaglia, River Street; Cathy Sotir, Cabot; Stephanie Stoyanoff, Burr; Maureen Morales, Hamilton; Wendy Murphy, Warren; Karen Torchia, Wellington; Cindy Lancilotti, Franklin; Lynn DeDoming, Newton Centre; Tara Arthur, Hyde; Wendy Irvine, Bowen; Joan Crowley, Upper Falls; Emanualla Corcio, Emerson; Jenny Lees, Burr; Wendy Simmons, Richardson; Heidi Maguire, Angier and Linda IKRVINE, Thompsonville.

Also, Phil Vaglica, Cabot; Richey Delcambro, Angier; Ken Klebenow, Richardson; Paul Dugan, Hyde; Larry Abend, Newton Highlands; Jeff Sampson, West Newton Common; Paul Verardi, Burr; Mark Torchia, Wellington; Bob Bernard, Franklin; George Stoyanoff, Burr, and Robert Simmons, Newton Centre.
